OFF TEXADA ISLAND IN STRAIT

66 Rescued From Blazing Ship

SMOKE streams from crippled cruise ship Meteor as she lies a mile southeast of Hornby Island this morning with a list of about 25 degrees. All 66 passengers were evacuated by lifeboat after fire broke out about 3 a.m. but there is possibility some crewmen are dead. Photo was taken exclusively for the Times by local pilot Roy Parrett.

13 Crewmen Feared Killed

All 66 passengers were reported removed safely from the Norwegian cruise ship Meteor today while the crew fought a stubborn fire which broke out aboard the 300-foot vessel in the Strait of Georgia 100 miles north of Victoria.

Search and rescue officials said the Alaska state ferry Malaspina had picked up 66 passengers and all were accounted for. Officials said the 2,856 ton vessel has a crew of 91.

An injured crewman said that while all passengers apparently are safe there may have been as many as 13 of his fellow crewmen killed by two explosions which preceded the fire.

There was no confirmation of his statement.

The Meteor radioed for help after the fire broke out about 3 a.m. — seven hours before it was due to arrive at Vancouver on a cruise run from Alaska.

Bob Van Rassell, spokesman for Star Bulk Shipping Co. Canada Ltd., the Meteor's agent, said the passengers were booked through Northland Tours of Seattle and most of them were American citizens.

He said the ship was on the first of about 16 summer cruises to Alaska this year. Its last stop before the fire was Petersburg, Alaska.

Passengers were put into lifeboats and the Malaspina, one of several ships answering the distress call, picked them up and took them to Vancouver.

The rescue operation was carried out in calm seas with only a slight breeze.

Most of the Meteor's crew were battling the fire and helicopters from 442 Squadron, Canadian Forces Base Comox, on Vancouver Island, shuttled firefighting equipment to the ship.

The burning vessel was listing about 10 degrees to starboard. It was located off Gillies Bay on Texada Island, on the mainland side of Georgia Strait.

In addition to the Malaspina, the tug Island Prince, the tanker B.C. Standard and two Canadian Coast Guard cutters all responded to the call for help.

"We were about five miles away when we received her distress call and arrived there about half an hour later," said an officer on the Malaspina, which was northbound to Alaska from Seattle.

"We had the passengers and four crew aboard within two hours. They lowered the passengers in their lifeboats, and we lowered ours, and they came aboard that way."

Search and rescue officials said the fire appeared to be confined to forecastle of the Meteor. The ship lost power and steering.

PREMIERS' CONFERENCE

Name of Game Image-Boosting

By BRUCE YEMEN

The extra sense of urgency expected at the constitutional conference here next month won't necessarily reflect a growing fear for the future of Canada.

It may reflect a growing fear on the part of several provincial premiers for their own political fortunes in the months ahead.

Use Public Stage

More than ever before, the premiers will be tempted to use the public stage provided by this constitutional conference to engage in national image-boosting to help them at home.

At least four provinces — Ontario, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Newfoundland — are expecting elections this year.

The pressure to be "political" rather than "statesmanlike" will weigh heavily on premiers Davis, Strom, Thatcher and Smallwood.

But the temptation, which has cast shadows on the bright hopes for the conference, is also being felt by other premiers.

Premier Bourassa of Quebec has already indicated he will try to use the June 14 to 16 conference to show that he is his own man, not a subsidiary of the Trudeau Liberals.

Premier Schreyer of Manitoba has made it clear that his province faces a sharp tax increase next year unless a better financial deal can be made with Ottawa.

B.C.-First Policy

Premier Bennett of British Columbia says he will put forward a B.C.-first policy at the conference, which won't surprise anybody.

The prospect for unusually tough talking all around the conference table is heightened by the continuing economic difficulties in Canada.

The opportunity for provincial premiers to belabor Ottawa for its anti-inflation policies will be too golden to be missed.

A further complication will be provided by the federal budget, expected some time in June, charting the course of tax reform.

If it comes out before the conference, it could create a major diversion from the tasks at hand. But if it doesn't come out before the conference, many premiers will feel hamstrung in discussing basic fiscal matters.

The prospect that politicking could scuttle a tentative agreement on a contifitution amending formula has caused gloom in Ottawa.

The formula, requiring six provinces of the 10 to agree on constitutional changes, gives both Quebec and Ontario a veto by virtue of each having more than 25

Next Battle on Home Front In Britain's ECM Hopes

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

PARIS (AP) — The leaders of France and Britain face some fierce opposition at home to their hard-won agreement paving the way for British entry into the European Common Market.

But after demonstrating solid friendship in their two-day summit parley, President Georges Pompidou and Prime Minister Edward Heath were reported confident today they would override domestic criticism of their pledge to work together for a united Western Europe.

Britain's parliament seemed the most likely place for a battle over the understanding reached between the two leaders that included removal of the long-standing French veto against British entry into the Market.

Among Britain's governing Conservative and opposition Labor parties, there are scores of legislators sworn to block their country's entry into the European economic community.

They reason joining the Market would cost Britain much more than it would earn. And if the findings of pollsters are significant, the weight of popular opinion also seems to be against membership.

Opponents also may question Heath's promise to discuss "in a European spirit" Pompidou's demand that the British pound sterling system be adapted to Market aims. This would mean ending the pound's role as an international currency.

Commonwealth and other countries that keep millions of pounds in London banks probably would demand ironclad safeguards against loss through any such changes.

In France, Pompidou may be assailed by followers who remain faithful to the beliefs of the late president Charles de Gaulle. They would argue that there is no new evidence to show Britain has suddenly assumed the European point of view de Gaulle said, it lacked.

Quebec Immigration Function Draws Blast From Bennett

Premier Bennett was sharply critical Friday of an agreement allowing the province of Quebec to assign its own officers to Canadian diplomatic posts overseas for immigration purposes.

Expressing "alarm and grave concern" at the recently announced agreement between Ottawa and Quebec, Bennett said in a written statement:

"Immigration is the constitutional responsibility of the Government of Canada. One of the privileges which a resident of Canada has is to move freely throughout the country and to take up residence anywhere he wishes within the country.

SPECIAL STATUS

"That being the case, why should one province — Quebec — have the right to be involved in immigration?" the Premier asked.

"It is special status of the worst kind and I understand the document has all the trappings of a formal treaty between two sovereign states.

"It is an unprecedented action and undermines our federal system which is designed to treat all provinces and the federal government as equal partners."

The agreement gives Quebec the right to set up two-person offices within federal immigration offices abroad so that the province's advantages can be presented to prospective immigrants by a Quebec orientation officer.

The 10-page entente at one point says:

"The furnishing and equipping of the space allocated to the Quebec party shall be its responsibility, but shall be neither inferior nor superior in quality to the standards established by the government of Canada, taking into account the rank of the occupant."

In the agreement, Ottawa is known as the Federal party and the province as the Quebec party. The protocol is as replete with hereinbefores and hereinafters as international pacts.

Some other points in the agreement:

IT JUST COULDN'T —BUT IT MIGHT!

While the holiday weekend weather in Greater Victoria got away to a glorious start, there are clouds on the horizon.

It will be cloudy with a few sunny periods Sunday with west winds to 20 miles an hour rising in the afternoon.

As for Monday and the big parade, it just might rain.

IRISH TERRORISTS ACTIVE WITH AMBUSH, BOMB, GUNS

BELFAST (AP) — Gunmen ambushed a British army jeep today and shot and seriously wounded the driver on a main highway leading to this Northern Irish capital.

The attack came only hours after another British soldier was slain in the heart of Belfast by terrorists who escaped in the maze of narrow streets in a Roman Catholic district, and in another incident, terrorists bombed a village dance hall, wounding 20 revellers.

The army jeep was fired on by gunmen in a speeding car. Their car was later found blown up six miles away from the attack in Lisburn.

preferably adjoining, and identified only by the inscription: 'Agent d'orientation du gouvernement du Quebec."

—"Neither the personnel of the Federal party nor the personnel of the Quebec party shall have access to, or make use of, information or instructions intended for the exclusive use of the personnel of the other party."

—"Personnel of the Quebec department of immigration shall in their private conduct and in their professional or social activities conform to the standards governing the conduct and activities of the federal personnel of the mission."

—"If a member of the Quebec personnel fails to comply with these standards the head of mission may intervene, and his decision, which can be appealed to the two parties to the agreement, will be enforced in the interim."

OPEN OFFER

Immigration Minister Otto Lang told the Commons Wednesday that other provinces can get the same treatment as Quebec.

Which raises the possibility of 10 two-room provincial offices within federal immigration offices abroad.

The Ottawa-Quebec agreement sets out that after an applicant is accepted for entry to Canada by the federal visa officer he can be steered in the direction of the Quebec orientation officer.

Quebec has its own immigration office in Paris. But it wants space in federal immigration offices in, for a start, Athens, Beirut, Brussels, Lisbon and Rome.

. . . PREMIERS TO MEET

per cent of the national population.

Agreement on feasibility of the amending formula and patriation of the British North America Act was reached at the previous constitutional conference in Ottawa in February.

This was hailed as a breakthrough by Prime Minister Trudeau. The Victoria conference was touted as a potentially historic conference which would in effect "father" a new constitution for Canada.

But both Quebec and Ontario have since warned they won't allow the constitutional baby to be born unless they get some advance concessions on how it will be raised to maturity.

Quebec wants control of income security programs and has hinted it might support the proposed amending formula in exchange for that power. But it's only one of several constitutional areas in which Quebec wants guarantees of sovereignty.

Ontario's new premier, William Davis, has taken a much harder line than his predecessor, John Robarts. The Davis government has warned it might block the formula until it gets a better fiscal break.

Premier Bennett says he doesn't agree with the tactic of threatening to stall agreement on an amending formula to gain other goals.

But Bennett does sympathize with Ontario's position as a rich province whose financial resources are being funnelled by Ottawa into Quebec.

This attitude combined with Bennett's oft-stated view that this is no time to be talking about the constitution anyway could lead him into an alliance of sorts with Ontario's tough-talking Davis.

There will be pleas from Ottawa for all provinces to agree on the amending formula as a single, practical example of constitutional progress.

Justice Minister John Turner has said in cross-country travels that such progress must be made to demonstrate to the "moderates" in Quebec that federalism is sufficiently flexible to accommodate the province's needs.

But many of the politicians, apparently sensing a public mood of frustration with unemployment, are behaving as if they aren't quite sure whether it would be politically wise to make constitutional progress at this time.

The agenda for the meeting will likely be announced a few days beforehand by the prime minister. He has said he wouldn't mind extending the talks to discuss economic issues.

Biggest Source of Concern

Perhaps the biggest source of concern at the moment is the new attitude of the Ontario government, which in recent years has submitted willingly to the role of wealthy relative to the poor-cousin provinces.

As the largest of the three provinces that receive no federal equalization payments — Alberta and B.C. are the others — Ontario is a vital source of tax revenue for Ottawa distribution.

By carrying out its threat of opting out of a number of shared-cost programs, Ontario could undermine the fiscal strength of the Canadian nation.

Premier Davis by no means has the full support of everyone in Ontario, where there has been much pride taken in the avoidance of the provincialism that some other provinces have pursued.

As the new boy at the conference, Davis can expect to hold a big share of the spotlight and Premier Bennett, as the host premier, can also look forward to a greater role than he has commanded at past conferences.

Ultimate Veto to B.C.

Bennett supported the amending formula devised at the Ottawa conference, saying it would give fast-growing B.C. an ultimate veto along with Ontario and Quebec.

Until B.C. reaches 25 per cent of the population, however, it is protected to a degree by the formula's requirement for at least two western provinces having at least half the western population to approve constitutional changes.

It also calls for two of the four Atlantic provinces to agree to any changes.

But the formula isn't the only achievement of the Ottawa conference that could be delayed or even scuttled by a breakdown in the Victoria talks.

Entrenchment of fundamental rights in the new constitution, formal protection for English and French as official languages and a higher status for the Supreme Court of Canada — removing it from under the wing of Parliament — were also tentatively included in a framework of agreement at Ottawa.

August Conference

Many of the issues to be discussed at the constitutional conference will undoubtedly be further aired when the annual premiers' conference is held here in mid-summer, likely in August.

All told, Victoria will be the scene of much political dealing and national soul-searching in the next few months.

It remains to be seen how much of the action will take place in public before the television cameras — the premiers will decide that.

But even if a large part of the drama takes place behind closed doors, it's certain the public will hear all about it later from hard-pressed politicians in a big year for image-making, not to mention nation-making.

SURPASSING A TARGET of 240,000 man-hours without a compensable lost time injury has earned the provincial government's department of municipal affairs a safety award from the Workmen's Compensation Board. Presentation was made by WCB commissioner R. B. Carpenter (right), to J. D. Baird, deputy minister. (Don Ryan Photo.)

IN FULL COSTUME standing with two of his sons, is Chief Dan George, North Vancouver Indian who was nominated for Academy Award for performance in movie Little Big Man. George will open Stsamis Indian cultural festival Monday night with former Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes. Festival will be held at Macaulay Point through May 29.

Pierre Pilots Shaky Flight Over Russia

TASHKENT, U.S.S.R. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was his own pilot for a slice of the journey today from Kiev to Tashkent, where he arrived in late afternoon to continue his tour of the Soviet Union.

Pool reporters aboard the huge Ilyushin 62 jetliner which brought Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau here said there was a noticeable flutter in the plane's flight a few minutes after Trudeau took the controls.

However, the deviation was swiftly corrected and Trudeau went on to pilot the Aeroflot jet fairly smoothly for about 15 minutes.

At one point he executed a 90-degree bank to the right which caused a sharp descent of perhaps 200 feet.

FOUR-HOUR FLIGHT

Otherwise, the four-hour flight from Kiev in the Ukraine to this capital of the Uzbek Republic in Central Asia went off without incident.

A small crowd turned out at Tashkent's airport in 90-degree weather to greet the prime minister and his party. Many waved Canadian and Uzbek flags. Trudeau and his wife smilingly shook hands with some of them.

Later, Trudeau conferred for an hour with the Uzbek premier and after that he was slated to attend a ballet performance.

Sunday, the prime minister planned to make sightseeing tours of Samarkand, seat of the 14th-century empire ruled over by the conqueror Tamerlane, as well as Tashkent.

Two Injured In Auto Crash

Two young girls are in hospital — one in fair condition — following a one-car crash early today in the Cordova Bay Road area.

Saanich police said the girls were the occupants of a car driven by Mark Roseborough, 4938 Sea Ridge Drive.

Their names will not be released until relatives are notified. They are from out of town.

Police identified another occupant of the car as Ian Soper Harvey, no address was available.

Roseborough's car went out of control along Cordova Bay Road past Mount Douglas Park, police said, and piled into a rock bluff.

The girl in fair condition, whose age was given as 17, suffered head and chest injuries, while the other girl received facial and rib bruises.

Their companions were treated in hospital and released.

A BIT PECULIAR? PRIZE AWAITS IT

Is there an animal in the house that looks a bit peculiar?

If so, send him to the annual SPCA junior pet show, June 5 — he will likely win a prize.

One hundred and fifty first prizes will be awarded to dogs and cats including those with the longest hair, shortest hair, longest tail, shortest tail, longest ears and longest whiskers. There's even a prize for the best-looking dog or cat "that has not yet won a prize."

Birds, turtles, horses, rabbits, hamsters and guinea pigs will be judged on size and care. Even gerbils and mice have a chance at taking home a prize.

It's an open show, beginning at 9 a.m. at the Victoria Riding Academy, 2301 Cedar Hill Cross Road that costs only a quarter. Judging will start at 10:30 a.m.

Officials request that small pets be carried in baskets or cages when riding the buses between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.; no puppies or kittens under the age of six months be entered; all dogs be on leashes and smaller animals be in a cage or basket; and that only one animal per person be entered.

Before the Judge

Douglas Wayne Elliott, 20, of 983 Ambassador, was fined $350 in court by Judge William Ostler when he pleaded guilty to being in care and control of an auto while impaired.

Court was told that the accused was found in the driver's seat of a car with two other people on Prospect Lake Road about 11 p.m. May 20. The keys were in the ignition of the vehicle but the engine was not going.

Elliott's blood-alcohol content at the time was .19 per cent.

Ostler suspended the man's licence.

Andrew Joseph Ouellette, 32, of 805 Hutchinson, was fined $350 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for impaired driving.

He was prohibited from driving for four months except on business.

Esquimalt Residents Warned Against Active Cat Burglar

Esquimalt police have warned residents that a cat burglar is on the loose in the area and advise extra care in locking doors and windows.

Ten homes and apartments have been robbed in the last two weeks and police attribute the work to one man, working at night.

The thief has struck mainly at ground-floor or basement apartments and homes, removing window screens and entering through unlocked doors.

So far, he has taken only money — removing wallets from trousers while residents are in bed in the room.

Police say the thief, who they describe as a young man with dark clothing, has concentrated within three blocks of Esquimalt Road on streets like Fernhill, Lyall and Rockheights.

In two cases, residents awakened to find the burglar in their homes but both times he made a successful escape.

The burglar has taken over $300 so far, police say, and urge caution in dealing with the man.

They suggest that residents report any suspicious noises or persons and that all doors and windows be kept locked at night.

Defection No Knockout —Greene

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The Liberal party would be "deluding" itself if it thought the defection of Paul Hellyer and others from party ranks "wasn't something we have to recover from," Energy Minister J. J. Greene said Friday.

"I don't believe it's a knockout blow by any means," said Greene in an interview. "I don't think any of them (the defectors) . . . are strong enough to sink the ship, but they have certainly rocked the boat a little."

Greene, campaigning in the federal riding of Brant for the Liberal candidate in a federal byelection May 31, was commenting on Hellyer's announcement Friday he was quitting the Liberal caucus to form a new party.

He suggested that Hellyer, who lost out at the 1968 party leadership convention to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, had decided the only way to become a party leader "is to go out and form a party on your own."

Hellyer was the third Toronto MP to bolt the party. Perry Ryan now sits as a Progressive Conservative and Philip Givens announced earlier this week he will give up his seat to run in the next Ontario election as a Liberal.

Victoria Group Delights Audience With Theatre Canada 71 Presentation

By KATHY DENMAN

OTTAWA (CP) — A well-received change in tone was set at Theatre Canada 71 presentations Friday night by a Victoria Fair Theatre performance of the drama Justice, Not Revenge.

The group from Victoria delighted the National Arts Centre audience with an opening scene depicting an attractive prostitute—with a single breast unclad.

The rather off-beat day began in near-chaos as a horde of kids tried to follow the action in a children's play by Ottawa's Le Cerf-Volant.

In another effort, fifteen prisoners from Collins Bay Penitentiary, a federal prison near Kingston, Ont., did an impressive job playing The Criminal Record, written by former prisoner Peter Madden.

It featured a tape-recorded litany of the mental torment experienced by those in jail. The man whose voice was used escaped from Collins Bay two weeks ago, after making the recording.

BASIN IS VILLAIN

The Gorsebrook Players of Halifax presented Modesty Clean Meets the Devil, with a villain called Bedford Basin. The real Bedford Basin is a body of water adjoining Halifax Harbor.

Message of Modesty Clean was to fight pollution by using low - phosphate detergents. The singing was good, the jokes funny, the point made.

La Bibliotheque de Babel, by l'Atelier de Recherches Theatrales, Montreal, raised the problem of trying to find anything in a library. It was a one man show that also played to a sympathetic audience.

L'Acte sans Parole, by the same group, was in pantomime with actor Richard Hetu somehow getting laughs in a morbid role.

He played a man with an obsession for cleanliness as he awaited death. A metronome ticked on as he tried several times to kill himself. When the metronome stopped, he died.

INDIAN POLICE HISTORIC FIRST

The eight proud but nervous-looking Indian men stood at the table and swore they would do their best to uphold the law in their communities.

And with that, the establishment of the first all-Indian police force in British Columbia history was marked.

The eight men, selected by their respective band councils, have been trained in the rudiments of police work and will take a crash course at Victoria's RCMP training academy before spending a month working with RCMP at the detachment closest to their communities.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson was present for the swearing-in ceremony at the Provincial Museum Friday and urged the men to provide "fair treatment for Indians and non-Indians alike."

Peterson said the men would often be greeted by acts of provocation, and urged them not to retaliate in kind.

He said the moment was a proud one not only for the eight men, but also for first citizens throughout the province.

Peterson pointed out that there was "an increasing awareness and increasing participation on the part of Indians in the administration of justice in B.C." He said five judges of Indian heritage had been appointed to Provincial Court posts.

New constable James A. Wilson of Cape Mudge said the main task the men will face will be to understand the people they are to police. "I think there is a great need for better co-operation with the RCMP," he said.

Felix Davis of New Aiyansh said the greatest problem with the Indian people was drinking. He said it would be beneficial to undertake a program to educate the people on the evils of alcohol.

Lawrence Joe, who will serve the Cowichan band at Duncan, said he didn't expect any suspicion from his people on his new job.

The project has been arranged by the attorney-general's department in conjunction with the Indian Affairs branch.

Other constables sworn in were Dennis M. Wilson of Bella Bella, Donald A. Price of Port Simpson, Alexander A. Angus of Greenville, Fredrick B. Doolan of Kincolith and Charles Shaw of Kitimat.

The constables will be responsible to their band councils, with the force eventually expanding to include members on every major reservation in B.C.

No one tries harder to kill the bug than us.

Everyone's out to clobber the bug.

But some of the new small car makers should see what a Volkswagen goes through to become a Volkswagen.

They'd shudder.

They'd also get a better idea of what they're up against.

Every part of every VW is inspected 3 separate times. More than 16,000 times in all.

Every car lives or dies on the say so of any one of our hard-nosed final inspectors. (They've been known to reject 100% of a day's total production.)

Then many bugs are yanked off the production line. For them is reserved a special fate: the infamous VW destruction tests.

Doors and trunklids are slammed day in and day out to see if they can take it.

Seats are pounded with huge weights to see if they hold up.

Keys are turned in locks 25,000 times.

Stabilizers are put through 1,000 jolts.

The next one's a lulu: A 6 million dollar wind tunnel that can simulate road and weather conditions anywhere in the world.

Then it's on to the test track. 60 miles of the worst road in creation.

Suspension test. Brake test.

On and on it goes.

The reason for all the mayhem? If a bug can stand up to this, it can stand up to anything.

So we'll keep on trying to kill the bug day after day.

It's the only way we can make sure it will go on living.

Starting to Begin?

THE WIDELY PUBLICIZED joint declaration of intent by the United States and Russia says that the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks will now concentrate on devising an agreement to limit certain nuclear missiles and weapons. Most newspaper readers had thought that this was what the SALT meetings had been trying to do for the past 19 months, but apparently what has taken place at Helsinki and Vienna has been only the commencement of the beginning.

Now, with nuclear armaments building up enormously on both sides, the negotiations will be narrowed to certain specific armaments on which there is some hope of achieving agreement.

Observers believe that the deal will cover ABMs — which are essentially defensive weapons to bring down attacking missiles — and land-based missiles, which are rapidly being superseded by highly mobile missiles carried on nuclear submarines. With these second-rank weapons perhaps under the axe, the way might be cleared for agreement on reduction of the more powerful armaments — the missiles aboard the submarines, the MIRV multiple-headed missiles and other devices perhaps even now being rushed to completion. Missiles carried by aircraft have been a particular concern of the Russians in all earlier talks, but these are not expected to be part of the new so-called "break-through" in negotiation.

Even on a limited basis, the talks face formidable impediments. The topics inevitably will include decisions on which weapons systems to limit, how much to limit them, how much auxiliary equipment to include, and probably that old bugbear of nuclear control — how to police the signatory nations to determine if the agreement is being faithfully kept. To date, the Soviet Union has rejected inspection of production facilities by foreigners, and it was only the development of highly accurate detection apparatus for airborne and surface nuclear explosions that made possible the agreement to ban these forms of nuclear testing.

But all the difficulties and exemptions aside, the fact that the two countries have so publicly demonstrated their wish to get going on specific nuclear reduction negotiations is in itself a step forward. The United States' domestic and Vietnam difficulties, and the rising opposition to astronomical defence budgets can perhaps account — if supporting incentives are needed — for that country's renewed desire for progress in arms reduction. While, for Russia, the current western-directed policies of China, with their implied establishment of closer ties with the United States, may be cause enough for Moscow to seek improved overseas relations.

The Chinese aspect has a still more direct implication. With Peking rapidly rising as a nuclear power, both the United States and Russia should lose no time in drawing up an effective global nuclear arms control plan — one to which China can in turn become a party. Three scorpions in the bottle will be even more unstable a community than two.

Not Quite the Cure

A SLIGHTLY PEEVISH NOTE is evident in the explanation of a Washington, D.C., management consultant for the American plan to transport Alaska oil to Washington State by sea. Canadians who oppose such shipments, he says, should have applied pressure for a joint energy policy with the United States. Had they done so, he adds, a land pipeline through Canada might well be favored by U.S. interests.

There are, however, a number of factors in a joint energy policy beside the specific question of transshipment of oil from the American far north to the northwest state. A joint energy policy involves continentalism and that has obvious dangers for Canadians.

We have, for instance, a relative abundance of fresh water in Canada on which American interests cast covetous eyes both for the supply of water alone, and for the power development it could produce.

But if Canada and the United States were to enter a joint policy before Canada has any adequate knowledge of its prospective future needs, this country could find itself inextricably tied to an agreement supplying American demands that inevitably would come into conflict with Canadian requirements.

Certainly there are cases in which joint planning is desirable, even essential, between the United States and Canada. But Canadians should have no inclination to tie themselves to a joint policy that could strangle their future development.

The Washington, D.C., consultant's remarks seem to suggest that the annoyance of a corn can be removed by amputating the foot. The remedy is not attractive.

Licensed to Probe

AS SCIENTISTS PURSUE THEIR research into the mechanisms of life new prospects of human happiness (or human misery) come into view. The current project of Dr. James Bonner, a biologist at the California Institute of Technology, involves experiments which could radically change our lives.

Dr. Bonner is engaged in uncovering the mysteries of the genetic code which commands the physical composition and structure of the body. Every organ, every tissue, has its own special cells and in each cell a certain set of genes (ranging from one to ten per cent of all genes in the cell) are "turned on" and cause the cells to perform their specific activities.

Dr. Bonner is concerned primarily with certain brain cells, called neurons, which cease to function with advancing age or for other reasons — the death of these cells could account for loss of memory and other changes. He wonders if replacement cells could not be created to imitate the neurons which, unlike other cells, do not reproduce themselves.

Study of the cells which make up the brain is basically more crucial than the theorizing and research which preceded the control of nuclear fission. Nothing dramatizes more effectively than brain cell research the need for ethical supervision of scientific activities dealing with the life of the mind. The unaided consciences of skilled scientists could prove to be inadequate safeguards against man's ancient and persistent drive for domination of his fellow creatures. The ultimate world of the laboratory — whether bravely new or not — raises problems for the future which society will have to solve, developments which it will have to control. And right now, at the beginning of it all, would be a good time to start.

Horatius

Ottawa Journal

And how can man die better
Than facing fearful odds
For the ashes of his fathers,
And the temples of his gods?

Macaulay's lines come to mind at the thought of Stanley Knowles playing Horatius at the bridge, standing guard at Parliament's sacred portals against invasion by Prime Minister Trudeau's marshalled array of bureaucrats.

Knowles is protesting an idea mooted by the government, of expelling the elected members from their offices in the Centre Block, to make room for the multiplying horde of aides to the prime minister and his cabinet ministers. The suggestion is that the dispossessed members would be moved to the limbo of the Confederation Building; and to this proposal Knowles says that the government minions will eject him only by physical force, kicking and shouting.

For him, Parliament is truly a temple, consecrated by its great traditions. The ashes of his fathers, symbolically, are his parliamentary forebears who created its traditions: men like Disraeli, Gladstone, Keir Hardy, Macdonald, Laurier and Woodsworth. For Knowles, Parliament can never be just another office building, a beehive of ministerial aides. Its halls, offices, library and chambers are the proper milieu of the elected members.

The Monarchy Is No Longer a Vital Quebec Issue

IN the continuing debate over the future of the monarchy in Canada, one of the arguments which should be given little weight is that replacement of the Queen as Canada's head of state would dampen the fires of separatism in Quebec.

The commitments and frustrations of Quebec's 'independantistes' are more deeply rooted, as Prime Minister Trudeau pointed out when he was interviewed recently on the CBC television program Weekend.

Although the separatists still point to the monarchy as one of the things they see as being wrong with the country, they are more firmly committed to changes in the powers that Quebec has to tax, spend and influence the quality of life within its borders.

Perhaps abolition of the monarch's role in Canada's government would have had some real impact on French-Canadian nationalists had it taken place 50 years ago. The gesture would have been still largely symbolic, as it would be at this time. But, such a move — so long ago — would have indicated a profound change in the thinking of a majority of Canadians across the country. It would have also indicated a willingness to accept certain of Quebec's aspirations, which were less elaborate than they are today, in a more tangible way.

Lukewarm

Abolition of the monarchy in the 1970's would prove nothing more than that some people felt less than lukewarm sentiments about the institution. It in no way would mean that the federal government, the premier of Quebec or the premiers of the other provinces who would have to accede to any constitutional change would be any more willing to agree to more tangible reforms.

The separatist movement has done anything but diminish in the six years since the Maple Leaf flag became Canada's official standard.

For the separatists, who are now largely grouped together in the three-year-old Parti Quebecois, the monarchy is less than an issue. It is a handy debating point if one has nothing better to talk about, and is always good for a few laughs at rallies and conventions. The affection of many English-Canadians for the Royal Family is viewed more as an Anglo-Saxon idiosyncrasy, than as a major problem. When Queen Elizabeth is mentioned at a Parti Quebecois gathering, one hears the same snickers that are evident at NDP meetings when someone refers to one of our better-known capitalists.

When the Parti Quebecois won seven seats in the Quebec National Assembly in its first election bid 13 months ago, some of the newly-elected MNAs vowed they wouldn't take their seats if they had to swear allegiance to the Queen.

The issue made great copy in the French-language press, as well as some of Canada's English newspapers. But the PQ politicians realized they would be hurting the credibility of their party as a vehicle for significant political change and could easily reinforce a popular, if unrealistic, impression that the separatists put rhetoric before economics. Within a few weeks, all seven MNAs had sworn allegiance and taken their seats.

Some embarrassment might have been avoided had there been no monarchy, but the Parti Quebecois would no doubt have found something else to prod the government and gain headlines.

Prime Minister Trudeau summed up the situation on the CBC when he doubted the value of abolishing the monarchy to appease the PQ, when the party is pledged to work for the destruction of the country.

During the interview, Mr. Trudeau reaffirmed his belief that the monarchy is the best governmental system that Canada could have at this time, and that a change to a republican system would be difficult to envisage during his administration.

Whatever happens, it is interesting to note that a Gallup Poll published last September showed that there is a clear division between the thinking of English and French-speaking Canadians about the monarchy.

Percentages

The survey showed that only 27 per cent of French-speaking Canadians favored the recognition of Prince Charles as our king after the reign of Queen Elizabeth, although 67 per cent of the English-speaking Canadians who were polled were in favor of continuation of the monarchy. Forty-five per cent of the French-speaking people who were questioned thought Canada should become a republic, while 28 per cent were undecided. Only 21 per cent of the English-speaking people thought the country should become a republic, and 12 per cent were undecided.

According to the Gallup organization, only a bare majority of Canadians — 52 per cent — support the monarchy, and that support increases in the older age groups.

Letters to the Editor

Comparisons

I must put in a couple of words about the increase of pay that the MP's are asking for. The $8,000 they want comes to $666.66 per month while the old age pensioner get 42 cents per month. It goes to show where their heart is, right in their own pockets.

This Liberal Party is past masters at lining their own pockets. It wasn't too long ago that they gave themselves a tidy little pension of $300 for sitting around Ottawa for a period of six years whereas it took me 29 years in the Canadian Army to get a pension of the same amount, and I have to wait till I reach the age of 60 before I can expect to get the two per cent that they so reluctantly offered us.

To top it all they plan on a total of $10,000 tax free.

Why? The rest of the taxpayers in this country get a lousy $2,000 and they get $10,000. Their so-called reason is that they have expenses.

Haven't we all? — F. M. Pennie, 5366 Alderley.

Prospects for a New 'Super-Power' Europe

THE shape of Europe is in flux, and this could be a fact of great historic importance. In Paris this past week the President of France and the Prime Minister of Great Britain were making decisions which could determine the geographic extent of economic Europe. In Moscow the United States and the Soviet Union were recording their agreement to negotiate the intensity of military confrontation across the heart of political Europe.

Frye

Rarely if ever since the rise of the modern nation-state in the 16th and 17th centuries has there been in Europe so much potential for fundamental change in such a relatively brief span of time.

The talks between France's Georges Pompidou and Britain's Edward Heath focused on the terms and conditions of British entry into the Common Market (and, by extension, the terms under which other countries might join). But this was only a very narrow view of their agenda. What was really at stake was far more than tariff levels, the volume and direction of trade, and the size of markets. What was at stake was the economic — and therefore ultimately the political — cohesion of Western Europe.

Dream Now Practical

For nearly 1000 years, France and Britain had sought ways to bring their peoples closer together. Now that millenial dream was at last on a practical, high-level drawing board.

And Moscow made clear it did not wish to be left out of consideration.

A new great power in the world — an economic and military force potentially comparable to the United States and the Soviet Union — could emerge if Britain and France, both nuclear powers, were to unite with West Germany, an economic giant, in a closely-knit European entity. West Europe has the population, the resources, and the geopolitical potential to be a veritable super-power.

Hostile to the Soviet Union, this new super-power would be a serious concern indeed to the Kremlin.

There is little the Soviet Union could do about the economic strength of such a potential rival except to seek to share, one day, in some of the benefits. But there is much the Kremlin could do to steer Europe away from great-power aspirations in the military realm. And that is what Party Boss Leonid Brezhnev and his echo, Premier Alexei Kosygin were seeking to do this past week.

Brezhnev (and then Kosygin) accepted a NATO proposal for negotiations on East-West troop reductions in Europe. If successful, such a disengagement of forces along the Iron Curtain would remove much of the motive, and dilute many of the resources, for military great-power status in Western Europe.

Moreover, reduction of American forces in Europe would have the further effect, also desirable in Moscow's eyes, of minimizing the likelihood of close military collaboration between a European great power and the United States.

By extension, American political influence in the new and emerging Europe could be contained.

All this has great potential for good in its impact on Eastern Europe.

Just as reduction of the American presence in Western Europe would undercut United States influence there, so reduction of the Soviet presence in Eastern Europe — a necessary quid pro quo — would affect Soviet relationships with its client states. Indeed, it would affect them much more vitally.

The kind of disengagement being proposed by Washington and apparently now accepted, as a basis of negotiation, by the Kremlin would have been completely incompatible, for example, with the invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Liberalization

Assuming an East-West agreement on force reductions were self-enforcing, therefore, or otherwise rendered invulnerable to sudden reversal, another Dubcek — perhaps, with the departure of Walter Ulbricht, in East Germany — would have to be allowed to carry forward his reforms. East Europe could hope to evolve toward liberalization and greater human rights. This would be the price the Soviet Union would be paying for keeping Western Europe a loose agglomerate of separate, though co-operating, entities.

When one adds to this picture the ostpolitik (eastern policy) of Germany's Willy Brandt — his offer of political reconciliation with Eastern Europe — the potentialities are enormous.

They include the virtual elimination of the Iron Curtain — i.e., of the partition of the continent — as a meaningful reality in any but the ideological sense.

They extend even to the possibility of entirely new relationships between Communist and non-Communist governments in Europe in which antagonism would no longer be one of the automatic "givens" of the situation.

In short, the shape of Europe in the next generation could be very different from that of the continent we have known in the years since the Second World War.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

As you walk down the trail at Prior Lake off the Highland Road you are greeted by a beautiful cluster of Saskatoon bushes that are now at their very best. The species growing in this part of the province does not have such an edible berry as those that grow in the Interior. You can always tell this shrub by its leaves, for the top half will have a fine-toothed edge. The shrub has a very wide range throughout North America, even as far north as the Yukon.

Also growing along the trail is the dainty little star flower with a hair-like stalk supporting the bloom. The color ranges from white to delicate pink. The corm of this plant is very bitter and if eaten has the same effect as alum.

Stop and look at the seed pods of the Easter lily. You will find that they are now erect. When the three-sided pods have shed the seed they will form small cups.

By the lake itself is a large cluster of bearberry now showing their urn-shaped flowers in abundance. This plant belongs to the heather family.

Walk out onto the little float and on the logs you will be able to find the fresh-water sponge. Some are a bright green, others a light brown.

In the water you may see the Elodea. The leaves will be bunched at the top. Growing close by, you can find the coontail which seems to survive entirely under water. Its leaves are in a whorl.

The watershield is now beginning to show. This plant has the leaf stalk attached to the middle of the plant. The flowers have a purplish tinge and it is associated with the yellow pond lily now in bloom.

You can find the bladderwort, with its leaves forming a tiny trap to catch water creatures. Later on it will have a yellow flower growing from a tall spike.

If you look closely, on some of the plants along the edges of the lake you may be able to see the damsel fly hatching from its cocoon, or, if you are lucky, a dragonfly emerging.

Here It's a Quibble Over Bits and Pieces, There a Plan for 50 Miles

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

THE WEEK IN CITY HALL

A mind-boggling plan launched last year to remake and conserve Toronto's waterfront may have some good ideas — if not lessons — to contribute to Victoria's own waterfront debate.

The most impressive idea lies in the simple fact of its massive size: the new Toronto waterfront will stretch a full 50 miles, beyond the city's limits to the east and to the west along Lake Ontario.

Victoria's plan, if it can be called that, is minute by comparison. It involves, almost as a decorative afterthought to an urban renewal project, a few hundred yards of the Inner Harbor waterfront out of more than 100 miles of the peninsula's coastline within a quick jaunt from almost everywhere.

The trick in Toronto's plan is that the multi-million dollar job will be implemented mainly by a body called the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority.

This fact provides two important principles in undertaking this kind of a scheme which we in the Capital Region aren't going to be able to utilize.

The first is that the responsibility for the whole plan — recreational, park, residential, commercial, institutional, highways — lies with a single agency.

In Victoria, we are always forced to quibble over bits and pieces of private and public authority and rights, and the mind withers to think of the legal morass that would ensure with an attempt to co-ordinate the waterfront activity from Pedder Bay around to Brentwood.

The second principle is that the central power to implement the plan has been given by the provincial government of Ontario to a body whose main concern is not development or parks or pollution, or planning but conservation.

The central thesis of the whole operation, therefore, is to recognize, rescue and cash in on this priceless, natural asset — waterfront — and deliver the results to the public.

There is no agency in the Capital Region similar to Ontario's provincially constituted conservation authorities. We're that far behind for a start. Nor do we have the kind of planning bodies that can devote themselves to that kind of project.

One gets the feeling from talking with planners here that they would be more than happy to turn this kind of question over to another body and get on with the essentially technical task of administering zoning bylaws.

As the Washington Post's architectural critic, Wolf Von Eckardt, wrote recently, ". . . most city planners and zoners don't really do much effective planning or constructive zoning.

"They codify prevailing economic pressures. They rarely determine or guide them."

Victoria simply hasn't got to the stage at which it will say, officially, that all the waterfront is worth conserving and, citizens, we will now go about devising a way to conserve it.

There are still arguments carrying considerable political clout (but little wisdom) that say things like: but we have all that open waterfront along Dallas Road; the city needs the added tax revenue; the Inner Harbor is ugly, etc.

These are effectively used to avoid the obvious: that waterfront is a unique, limited part of the environment that is often extravagantly wasted, or alienated to the private few.

I's not surprising, then, that with no agency or local government clearly committed to a policy of waterfront conservation, a note of hysteria is heard from those who fear all our remaining waterfront potential may be wiped out or eroded at the whim of private enterprise.

Back to Toronto, now, where the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority has been given a mandate to meld all interests, private and public, in the new waterfront plan.

The MTRCA's plans include aspects that would horrify some of our local waterfront worries. There will be enough highrises, expressways, airports, industrial harbors and commercial enterprises to make Victoria's Inner Harbor look like a sleepy lagoon.

Yet, the thing sounds good. It fits Toronto and big, bustling southern Ontario like a glove.

It is so big, just one of its inclusions is going to be a more or less self-contained satellite city of 50,000 persons on a land-filled island, "complete with entertainment, recreational, business and institutional facilities . . . a showplace for all that is desirable in urban living — a sort of Venice of the Great Lakes," to quote the MTRCA project director, William A. McLean.

The project also includes plans to provide direct public access to more than 30 of the 50 miles of shoreline. With landfill frontages added, the actual public beach will be some 100 miles long.

In short, the new plan for Toronto's waterfront seems to be aiming at that peaceful co-existence between what is natural and what is man-made that we are so often assured is possible by developers and planners.

In Toronto's case, the details can be thrashed out with the basic guarantee already accomplished: a plan, in McLean's words, "to give the waterfront back to the people."

And what sweet words these would be, coming from the lips of our political friends in Victoria.

The Crafty Politician Who Booby-Trapped a Gov't

By BRUCE YEMEN

In last week's exciting episode, a fellow named Harry did his best to show that Premier Bennett is a bumbling failure as politician.

Well, Harry, it was a nice try and we'll defend your right to keep saying it.

But, quite frankly, your views are laughable.

Premier Bennett is not only a great politician, he is the makes Machiavelli look like Bob Stanfield.

That comes on good authority from a fellow named Fred, who makes his case as follows:

"Our premier is probably the only leader in the free world who has booby-trapped an entire government.

"The trap was carefully designed and installed in 1959 after the famous bond-burning ceremony when B.C. was declared officially debt-free.

"Like all good booby-traps, the device didn't look like a booby-trap or even like an ingenious plot against any NDP party that dared to win an election in B.C. at any future time.

"It looked like an issue of parity development bonds for sale to the public and instantly redeemable to full value at any time, unconditionally guaranteed by the government.

"If you recall, the startling feature of the instant cashability at full value shocked the financial community at the time. It was an audacious move.

"But Bennett has his way and the bonds were sold to the public. They proved so popular over the years that instead of a few million dollars in sales, the bonds outstanding now total $250,000,000.

"Now, that's an awful lot of money for a provincial government to have to cough up all at once if the bond-holders so desire. It can create a very embarrassing political situation if you aren't prepared for it.

"If the bonds happen to be under the control of a relatively few people in the financial community, the threat to government stability is ominous.

"In act, there was a run on the bonds in 1962, when business confidence in the government had sunk following the sudden takeover of the B.C. Electric in 1961.

"Bennett was enraged by suggestions that the government was on the brink of bankruptcy at the time, but there is evidence that he had to do some fancy scrambling to find the money to pay off the bonds.

"Bennett was more prepared for the second big run on the parities during the tight-money period of late 1969 and early 1970 when interest rates were high. It was right after he refused to raise the interest rate on the parities from 6½ per cent which provoked the run.

"He was ready for it because he had lots of loose money lying around in short-term investments from the special trust funds he has been busy setting up for the past few years.

"He just switched his investments from bank deposits and the like into the parities. He swallowed at least $115 million of the parities.

"In a sense, the two parity scares were just trial runs for the really big stampede that would occur if an NDP government were ever elected.

"It would be an instant crisis. Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett would have immediate proof that a socialist government would bring financial ruin to the province, as he has always claimed.

"And don't think that the premier is dumb enough to go into a close election with lots of ready cash lying around for an NDP government to use to meet the inevitable crisis.

"He would make sure that every bit of available short-term money was tied up in long-term investments like schools, hospitals and similar public projects.

"If the banks refused to lend the money to the new socialist government — and don't underestimate that possibility — the new leader would be forced to take desperate measures such as calling a special legislative session to get authority to cancel the bonds or to take money from general revenue to meet the demand.

"But even if the banks came through, it would be a humiliating political disaster. It is a strong possibility that the government would be in a minority position and would then call an election.

"They would accuse Bennett of engineering the entire affair, and they would probably be correct. You see, the bonds aren't really in the hands of the 'little people' they were originally destined for.

"More and more, they have been concentrated in the hands of the free-enterprise financial biggies who would play Bennett's game on the assumption that he would have an excellent chance of reversing his election defeat. They could create the run by calls.

"The only hope for the NDP would be try to convince the voters that it was a straight case of the business-industrial complex ganging up on the little guys.

"But the confused, concerned voters would probably stick with the big-money boys, the known quantities.

"It's the most devilish booby-trap ever devised by political man.

"So, you see, Harry, you are about as wrong as it's possible to be when you say Bennett isn't a smart politician.

"And as for that remark about Bennett being a great statesman — it's the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard. I ask you — would a statesman set up a nasty, low-down political trick like that?"

Harry, as we say in the trade, wasn't available for comment.

Amchitka: The Little Big Horn of War Freaks?

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

There is an outside chance that Amchitka Island will amount, in political terms, to Custer's Last Stand.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission plans to set off an underground blast there in October which will be nearly five times as powerful as the 1.2-megaton bomb they popped off underneath the island in 1969.

The earlier blast made waves. It sent a tide of people from Vancouver down to the Blaine border crossing where they sealed off the U.S.-Canada border for the first time since the War of 1812. It unleashed a flood of students down to the American border right across the country. It even rocked the federal government out of its normal nicey-nicey diplomatic straitjacket.

This new blast called Cannikin — will cause further waves.

How big those waves of protest will be remains to be seen. But at this point in our history, they may be just enough to leave the Atomic Energy Commission foundering, even in danger of sinking.

Protest movements have a way of merging with other movements at certain critical points. For instance, in the United States and civil rights movement and the anti-war movement were on quite separate orbits for a long time.

Then, suddenly, they joined. They had a common cause. And from the movement of blending-together, the yhad a lot more muscle.

Right now, the ecology movement is operating for the most part on its own.

The connection between machines of war and machines of pollution has not been clearly established.

How, someone might ask, do you bring the energies of the environmentalists and the energies of the anti-war movement together?

Well you might ask the weapons makers to perform some act of wildly-irresponsible vandalism. That would do it. The energies of both movements might thus be brought into a single focus.

The test this October up in Amchitka might be just the thing.

Agencies like the AEC are, at the moment, more on the defensive than they have ever been. The old knee-jerk support they used to command has been appreciably gnawed away.

The days when they used to be able to trigger atomic blasts in the atmosphere virtually at will are gone. They have had to go underground. And even in this area they are on the run.

The test is being donducted up in the Aleutian Islands simply because the AEC was effectively chased out of the mainland of the United States by mounting protests and fear of radioactive contamination.

The AEC is possibly at its last ditch.

A determined effort now, a "shove" not just by the anti-war people, but by the fast-growing ranks of environmentally-aware people, could conceivably produce more static than the AEC, in its weakened position, can handle.

The blast might yet be stopped. Or, if enough pressure can be brought to bear, the AEC might still go ahead with the blast but it will be striotly a Pyrrhic victory. The "cost" in terms of erosion of public support for weapons-testing might be more than it can bear without going politically bankrupt.

Who knows? I don't. But it is a possibility now and I don't think it could have been described as even a remote possibility five years ago. There have been a lot of changes in attitudes lately.

The Don't Make A Wave Committee is sending a ship, the Greenpeace, up to Amchitka, hopefully to blockade the blast — or at least to put bodies on the line and thus draw attention to the fact that such ess are harmful to human beings and other living things.

With one ship and one crew — including myself — ready to go, the committee is trying to get other ships to join the protest, possibly fishing boats from Alaska, from the U.S., perhaps even from Japan and Hawaii. A flotilla would presumably be more effective than a lone ship floundering around in the October storms three miles off the island.

The more effort, the more support, the better. In the past, one could be certain that such efforts would be dismissed as the work of cranks.

But the climate, the mood, public opinion itself, have been shifting, and the possibility at least exists that Amchitka may be the Little Big Horn of the weapons and war freaks.

The Water's Fine

By ART STOTT

Waist-deep at the shallow end of the Crystal Garden pool, the 10-year-old boy tosses a plastic lemon juice container filled with water two or three feet ahead of him. The container sinks and the youngsters, with a thrashing of legs, launches himself on its retrieval. He comes up, the object in his hand and an ear-to-ear grin on his streaming face.

It's the present-day version of the old game we used to play, gathering clam shells off the bottom of Foul Bay in shallow water before we could swim. But if it's a game to the boy, it also serves two vital purposes in swim instruction. It teaches him to get his face wet, submerging, without panic, and to accustom himself to a change in balance from his usual upright stance.

I watched the boy in a crowd that was beginning the final schedule of the 25th year in which the Greater Victoria School Board has been giving instruction in swimming to Grade 5 students.

During that quarter-century, George Grant, who was there at the beginning, tells me about 43,000 youngsters have taken part. On an average, about 5 per cent of them learn to swim well enough to cover 120 yards using different strokes, 25 per cent swim about 50 yards, 50 to 60 per cent learn to float, do a few strokes and jump into deep water under supervision and another 10 to 20 per cent don't progress much further than learning to overcome their fear of the water and mastering what the teachers call beginners' skills. That might be retrieving a water-filled plastic lemon juice container, and could include some knowledge of elementary safety and life-saving.

When the swimming classes for Grade 5 were inaugurated in 1946-47, 10 groups totalling about 750 pupils underwent short courses spread over eight weeks, with an average of 65 to a group, at a total cost of $1,150. This year, 50 groups, 55 to a group, took similar instruction at a cost of $15,000. The program, in the meantime, was expanded to take in some special classes where children may learn to swim — some of the youngsters with different impairments do — and achieve from the exercise a little better co-ordination and valuable social activity.

What impressed me, after a couple of decades away from swim-teaching classes, was the apparent lack of fear or hysterical outbursts from children putting their heads under water or bobbing down when they hadn't expected to. The children now, George explained, are much better prepared to start the courses. They've been encouraged by parents and by older brothers and sisters who have been through the mill before them.

A dozen or more arguments can be advanced in favor of retaining the program. But there are two or three developments which invite question over the desirability of keeping it in its present form. Naturally, money — escalating costs — is one of them. Another is a desire by secondary schools to participate in an aquatic program varied from the present format. A third is the existence of more opportunities, organized and otherwise, for non-swimming youngsters to learn to swim outside the existing school system.

For some, those opportunities do not exist. So, goes one question, should the funds and effort be reserved for the children in need of help, with more intensive attention being paid to them? Or, in another query, why restrict the schedule to Grade 5 pupils and special class children only?

Cost consciousness is obviously becoming a factor. After a quarter century, perhaps a reassessment is in order.

Ken Hurn, a good competitor a few years ago and now a teacher always ready to help out, thinks the program has more than justified itself. He has lots of company. We watched, yesterday morning, some of the small people suffering from neurological impairment as they took to the water. There seemed to be no nervousness among them. They were as boisterous as perhaps more so than, normal youngsters who toss off reticence and silence with their clothes before they hit the water. And with conscientious instructors and assisting teachers, they were deriving clear benefits as they enjoyed this treat of the term.

Unquestionably, if PT is part of the educational process — and I think it is — the aquatic side of that activity should not be abandoned. In a changing world, though, it may undergo more noticeable revision than has been caused by the necessities of expansion — after 20 years solely at the Crystal, groups now also go to Centennial, Gordon Head and "Y" pools.

Is it a "frill" of education? Not to those of us who, accepting the general principle that education should equip the person to make a living, learn to live with others and with himself, believe it should also help him to stay alive in a seacoast town with lots of swimming holes in nearby lakes.

Swimming, according to some authorities, is the best of all physical exercises. Those in charge of the school program probably agree. It's sensible, on the other hand, to determine how best it can be encouraged on the money available. That's what the reassessment is about.

Basketball Pros Score Where Grid Guys Fail

By DAVE BRADY

WASHINGTON—Pro basketball players are bringing off what their football counterparts botched in defying club owners and putting on their own interleague allstar game on next Friday in the Houston Astrodome.

The long-range impact on pension fund negotiations could be of much greater signficance that the mere current concern by the owners about insubordination.

While the National and American Basketball Associations were plotting a merger that would end the salary war and presumably bring about a more attractive all-star game than the intra-league versions of the past, the player associations moved quickly.

They established the right to promote and play the game on their own, regardless of if or how long Congress might take to approve a merger.

Since it is a brand new format, the players can make a case of owning the rights to it. Even if the owners do eventually establish rights to it, the players' bargaining position will be stronger when it comes to determining how much of the revenues go into pension funds than if the owners had been permitted to take it over unchallenged.

The National and American Football Leagues agreed to merge in 1966 but did not get around to sponsoring an interleague all-star game (tje merged Pro Bowl) until after the 1970 season. The football player associations had threatened to promote it first, but dawdled and lost out. They had designs on earmarking the profits for their pension fund.

The basketball players have shown that they can do everything the owners can. They have negotiated a contract with an independent network — Television Sports — and they are lining up prime-time outlets.

SYMPATHETIC PITCH

To offset the charges of insubordination, the players have made a pitch for sympathetic public relations by tabbing net gate recepits for a fund to memorialize the late Whitney Young, civil rights leader. But the television revenue will go to the players' pension funds.

Arlan Preblud of Denver, counsel for the ABA players, insists "we are not looking to the future," but he conceded, "we will have a wedge in future negotiations on our pension fund."

Preblud admits that standard player contracts prohibit participation in any games without the owners' consent, but contends the owners waived that ban because they did not in the past withhold the players' rights to play in a benefit for Maurice Stokes, another for a Martin Luther King fund, and in the Rucker League in New York in the off-season.

"If fact, the players never did ask for the owners' permission in those instances," Preblud said.

He declined to say how much the players were receiving from the independent network carrying the all-star game in 85 per cent of the nation, with Houston blacked out.

Clouds Gathering Over Epsom As Big Derby Entry Expected

By IAIN MacLEOD

LONDON (CP) — As racing enthusiasts eagerly await the biggest event of the flat season, storm clouds appear to be gathering over Epsom Downs, site of the 1½-mile Derby.

For the first time in the 200-year history of this classic, starting stalls will be compulsory. These are widely accepted on other British tracks, but their one disadvantage is that they limit the number of starters—in Epsom's case to 31.

This raises serious problems for the ruling body, the Jockey Club which organizes the Derby. Some officials speculate that as many as 35 horses may still be entered on Derby Day June 2—the largest number since the 36 in 1952.

"For the first time ever a ballot may have to be used in the 1971 Derby now that stalls are compulsory at Epsom," said Louise Gold, Jockey Club secretary. "This means there is a chance of a hot favorite being balloted out."

The Derby, at this time, is still wide open. With no outstanding performers, such as Nijinsky or Sir Ivor, in sight, there is great temptation among owners and trainers to keep any horse showing form in the running.

STILL 118 ENTERED

"The Jockey Club will be sitting in a red hot saddle if there are more than 31 entries for the race," Miss Gold said in an interview. "Mounts in top form like Mill Reef and Levanter, early favorites with consistently good form throughout the season, could find themselves out of the running before the starter's flag goes down if balloting has to be used."

Only three-year-olds are eligible for the richest prize in flat racing. They have to be entered 15 months before the run, with horses showing poor form eliminated gradually during four review periods.

Usually 500 horses are entered in the preliminary stage. By the time the race is held, the number dwindles to about 20 or 30. With one review period still to go—three days before the Derby—118 horses are still entered.

"Two-thirds will probably be withdrawn through injury or poor form," Miss Gold predicted. "There is also a chance for last-minute withdrawals on Derby Day. But the Jockey Club is worried about the sparks that could fly if we have to enforce a ballot."

Seismic Program Started

Chevron Standard Ltd., has begun its underwater seismic exploration program on a farm-out agreement with Shell Canada Ltd. off the west coast of Vancouver Island and in Hecate Strait.

A minor accident has marred the program, running all this month and due for completion June 15 off Vancouver Island at distances between three and 45 miles from shore.

Wednesday night equipment being towed by the survey vessel Westwind is reported to have sliced troll lines from two vessels of the west coast-based fishing fleet, which were working about 20 miles off Pachena Point.

About 9,000 feet of cable was being dragged in an operation referred to as the steamer method of taking soundings. According to the rescue co-ordination centre, the Bamfield vessel Brant I, owned by Gerry Burkholder, lost three complete sets of trolling gear on La Perouse Bank.

A Port Alberni-based troller also is reported to have lost gear.

Mariners were warned in a notice dated April 26 to keep clear of the survey vessel and its cable.

The farm-out agreement was referred to in Shell's annual report and confirmed May 5 by a Shell spokesman who said the 12.3 million acres of exploration permits held by the company would be subject to fresh surveys.

Chevron Standard, which apparently made the agreement last year, has the right to participate in production if any wells which may be drilled are successful.

Shell drilled 14 wells in a two-year program on its west coast acreage, none of which struck commercial gas or oil.

EXPERIMENTAL turbofans such as the six-foot-diameter one shown here are being evaluated in noise tests at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Lewis Research Centre in Cleveland. The low speed fan has been shown in tests to operate substantially quieter than conventional types and engineers are planning to line the housing and passages of the engine with special acoustic treatment to further reduce noise in supersonic jet aircraft. ## HOTELS BATTLE FRAUD

CALGARY (CP) — Some city hotels have "formed a scheme called "skip-chain" to help prevent fraudulent use of their facilities.

As soon as one hotel realizes that someone has skipped out without paying for a room, passed a bad cheque, or committed any other offence, that hotel calls another one in the group.

The message is passed on and within minutes every hotel in the organization is aware of the description of the alleged offender and the particulars of the offence.

A Calgary hotel accountant said the system has been working on and off in recent years, but has since been perfected and has reduced instances of fraud "remarkably."

City motel operators have run the scheme for more than six years with "a great deal of success," said one spokesman.

Hotel group officials hope their system will be developed to include all hotels and motels in Calgary.

Oil Firm, B.C. Share Job Plan

The provincial education department will help select 27 students for summer jobs made available by Imperial Oil Ltd., in a special job program.

The $250,000 program, will provide 250 additional jobs for students across Canada. B.C.'s share will be $27,000 on a prorated enrolment basis.

Of the 27 jobs, 10 will be for girls. Eligible students must have completed at least one year of post secondary education. Jobs will be related to students' educational goals.

Education Minister Donald Brothers said the program is an example of good corporate citizenship and he encouraged other companies to follow the example in creating summer jobs for students.

'Difference Between Fact, Fiction in Stock Market'

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Haas is one of the 374 "specialists" on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

To the layman they are often described as the "brokers' broker." The NYS says they are the men who maintain a "fair and orderly market," and Richard New in his recent book The Wall Street Jungle stops just short of calling them out and out crooks.

New starts off in the preface by telling a yarn about mobster Lucky Luciano's visit to the floor of the NYSE.

"When the operations of floor specialists had been explained to him, he said: 'A terrible thing happened. I realized I'd joined the wrong mob.' "

Later, New writes: "Unless the investor understands that it is the specialist who determines the price of his stock, that a stock is only worth what its specialist is willing to pay for it, he doesn't understand the difference between fact and fiction in the stock market."

Haas says New doesn't know what he's talking about.

"The only guff I took when the book came out was because I spent the time to read the book," he says.

ROLE TWOFOLD

Haas's day as a specialist starts at 10 a.m. as the gong signals the start of the trading on the NYSE. A specialist is just what the name implies. Each specialist handles one or more stocks. Haas is the specialist for seven, including U.S. Steel, Royal Dutch and Raytheon.

Basically his role is twofold.

Brokers who have customers who want to trade in U.S. Steel, say, come to Haas and tell him how many shares — 100s or multiples thereof, please — and what price they want to buy at and sell for.

Haas enters all of these into a notebook. When the stock rises or falls to fit the orders, Haas executes them. He picks up between $1.15 and $4.65 per 100 shares for the effort, more money than it sound since some of the orders are for thousands of shares.

His second function, that of "making a market," is where the specialist comes under some fire.

SIMULATES TRADING

He has all the listings of who is willing to sell for what and buy for how much. Of course, those who want to sell want to do so for more than those who want to buy.

Say, for example, that there are 500 shares of U.S. Steel for sale at $31; 1,000 for sale at $31½; 2,000 for sale at $32 etc. — on up to ridiculous highs. Then, on the other side of Haas's notebook are the "buy" listings — say a buyer for 1,000 shares at $28, another who wants 500 for $29.

Obviously there is a gap between the buys and sells. Haas's job, then, is to play financial cupid. He could buy or sell at $30, or both, thus activating the trading.

The specialist then makes his money in two ways — over-all buying and selling for his company, in Haas's case it's Benton and Co., and in acting as the broker's broker.

The latter way is how the specialist system began back in 1879. A board member had broken his leg and was unable to move around the floor. So he stationed himself at one of the busiest posts, and the other brokers, knowing he wasn't going anywhere, simply left their orders with him so they could be free to move around.

Soon the man with the broken leg began turning quite a profit and others picked out busy posts around the floor and did likewise.

BANK TO OFFER SHARES TO TRINIDAD RESIDENTS

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (UPI) — The Royal Bank of Canada will establish a locally incorporated bank toward the end of the year, with 51 per cent of the new bank's shares to be placed in the hands of local citizens within a period of five years.

The announcement was made by Francis Prevatt, minister of finance for Trinidad and Tobago, and the Royal Bank's district manager for Trinidad and Tobago and the Eastern Caribbean, C. P. de Souza.

Stock in the new bank will be offered to nationals of Trinidad and Tobago as soon as possible after incorporation.

Airlines Hit Hard By Over-Optimism

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Over optimism in air transportation during the 1960s has resulted in cost cutting and the laying idle of equipment by airlines, says H. B. Main of Vancouver, assistant vice-president of CP Air.

He said the over optimism was on the part of the airlines, governments and then the public because airlines all over the world had experienced unprecedented growth for 10-15 years.

The airlines over-estimated traffic growth because they could see no traffic recession, the governments of various countries licenced heavily and the public reacted to a stabilizing of air fares after 25 years of continually reduced prices.

With traffic growth slowing to as low as two per cent a year from the familiar 17 to 20 per cent, Main said, airlines had to cut costs.

"All are cutting costs in every conceivable manner. Many are reducing capabilities to realistic requirements — even though it means laying up $10 million of equipment," he said.

Main was speaking at a dinner held by the London District Transportation Club in connection with National Transportation Week.

10 Provinces—10 'Solutions'

By I. H. ASPER

Springtime is government budget time and by the time the federal budget is introduced next month, the financial picture for 1971-72 will be completed.

The provincial government budgets have indicated sharply differing approaches to taxation and economic policy and it is difficult to guess at federal Finance Minister Edgar Benson's mood.

The recent Ontario budget, although controversial, is regarded by many observers as an election offering, as is Saskatchewan's. Manitoba's budget, brought down last week, differs significantly in approach, but is also thought of as a pre-election insurance policy.

What emerges from a study of the provincial budgets, and can only be confirmed when the federal accounting comes in, is that there is a major disagreement between the governments over what should be done to achieve elusive and sometimes conflicting national objectives: economic growth, balanced regional development, full employment without inflation, domestic control over key sectors of the economy, individual initiative and an "equitable" tax system.

The untrained observer knows something is wrong but hasn't the knowledge with which to evaluate government's solutions. The trained and knowledgeable expert in government knows what's wrong but cannot seem to decide which fiscal tools should be used in the cure.

Compare Ontario and Manitoba. The wealthiest province has proportionately half the civil service employed by Manitoba. Yet Ontario has put a partial freeze on wage and size escalation in government employment. Manitoba's civil service increment last year was 100 per cent higher than in the previous year and will escalate dramatically again this year as the government takes over the auto insurance industry.

Ontario's budget calls for increased government spending of about 10 per cent; Manitoba's will exceed 15 per cent. But more remarkable, both governments aim at expanding the lagging economy, but take opposite routes.

Manitoba's officials apparently believe the economy can best be stimulated by launching large-scale public programs and accordingly will borrow $300 million to finance hydro, telephone and educational building programs.

Ontario takes the view that the private sector, not the public, should expand. Thus Treasuruer McKeough creates a corporate tax decrease which he says will reduce corporate tax by $125 million. Whether or not he is successful in absolute terms, Ontario is bound to be more attractive for industrial expansion than, say, Manitoba, which even before the Ontario tax cut had the highest corporate tax rate in Canada, while Ontario had one of the lowest.

Another point of interesting contrast is the approach to foreign investment. Ontario's budget urges tax incentive to enable Canadians to be competitive in buying Canadian companies.

McKeough introduced, for the first time in Canada, a resolution to permit Ontario companies to deduct the interest expenses they incur when they borrow money to buy shares in other Canadian companies.

This column has long urged this reform. These expenses are deductible for American companies so they are at a tremendous advantage when they bid against a Canadian buyer to acquire another Canadian company.

The Manitoba budget also criticizes foreign investment in our natural resource industries, perhaps as a peace-making nod to the NDP's waffle element, but makes no tax gesture to stimulate Canadian ownership.

In fact it goes the exact opposite by announcing that the government itself has entered into an agreement with reportedly Japanese and American interests to build a new mining town at Ruttan Lake to develop the resources located there.

And more interesting, the resource developers won't have to bring their foreign capital in to invest in the hospitals, schools, streets, sewers and the like, usually built by the mining companies. Manitoba will invest that money and levy property taxes to reimburse itself.

If these dichotomies in approach to common problems seen strange, they at least point out the individual need for harmonization in the national fiscal arena. Harmonization of the taxing concepts employed across Canada is also needed immediately, for we have already taken several steps into the tax jungle everyone dreads but as individuals cannot stop.

Some provinces, now Ontario too, are moving away from death taxes, while others still levy them. Ontario now introduces corporate tax changes which make that province's tax system different from that of her sister provinces.

Doing business on a national basis in Canada becomes more complex; the tax competition between provinces to attract people and capital becomes more fierce, with the poorer provinces at an almost fatal disadvantage.

Whether it is through the chicken and egg war, the threat of unilingualism in Quebec, or in the erosion of a consistent national tax structure, the balkanization of Canada continues.

(Mr. Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer.)

B.C. First Investment Choice

British Columbia is the number one choice for investment in Canada, Premier Bennett said Friday after having lunch with 31 European bankers.

"It shows the great interest foreign investors have in the development of British Columbia," Bennett said after meeting the bankers.

They were from the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Belgium, Spain and Italy and are touring the province under the guidance of A. E. Ames, investment broker.

Bennett said he told the bankers B.C. is the only province that doesn't tax private enterprise for the purpose of offering subsidies to competitors of those taxed.

"They all said British Columbia is the number one choice in all Canada for

Basketball Pros Score Where Grid Guys Fail

By DAVE BRADY

WASHINGTON—Pro basketball players are bringing off what their football counterparts botched in defying club owners and putting on their own interleague allstar game on next Friday in the Houston Astrodome.

The long-range impact on pension fund negotiations could be of much greater signficance that the mere current concern by the owners about insubordination.

While the National and American Basketball Associations were plotting a merger that would end the salary war and presumably bring about a more attractive all-star game than the intra-league versions of the past, the player associations moved quickly.

They established the right to promote and play the game on their own, regardless of if or how long Congress might take to approve a merger.

Since it is a brand new format, the players can make a case of owning the rights to it. Even if the owners do eventually establish rights to it, the players' bargaining position will be stronger when it comes to determining how much of the revenues go into pension funds than if the owners had been permitted to take it over unchallenged.

The National and American Football Leagues agreed to merge in 1966 but did not get around to sponsoring an interleague all-star game (tje merged Pro Bowl) until after the 1970 season. The football player associations had threatened to promote it first, but dawdled and lost out. They had designs on earmarking the profits for their pension fund.

The basketball players have shown that they can do everything the owners can. They have negotiated a contract with an independent network. Television Sports — and they are lining up prime-time outlets.

SYMPATHETIC PITCH

To offset the charges of insubordination, the players have made a pitch for sympathetic public relations by tabbing net gate receipts for a fund to memorialize the late Whitney Young, civil rights leader. But the television revenue will go to the players' pension funds.

Arlan Preblud of Denver, counsel for the ABA players, insists "we are not looking to the future," but he conceded, "we will have a wenge in future negotiations on our pension fund."

Preblud admits that standard player contracts prohibit participation in any games without the owners' consent, but contends the owners waived that ban because they did not in the past withhold the players' rights to play in a benefit for Maurice Stokes, another for a Martin Luther King fund, and in the Rucker League in New York in the off-season.

"If fact, the players never did ask for the owners' permission in those instances," Preblud said.

He declined to say how much the players were receiving from the independent network carrying the all-star game in 85 per cent of the nation, with Houston blacked out.

Clouds Gathering Over Epsom As Big Derby Entry Expected

By IAIN MacLEOD

LONDON (CP) — As racing enthusiasts eagerly await the biggest event of the flat season, storm clouds appear to be gathering over Epsom Downs, site of the 1½-mile Derby.

For the first time in the 200-year history of this classic, starting stalls will be compulsory. These are widely accepted on other British tracks, but their one disadvantage is that they limit the number of starters—in Epsom's case to 31.

This raises serious problems for the ruling body, the Jockey Club which organizes the Derby. Some officials speculate that as many as 35 horses may still be entered on Derby Day June 2—the largest number since the 36 in 1952.

"For the first time ever a ballot may have to be used in the 1971 Derby now that stalls are compulsory at Epsom," said Louise Gold, Jockey Club secretary. "This means there is a chance of a hot favorite being balloted out."

The Derby, at this time, is still wide open. With no outstanding performers, such as Nijinsky or Sir Ivor, in sight, there is great temptation among owners and trainers to keep any horse showing form in the running.

STILL 118 ENTERED

"The Jockey Club will be sitting in a red hot saddle if there are more than 31 entries for the race," Miss Gold said in an interview. "Mounts in top form like Mill Reef and Levanter, early favorites with consistently good form throughout the season, could find themselves out of the running before the starter's flag goes down if balloting has to be used."

Only three-year-olds are eligible for the richest prize in flat racing. They have to be entered 15 months before the run, with horses showing poor form eliminated gradually during four review periods.

Usually 500 horses are entered in the preliminary stage. By the time the race is held, the number dwindles to about 20 or 30. With one review period still to go—three days before the Derby—118 horses are still entered.

"Two-thirds will probably be withdrawn through injury or poor form," Miss Gold predicted. "There is also a chance for last-minute withdrawals on Derby Day. But the Jockey Club is worried about the sparks that could fly if we have to enforce a ballot."

Seismic Program Started

Chevron Standard Ltd., has begun its underwater seismic exploration program on a farm-out agreement with Shell Canada Ltd. off the west coast of Vancouver Island and in Hecate Strait.

A minor accident has marred the program, running all this month and due for completion June 15 off Vancouver Island at distances between three and 45 miles from shore.

Wednesday night equipment being towed by the survey vessel Westwind is reported to have sliced troll lines from two vessels of the west coast-based fishing fleet, which were working about 20 miles off Pachena Point.

About 9,000 feet of cable was being dragged in an operation referred to as the steamer method of taking soundings. According to the rescue co-ordination centre, the Bamfield vessel Brant I, owned by Gerry Burkholder, lost three complete sets of trolling gear on La Perouse Bank.

A Port Alberni-based troller also is reported to have lost gear.

Mariners were warned in a notice dated April 26 to keep clear of the survey vessel and its cable.

The farm-out agreement was referred to in Shell's annual report and confirmed May 5 by a Shell spokesman who said the 12.3 million acres of exploration permits held by the company would be subject to fresh surveys.

Chevron Standard, which apparently made the agreement last year, has the right to participate in production if any wells which may be drilled are successful.

Shell drilled 14 wells in a two-year program on its west coast acreage, none of which struck commercial gas or oil.

EXPERIMENTAL turbofans such as the six-foot-diameter one shown here are being evaluated in noise tests at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Lewis Research Centre in Cleveland. The low speed fan has been shown in tests to operate substantially quieter than conventional types and engineers are planning to line the housing and passages of the engine with special acoustic treatment to further reduce noise in supersonic jet aircraft. # 10 Provinces—10 'Solutions'

By I. H. ASPER

Springtime is government budget time and by the time the federal budget is introduced next month, the financial picture for 1971-72 will be completed.

The provincial government budgets have indicated sharply differing approaches to taxation and economic policy and it is difficult to guess at federal Finance Minister Edgar Benson's mood.

The recent Ontario budget, although controversial, is regarded by many observers as an election offering, as is Saskatchewan's. Manitoba's budget, brought down last week, differs significantly in approach, but is also thought of as a pre-election insurance policy.

What emerges from a study of the provincial budgets, and can only be confirmed when the federal accounting comes in, is that there is a major disagreement between the governments over what should be done to achieve elusive and sometimes conflicting national objectives: economic growth, balanced regional development, full employment without inflation, domestic control over key sectors of the economy, individual initiative and an "equitable" tax system.

The untrained observer knows something is wrong but hasn't the knowledge with which to evaluate government's solutions. The trained and knowledgeable expert in government knows what's wrong but cannot seem to decide which fiscal tools should be used in the cure.

Compare Ontario and Manitoba. The wealthiest province has proportionately half the civil service employed by Manitoba. Yet Ontario has put a partial freeze on wage and size escalation in government employment. Manitoba's civil service increment last year was 100 per cent higher than in the previous year and will escalate dramatically again this year as the government takes over the auto insurance industry.

Ontario's budget calls for increased government spending of about 10 per cent; Manitoba's will exceed 15 per cent. But more remarkable, both governments aim at expanding the lagging economy, but take opposite routes.

Manitoba's officials apparently believe the economy can best be stimulated by launching large-scale public programs and accordingly will borrow $300 million to finance hydro, telephone and educational building programs.

Ontario takes the view that the private sector, not the public, should expand. Thus Treasuruer McKeough creates a corporate tax decrease which he says will reduce corporate tax by $125 million. Whether or not he is successful in absolute terms, Ontario is bound to be more attractive for industrial expansion than, say, Manitoba, which even before the Ontario tax cut had the highest corporate tax rate in Canada, while Ontario had one of the lowest.

Another point of interesting contrast is the approach to foreign investment. Ontario's budget urges tax incentive to enable Canadians to be competitive in buying Canadian companies.

McKeough introduced, for the first time in Canada, a resolution to permit Ontario companies to deduct the interest expenses they incur when they borrow money to buy shares in other Canadian companies.

This column has long urged this reform. These expenses are deductible for American companies so they are at a tremendous advantage when they bid against a Canadian buyer to acquire another Canadian company.

The Manitoba budget also criticizes foreign investment in our natural resource industries, perhaps as a peace-making nod to the NDP's waffle element, but makes no tax gesture to stimulate Canadian ownership.

In fact it goes the exact opposite by announcing that the government itself has entered into an agreement with reportedly Japanese and American interests to build a new mining town at Ruttan Lake to develop the resources located there.

And more interesting, the resource developers won't have to bring their foreign capital in to invest in the hospitals, schools, streets, sewers and the like, usually built by the mining companies. Manitoba will invest that money and levy property taxes to reimburse itself.

If these dichotomies in approach to common problems seem strange, they at least point out the individual need for harmonization in the national fiscal arena. Harmonization of the taxing concepts employed across Canada is also needed immediately, for we have already taken several steps into the tax jungle everyone dreads but as individuals cannot stop.

Some provinces, now Ontario too, are moving away from death taxes, while others still levy them. Ontario now introduces corporate tax changes which make that province's tax system different from that of her sister provinces.

Doing business on a national basis in Canada becomes more complex; the tax competition between provinces to attract people and capital becomes more fierce, with the poorer provinces at an almost fatal disadvantage.

Whether it is through the chicken and egg war, the threat of unilingualism in Quebec, or in the erosion of a consistent national tax structure, the balkanization of Canada continues.

'Difference Between Fact, Fiction in Stock Market'

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Haas is one of the 374 "specialists" on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

To the layman they are often described as the "brokers' broker." The NYS says they are the men who maintain a "fair and orderly market," and Richard New in his recent book The Wall Street Jungle stops just short of calling them out and out crooks.

New starts off in the preface by telling a yarn about mobster Lucky Luciano's visit to the floor of the NYSE.

"When the operations of floor specialists had been explained to him, he said: 'A terrible thing happened. I realized I'd joined the wrong mob.' "

Later, New writes: "Unless the investor understands that it is the specialist who determines the price of his stock, that a stock is only worth what its specialist is willing to pay for it, he doesn't understand the difference between fact and fiction in the stock market."

Haas says New doesn't know what he's talking about.

"The only guff I took when the book came out was because I spent the time to read the book," he says.

ROLE TWOFOLD

Haas's day as a specialist starts at 10 a.m. as the gong signals the start of the trading on the NYSE. A specialist is just what the name implies. Each specialist handles one or more stocks. Haas is the specialist for seven, including U.S. Steel, Royal Dutch and Raytheon.

Basically his role is twofold. Brokers who have customers who want to trade in U.S. Steel, say, come to Haas and tell him how many shares — 100s or multiples thereof, please — and what price they want to buy at and sell for.

Haas enters all of these into a notebook. When the stock rises or falls to fit the orders, Haas executes them. He picks up between $1.15 and $4.65 per 100 shares for the effort, more money than it sound since some of the orders are for thousands of shares.

His second function, that of "making a market," is where the specialist comes under some fire.

SIMULATES TRADING

He has all the listings of who is willing to sell for what and buy for how much. Of course, those who want to sell want to do so for more than those who want to buy.

Say, for example, that there are 500 shares of U.S. Steel for sale at $31; 1,000 for sale at $31⅛; 2,000 for sale at $32 etc. — on up to ridiculous highs. Then, on the other side of Haas's notebook are the "buy" listings — say a buyer for 1,000 shares at $28, another who wants 500 for $29.

Obviously there is a gap between the buys and sells. Haas's job, then, is to play financial cupid. He could buy or sell at $30, or both, thus activating the trading.

The specialist then makes his money in two ways — over-all buying and selling for his company, in Haas's case it's Benton and Co., and in acting as the broker's broker.

The latter way is how the specialist system began back in 1879. A board member had broken his leg and was unable to move around the floor. So he stationed himself at one of the busiest posts, and the other brokers, knowing he wasn't going anywhere, simply left their orders with him so they could be free to move around.

Soon the man with the broken leg began turning quite a profit and others picked out busy posts around the floor and did likewise.

B.C. First Investment Choice

British Columbia is the number one choice for investment in Canada, Premier Bennett said Friday after having lunch with 31 European bankers.

"It shows the great interest foreign investors have in the development of British Columbia," Bennett said after meeting the bankers.

They were from the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Belgium, Spain and Italy and are touring the province under the guidance of A. E. Ames, investment broker.

Bennett said he told the bankers B.C. is the only province that doesn't tax private enterprise for the purpose of offering subsidies to competitors of those taxed.

"They all said British Columbia is the number one choice in all Canada for

HOTELS BATTLE FRAUD

CALGARY (CP) — Some city hotels have formed a scheme called "skip-chain" to help prevent fraudulent use of their facilities.

As soon as one hotel realizes that someone has skipped out without paying for a room, passed a bad cheque, or committed any other offence, that hotel calls another one in the group.

The message is passed on and within minutes every hotel in the organization is aware of the description of the alleged offender and the particulars of the offence.

A Calgary hotel accountant said the system has been working on and off in recent years, but has since been perfected and has reduced instances of fraud "remarkably."

City motel operators have run the scheme for more than six years with "a great deal of success," said one spokesman.

Hotel group officials hope their system will be developed to include all hotels and motels in Calgary.

BANK TO OFFER SHARES TO TRINIDAD RESIDENTS

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (UPI) — The Royal Bank of Canada will establish a locally incorporated bank toward the end of the year, with 51 per cent of the new bank's shares to be placed in the hands of local citizens within a period of five years.

The announcement was made by Francis Prevatt, minister of finance for Trinidad and Tobago, and the Royal Bank's district manager for Trinidad and Tobago and the Eastern Caribbean, C. P. de Souza.

Stock in the new bank will be offered to nationals of Trinidad and Tobago as soon as possible after incorporation.

Airlines Hit Hard By Over-Optimism

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Over optimism in air transportation during the 1960s has resulted in cost cutting and the laying idle of equipment by airlines, says H. B. Main of Vancouver, assistant vice-president of CP Air.

He said the over optimism was on the part of the airlines, governments and then the public because airlines all over the world had experienced unprecedented growth for 10-15 years.

The airlines over-estimated traffic growth because they could see no traffic recession, the governments of various countries licenced heavily and the public reacted to a stabilizing of air fares after 25 years of continually reduced prices.

With traffic growth slowing to as low as two per cent a year from the familiar 17 to 20 per cent, Main said, airlines had to cut costs.

"All are cutting costs in every conceivable manner. Many are reducing capabilities to realistic requirements even though it means laying up $10 million of equipment," he said.

Main was speaking at a dinner held by the London District Transportation Club in connection with National Transportation Week.

Oil Firm, B.C. Share Job Plan

The provincial education department will help select 27 students for summer jobs made available by Imperial Oil Ltd., in a special job program.

The $250,000 program, will provide 250 additional jobs for students across Canada. B.C.'s share will be $27,000 on a prorated enrolment basis.

Of the 27 jobs, 10 will be for girls. Eligible students must have completed at least one year of post secondary education. Jobs will be related to students' educational goals.

Education Minister Donald Brothers said the program is an example of good corporate citizenship and he encouraged other companies to follow the example in creating summer jobs for students.

Esquimalt Base Confirmation Set

Most Rev. F. J. Spence, of Charlottetown, auxiliary bishop to the military vicar, Maurice Cardinal Roy, will officiate Sunday at the confirmation of 91 candidates from the military families of Esquimalt.

The ceremony will be conducted at the 10:30 mass in Our Lady Star of the Sea Chapel in Belmont Park, Colwood.

Dutch World Leaders In Salvage Business

By CHRISTOPHER WALKER
London Observer

Struggling with ropes in a heavy sea is only a part of the massive ocean-rescue operations set up from a quiet office in Rotterdam. To keep ahead in the salvage business calls for speed, the latest equipment — and a certain courage. But the rewards are huge: so huge that they often earn resentment.

Preachers along the north coast of Holland once used to offer a special prayer: "Dear Lord, if there has to be a disaster at sea, we pray that the crew may be saved, the cargo valuable, and that it may happen close to our shores."

In public at least, the prayers stopped long ago. But the Dutch are more firmly established than ever as the world's leaders in the dangerous and highly profitable business of ocean salvage.

Holland's complicated inland network of canals and rivers forced the Dutch to learn about salving ships. Then they began to explore the possibility of doing it for others — at a fee. The first Dutch ocean-going tug, paddle-wheel propelled, was launched in 1843. Others followed fast.

For the British Navy and the handful of tiny British salvage concerns, the outcome of the Pacific Glory affair must have been embarrassingly predictable. As soon as the crippled tanker threatened to smother British beaches with its 77,000 tons of crude oil, it became only a matter of time before the owners looked to Holland for help. It was painfully obvious that Britain had neither the expertise nor the equipment to refloat her and tow her to port.

The company chosen was L. Smit of Rotterdam, the largest ocean towing and salvage group in the world. They went about the job with typical panache. Within hours, Smit chartered a Caravelle in Holland and flew it to Southampton carrying experts and half a ton of equipment. After it was all over, Sir John Nicholson, president of the U.K. Chamber of Shipping, described it as "one of the most remarkable operations of its kind."

Only weeks earlier, Smit had done the same for an even bigger tanker, the 216,000-ton Aquarius, badly damaged in a collision off the coast of Oman. The distance between the two jobs gives an idea of the company's scope.

With their fleet of 140 vessels, including 15 ocean-going tugs, Smit have little difficulty in winning the lion's share of the world's major salvage contracts. From the Pacific Glory alone, they can expect a fee of about £400,000.

In Holland, people follow the exploits of Smit's globe-trotting crews with a sort of patriotic enthusiasm. Captaining a tug is the ambition of many adventurous young Dutchmen. Each tug's whereabouts and the names of individual crew members are printed each month in a special magazine — often alongside obituaries which are a constant reminder of the dangers involved.

Abroad, the activities of Dutch salvors are not always so popular. Since 1918, the Dutch practice of keeping fleets of powerful ocean-going tugs on permanent standby around the world's busiest shipping lanes has given them a name as vultures. It is a criticism which they bitterly resent, and at the time of the Pacific Glory the company hired a full-time British public relations staff and installed them in a suite at Portsmouth's smartest hotel.

One British tug captain once went so far as to announce publicly that he would ram Smit's tugs if they continued to lurk around the entrance of his harbor at every sign of bad weather. Similar hostility has greeted Smit's men in many other corners of the world.

In Genoa the company is working on the 24,000-ton British freighter London Valor, sunk in the harbor with a valuable cargo of chrome ore. "From the beginning I could feel that the Italians resented us," says Dutch salvage inspector Klaas Reinigert.

Jealousy arises from the rich pickings successful salvors can earn. To date, the highest single fee Smit have ever been paid for a job has been £700,000, but with tankers soon expected to approach the million ton mark, this figure is sure to rise.

As well as being spectacular, the economics of salvage are also unique. All major contracts are written on a Lloyd's Open Form, originally drawn up to prevent the lengthy squabbles which used to break out between men who were asked to save a ship and the men who owned it.

The vital phrase in the form is "No Cure. No Pay." Quite simply, if the salvage company does not succeed in saving the distressed ship, it gets nothing for its efforts — not even cover for its high expenses.

This is not as bad for the salvors as it might first appear. They are not obliged to sign a contract if they do not rate the chances of success high. And the early risk does much to boost the final fee. Smit will never work without an Open Form—and even the company wives are expected to be able to negotiate one over the telephone.

"We like the forms. They take all the emotion out of business," explains joint managing director P. Kleyn van Willigen. "They lay down the rules of the game without putting any figures to them". The figures are worked out later — usually at least a year after a job is completed — by an unemotional Lloyd's arbitration panel sitting in London.

The gentlemanly atmosphere of the panel, which consists of a handful of top barristers acting alternatively for salvors and owners, is a far cry from the scramble among competing salvage companies to be first at the scene of a wreck. Even if a Smit tug arrives second, sheer size is often enough to win them the job. As a crewman on the 11,000 horsepower tug Nord Zee explained: "If someone smaller has arrived first, we just drop anchor and wait around looking beefy". Fees are worked out on a percentage of the value saved, which means that salvage men are often more interested in the cargo than the vessel — especially if it is oil.

The Smit group have one of the most sophisticated communication systems in the shipping world. Their radio room on the quay at the port of Maassluis is manned 24 hours a day. Inside, there is a constant air of excitement. On the wall, huge maps pinpoint the whereabouts of rival tugs, and all around are ticker-tapes, telephones and transmitters keeping the operators in touch with any possible news of an SOS.

The company has tugs permanently standing by at a number of strategic and romantic sounding places including Curaco, the Azores, Bahrein and Singapore. At the moment it is busy training Britons so that it can have a tug stationed in the Channel sailing under a British flag. The tugs on station cruise around waiting for a "casualty" (salvagers have a liking for medical terms) — and often this one can lead to months of frustrating inactivity.

Life on board is deliberately made as comfortable as possible, and Smit makes a point of flying home the entire crews of their tugs every six months for a break with their long-suffering families.

It is the race to be first, the big money and the very real risks taken that give salvaging its glamor. No amount of technological advance or sober business efficiency can destroy the essential buccaneering spirit. Among Smit's 1,300 employees, this is to be found especially with the salvage inspectors: tough self-made men who take charge of individual operations. Many joined as 15-year-old boy entrants earning £10 a month. Inspectors can earn around £5,000 a year plus bonuses.

Inside the Smit organization there is a marked difference between the men at the top, the men in Rotterdam who work out the legal and business side, and the men out at sea on the job. The company is private and is unofficially valued at over £50 million.

The two joint managing directors, van Willigen and William Voetor, and their families hold the bulk of the shares. Both are mild men and neither would stand out in a crowd.

The tug crews, the divers and the inspectors are much more in keeping with the image. They are renowned for their hectic behaviour ashore. A legendary figure is the director in charge of worldwide salvage operations, Captain Willem Moerkerk.

At 49, Moerkerk speaks English with a strong Canadian flavor and has worked in 63 different countries. He is idolized by his men, both for his skill and his love of expansive gestures: once after a successful job raising a sunken ship from freezing seas off Heligoland, he hired two buses and drove the whole salvage team down to Hamburg for a wild night in the Reeperbahn.

BUSINESS & FINANCE

Anaconda

The chairman of Anaconda Co. says the copper company's profits were reduced by $21 million in 1970 because of nationalization of its mines in Chile and its withdrawal from Peru.

This represented a decline of almost $1 a share, C. Jay Parkinson told the annual meeting of stockholders.

Parkinson said earnings from all operations outside of South America increased by more than 50 per cent last year over 1969.

Melton-Austin

Melton Real Estate Ltd. of Edmonton has purchased all the shares of A. E. Austin and Co. Ltd., a Vancouver real estate firm.

The purchase of shares from Austin Investments Corp. Ltd. is subject to ratification by the Vancouver company's shareholders and approval by the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

The Vancouver firm, which started in 1906 and has two offices, will retain its name but will be under the presidency of Jack Sherrin, vice-president of Melton which has offices in Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver and Saskatoon.

Captain Int.

Net loss, including extraordinary items, totalled $205,338 in 1970, reports Captain International Industries Ltd. The amount is equal to seven cents a share compared with 28 cents in 1969.

CI had a $757,744 loss in the previous year, said president G. Arnold Armstrong.

The Vancouver-based company had its highest productivity last year, taking $1.6 million in revenue, or 77 per cent higher. "Two extraordinary items — the cost of completing U.S. Securities and Exchange registration, and foreign exchange loss — cost the company $99,558.

REG CLARKSON . . . beat good ones

Sentiment Follows Reg But Money on Wakeham

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Bill Wakeham hasn't lost sight of the fact that times and whims change.

That may explain why sentiment will ride with Reg Clarkson and the money on Wakeham when the two meet Sunday in the championship finale of the 1971 Times Vancouver Island Open golf tournament.

The 36-hole playoff at Victoria Golf Club matches the tournament-tested professional against the unheralded amateur from Gorge Vale. And Wakeham, the pro, is a prohibitive favorite to take it all.

That's the main event, starting with 18-hole marches at 9:10 a.m. and 1:40 p.m.

Supporting roles belong to Harry Panteluk of Gorge Vale and Uplands' Marty Smith, finalists in the handicap playoff for the Hugh Francis Trophy. Panteluk and Smith, both of whom play to a seven handicap, lead the way off the first tee at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

And, as always, it's a free show. There is no admission charge.

Wakeham is bidding for his third Island title. He became the only junior to win the Island Open when he scored in 1959, then repeated again in 1963.

EDITOR: DOUG PEDEN

sports

Clarkson, 45, is bidding to become the second Victoria golfer to win both the handicap and open titles, a feat accomplished previously by Joe Briggs. Reg also is the second member of his family to reach the Island final. His brother Vince was the 1956 finalist.

The "underdog" role doesn't bother Reg. That was his status throughout his march to this year's final. He defeated, in succession, ex-pro Ron Cush, Uplands' Ken Nott, former city Amateur champion Rick Kent, and, finally, professional Norm Boden, another two-time Island champion.

Because he is favored, the sentimental cycle has turned on Wakeham. He sensed it last week when he defeated 16-year-old Bob Beauchemin in the semi-finals at Uplands.

Friends and family clapped hardest for Wakeham. Generally, the gallery aligned itself to Beauchemin's corner, however politely.

"It just made me realize," said Wakeham, "that I'm an old man of 30. It's the old story of people rooting for the underdog.

"It doesn't bother me. As a matter of fact, it produces the same result. When I was a junior I tried harder because the crowd was with me and I didn't want to disappoint them.

"Now I'm trying just as hard because I want to live up to the favorite's role."

Clarkson's record in match play is enough to force Wakeham to put up his guard.

"He beat some good ones to get here," Wakeham said bluntly.

Wakeham, undisputedly, is the one with finesse. Clarkson is the "scrambler."

Reg displayed superb chipping and putting, especially in his triumphs over Kent and Boden.

Not to be overlooked is the compactness of the Oak Bay course. It's 5,948 yards is tailored for a scrambler's game.

FIERY HILL FINDS WAY TO LEAVE TOURNAMENT

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Stormy Dave Hill purposely signed an incorrect scorecard and was disqualified from the Colonial National Invitation golf tournament Friday.

Hill, centre of several major controversies in recent years, faces a possible fine of $150 for his actions.

He had no chance of making the cut for the final two rounds today and Sunday.

He had an opening-round 77, then his scorer, Dick Lotz, marked down a six for Hill's score on the final hole. Hill changed it to a two and signed for it, giving him a second-round 81 when his score should have been 85.

BILL WALKER

Now it is 1975 and the changeover is complete. The Western Canada Soccer League is set to embark on its sixth season of continuous operation. The Pacific Coast Soccer League, meanwhile, has just wound up another tough campaign.

The regular schedule of games will commence after the Labor Day weekend.

What's that? You thought the Western Canada League was a summer league and the Coast League was a winter competition?

Where have you been? Oh sure, it once was. But that was back in that other age — circa 1970. Even in 1971. That's when summer soccer had taken hold.

The Victoria Royals had emerged triumphant that first season, and had been one of the finest soccer clubs ever to play on the Island.

You don't know the story? You should.

Jim Irvine, an Irish renegade from Ladysmith, had a brain wave. Why not play soccer in the summer, he thought, and give a lot of deserving youngsters the chance to play? Besides, he liked the game so much he would bring out a coach from England. Maybe some players.

So Brian Hughes came, played, and coached, and came back again the next year. He was a fine coach, and did a lot for football.

But that's when things began to happen. In 1971. Because Victoria at that time had another good football team.

Victoria United had been doing well in the Pacific Coast Soccer League, a league that used to run from September to May. And as the playoffs hadn't been concluded (or even started) by mid-May, one schedule simply ran into the other. As many of the United players played for the Royals, how could they play for both? They couldn't.

This naturally got the B.C. Soccer Commission all upset. How could two leagues operate at the same time and with the same players? They couldn't and so permission to affiliate was denied the Royals, and also a Vancouver team, the Spartans.

A dastardly deed? Indeed it was! Royals, defending champions, not being allowed to play! A protest was made to the Canadian Soccer Association.

Suffice to say, that eventually the summer soccer league, which originally had started in May of 1970, got under way, in 1971, in June.

That, of course, fouled up the start of the Pacific Coast Soccer League season which was scheduled to begin in September, because by then the Western Canada playoffs were still going on.

This put the PCSL officials in a dither. They now had no players. But their reaction was swift. Some might call it vindictive. They didn't start the 1971-72 season until February of 1972. They had threatened this action earlier, so it wasn't really a surprise. And under the new rules, players had to sign up in January. If they did this, then they couldn't play in the WCSL until after June.

Now, who would be without players? Hmmm?

Aha! But the Western Canada boys had an ace up their belt strap. They decided that if the PCSL could change its dates, so could they. The WCSL schedule would now run from July to October. Players would be available and, as nobody was using the dates, certainly the commission could have no objection.

This was fine, and a success at the gate too.

But now the PCSL boys decided they wanted more of that good weather gravy train. Spring crowds had been great. Why not go all summer? So they stretched out their schedule until August. Besides, now they could play interlocking games against prairie clubs. These teams you see, could no longer compete in the WCSL because of the vagaries associated with the weather in the fall.

This had the earmarks of forcing the Western Canada group into a corner again. But not for long. Officials quickly came up with a winner. As many of the first-class players weren't doing anything after the summer, perhaps they would like to play in a so-called Autumn League? They would.

And that's why today, the Western Canada Soccer League, which started in 1970 as a summer league, is now operating in the winter with only Coast clubs, and the Pacific Coast Soccer League, which once was a winter league, now plays in the summer, and against teams from the prairies.

The change, as noted earlier, is complete.

Why didn't the two leagues get together and straighten things out for the good of soccer as a whole?

It Took Willie Eight Swings To Find Range

By The Associated Press

John O'Donoghue came out of the Montreal bullpen throwing strikes to Willie Stargell.

He should have quit while he was ahead.

Stargell, batting against O'Donoghue with two on in the 13th inning Friday night, fouled off eight consecutive pitches, then struck back with his 14th home run of the season, sending Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-2 victory over the Expos.

The victory, fifth for the Pirates in their last six games, kept them a half step ahead of St. Louis Cardinals in the National League East.

New York Mets beat Atlanta Braves 6-2 behind fireballer Nolan Ryan and the Cardinals bounced back from an 8-3 deficit to bomb San Diego Padres 15-8.

GIANTS TOPPLED

Houston Astros ambushed San Francisco Giants 4-1; Cincinnati Reds topped Philadelphia Phillies 7-3 and Los Angeles Dodgers swamped Chicago Cubs 8-1 in other NL games.

In the American League, Tom Bradley turned on his former California Angels teammates with a five-hit shutout and carried Chicago White Sox to a 3-0 victory; Boston Red Sox downed Baltimore Orioles 8-4 in 10 innings; Minnesota Twins walloped Oakland Athletics 10-1; Detroit Tigers nipped Washington Senators 1-0, and Cleveland Indians shaded New York Yankees 8-7.

Milwaukee was rained out at Kansas City after jumping into a 4-1 lead in the fifth inning.

HAS BEEN OUT

Stargell, who had been out of the starting lineup since last Saturday with an injured right hand, singled in the seventh inning before Bob Robertson's home run gave Pittsburgh a 2-1 lead.

But the Expos tied it in the ninth on Boots Day's run-scoring single. The deadlock stood until the 13th, when Vic Davalillo and Roberto Clemente stroked one-out singles off Howie Reed. O'Donoghue, a left-hander, then was brought in to face the lefthand-hitting Stargell.

Their duel ended with Stargell pounding an 0-2 pitch over the centre field fence for a 5-2 Pittsburgh lead. The Pirates added a wrapup run on an error, a walk and Manny Sanguillen's single.

For Stargell, who set an all-time record with 11 homers in April, the swat was his first since May 7, when he connected at Los Angeles. He sat out six of the Pirates' previous 11 games and appeared only as a pinch-hitter in another.

Despite the layoff, the brawny outfielder leads the majors with 36 runs batted in, shares the home-run lead with Atlanta slugger Hank Aaron and has a .330 batting average—10th highest in the National League.

Rick Massengale Moves Into Lead

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Rick Massengale shot a four-under-par 68 Friday and vaulted into the second-round lead of the $25,000 Maumelle Open golf tournament.

Massengale had a 36-hole total of 140 and held a one-shot lead over Tom Ulozas and Curtis Sifford.

Bob Bourne, the first-round leader, skied to a 78 and was at 146.

Knudson's New Putter Working Like a Charm

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — George Knudson found the mark with a new putter Friday to take a one-stroke lead after two rounds in the $125,000 Colonial National Invitation golf tournament.

The Toronto golfer shaved a stroke from par for a 69 and a 36-hole total of 136, one better than Jack Montgomery, a Fort Worth native seeking his first professional victory in six years on the tour.

Lee Trevino was two strokes back with a 68 and 138, followed by Dave Stockton and Jerry McGee, each with 139. McGee stroked a 68 and Stockton a 70.

Defending champion Homero Blancas, who led with Knudson after the first round, dropped back to a 73 for 140.

South African Gary Player was par Thursday for 143, one stroke ahead of Wilf Homeniuk of Winnipeg who shot a 74.

CASPER BLOWS

Billy Casper ballooned to a 75 for 148, the cutoff figure for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Knudson's putter is saucer-shaped, with a flat area on one side, and is painted black.

DESTROYING 300 YEARS OF TRADITION

'Horse of the People'

BALTIMORE (AP) — Canonero II, knocking on the door of thoroughbred racing's elusive Triple Crown, is, in his owner's eyes, "truly a horse of the people."

Owner Don Pedro Baptista said: "We have come up here — two Indians and a black — with a horse that nobody believed in and we're destroying 300 years of American racing tradition dominated by the flower and the cream of your society."

"You can't imagine the impact this has had in Venezuela. Canonero II is truly a horse of the people, something the people can identify with."

To sell Canonero II — and the owner reports the offers are as high as $5 million — could bring the ill will of many fans in Venezuela.

"How do you fix a price?" he asked. "This horse is without a price.

The Indians to whom Baptista refers are himself and jockey Gustavo Avila, although neither is pure Indian.

The black is trainer Juan Arias, perhaps the first Negro to saddle a winner in the Derby and Preakness.

The 300 years of tradition are a combination of 97 Derby's 96 Preaknesses and 104 Belmonts. Baptista is confident of his colt's chances in June 5 Belmont race, the last leg of the Triple Crown. Calument Farm's Citation, in 1948, was the last to win the three big races.

Mount Douglas Takes Lead —Five Meet Records Fall

The boys exhibited good manners. Girls came first.

But there was nothing polite about the manner in which Mount Douglas barged into first place in the seventh annual Vancouver Island inter-high school track and field championships.

Mount Douglas took off and was running strongly in its bid to pick off the team aggregate title for a record fourth straight year.

The defending champions moved into today's windup events at Centennial Stadium with a 12½-point edge over Oak Bay. Claremont was a solid third.

Five records were established in Friday's events, and the girls bounced into the spotlight by setting four of the new standards.

The record-breakers were Brenda Steffanson of Nanaimo, Lorna McHattie of Claremont, Lynda May and Jill Pelland of Mt. Doug, and Esquimalt's Gary Lockyer, the only boy to establish a new mark.

Despite the records, Friday's greatest excitement came in the committee rooms. Meet officials were forced to scurry and revamp their program when unexpected scratches forced cancellation of some heats and advanced a few events to finals.

United Tackles Croatia With Two Stars Absent

BOB BOLITHO
. . . sitting berth

Victoria United will go gunning for a berth in the Pacific Coast Soccer League final without the services of two key players.

When the Victorians step out on the Royal Athletic Park pitch against Vancouver Croatia at 2 p.m. Monday, talented Ray Telford and Ash Valdal will be missing from the lineup.

Telford, a left back, is currently in Ontario for training with the Canadian national team and Valdal, a powerful attacker late in the regular season, is suffering from torn knee ligaments, suffered last weekend in a match against the Victoria and District All-Stars.

During the season, United, which finished in the runner-up berth behind Vancover Columbus, broke even in three clashes with third-place Croatia.

Columbus will also be battling in a semi-final Monday, meeting Vancouver Eintracht, a 2-1 winner Friday over North Shore in a playoff for fourth place.

United may not suffer greatly in the personnel department, thanks to the return of George Hyne, Danny Lomas and Bob Bolitho, three schoolboy stars who are back with the team.

They missed several league games while on a British tour with the Victoria and District high school all-stars.

Coach Frank Healy has included Bolitho and Hyne in Monday's starting lineup and Lomas will be utilized as a reserve.

Bolitho starred in United's last league match against Eintracht, scoring once and assisting on the other two goals in a 3-3 tie.

TROPHY PRESENTATIONS

The rest of the lineup includes Ike MacKay, Gil McIlraith, and Jan Bentley up front, Barry Salder in goal, a backline of Jim Irvine, Peter Robarts, Ron Thompson and Howie Anderson and link man Brian Robinson.

Tom Westwater and Mark Robb are the other reserves.

Former lieutenant-governor George Pearkes will present two trophies at half-time as part of United's individual player awards ceremony.

The trophies will go to highest goal-scorer and most valuable defensive player. Two additional awards include the Evening Optimists Trophy for most improved player coming up through juvenile ranks and the President's Trophy, for most valuable player.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) —Marshall Johnston of Cleveland Barons was named the winner of the Eddie Shore Plaque as the American Hockey League's outstanding defenceman of the 1970-71 season.

QUEEN'S FILLY TAKES STAKES

LONDON (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth's filly, Albany, increased her prospects for the Epsom Oaks horse race with a victory in the Sandleford Priory Stakes Friday.

One leading London bookmaker immediately cut Albany's odds for the Epsom Oaks classic June 5 to 10 to 1 from 100 to 1. The Queen was on hand to see Albany win by a length over Tevere.

Lorna Adds 19 Feet to Discus Mark

Miss McHattie produced the most definite record on the opening day, adding more than 19 feet to the former girls' discus mark with a heave of 124 feet, 4½ inches.

Miss May topped the javelin record she established last year by almost eight feet with a toss of 135' 5", three feet more than the city mark she set last week.

Miss Steffanson also went to a field event for her record. She won the high jump with a leap of 5' 1¾", topping last year's mark of 5'1½" set by Lindsay Jack of Mt. Douglas.

Miss Pelland's mark came in the qualifying heat for today's 80-metre hurdles final. She clipped four-tenths of a second off Penny May's 1969 timing with a run of 11.4 seconds.

Lockyer, the city 1,500-metre champion, can give Oak Bay's Mike Morrill some credit for a record romp of 4:31.3. Morrill also under last year's record of 4:34.8, set by Claremont's Tim Murphy, pressed Lockyer all the way.

Victoria athletes dominated the day's events. Only two other representatives from north of the Malahat, in addition to Miss Steffanson, managed to post victories.

They were Gail Turney, the starry sprinter from Cowichan who won the 100 metres final over Miss Pelland, and Nanaimo's Tom Pink, winner of the triple jump.

Sandra Palmer Leading by Four

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — Sandra Palmer charged into a four-stroke, first-round lead Friday in the $38,000 Suzuki International Golf Tournament.

Miss Palmer, seeking her second consecutive women's pro tour victory, shot 68, four strokes under par.

Four Post Triples In Reynolds Meet

When good fortune strikes it's often in threes, as four athletes at Reynolds High School's annual track and field meet Friday will probably tell you.

The four — Barry Scroggs, Leon Mitchell, Chris Hutchins and Janice Turner — posted triple victories.

But it was Scroggs, a junior middle-distance ace, who walked away with the biggest laurels. He streaked around the track at a faster clip than senior winners in both the 800 and 1,500 metres with times of two minutes 5.5 seconds and 4:30.7 respectively.

His 800-metre time outpaced senior winner John Fryer by 11.3 seconds while he was 3.1 seconds faster then senior Ken Gleam's time in the 1,500 metres.

JAVELIN TRIUMPH

Scroggs topped off the day with a winning throw in the junior javelin competition.

Of the other triple winners, Miss Turner won the junior girls' 200 metres, the long jump and the high jump. Mitchell captured both the senior boys' 100 and 200 metres before winning the long jump. Miss Hutchins was top competitor in the senior girls' class, with victories in the long jump, the 80-metre hurdles and the 100 metres.

In addition to the three-times, there were a number of double winners. Don MacRae won the 400 metres and discus in senior boys while Brian Montgomery took the junior 100 and 400-metre races.

In junior girls events Diane Wilson walked away with the 400 and 800 metres, Diana McDonald won the discus and shot put and Robin Reston was first in the 100 metres and 80metre hurdles.

In team competition it was the seniors who came out on top, with Grade 12 beating Grade 11, 208-197, and with Grade 10's 385 points defeating the combined eight and nine team's 278.

Saanich Club Wins Opener

NEW WESTMINSTER — Fowler Construction of Saanich outbattled a team from Calgary 10-8 here Friday night in the first round of a bantam invitational lacrosse tournement.

Surrey, Port Coquitlam and New Westminster also advanced with first-round wins at the three-day event, which ends Sunday.

Teams from British Columbia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are competing.

Football Stars With Californians

California All-Stars will have some "big time" talent in their lineup when they meet a Cowichan invitational side in an exhibition rugby match Wednesday at McAdam Park in Duncan.

The visitors will be coached by Pat Vincent, captain and scrum-half with the New Zealand All-Blacks in 1956, and contains several players from Stanford University, winner of the Rose Bowl football game on New Year's Day.

Jack Schultz, who received the most-valuable defensive player award for the Rose Bowl game, will play wing three-quarter on the touring side. Ron Kadziel, a Stanford forward standing six-four and weighing 225 pounds who is expected to join Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League this fall, is also in the lineup.

SELECTORS NAME TEAM

Players who will perform with the inviational team have been selected mainly from teams within the Victoria Rugby Union and include several stars from the host Cowichan club.

Cowichan representatives are wings Rick Price and Barry Grenhalgh, fullback Ronnie Ronnigan, prop forward Gudmun Gudmundseth, scrum-half Gerry Mitchell and wing forward Bob Hale.

Three players are included from Oak Bay Wanderers — Mike Penn at number eight forward, standoff Dave Graham and prop Bob Iverson.

HOOKER FROM UBC

Wing-forward Al Foster and second-row forward Pete Simmons come from James Bay Athletic Association while others include Rick Rollins of Castaways, Jim Temple of Saanich Velox, second-row forward Michael O'Connor of Uvic Vikings and hooker Bob Jicklings of Duncan, who is with the University of British Columbia.

Starting time for the match has been set at 6:30 p.m. to allow Victoria fans a chance to make the trip to Duncan after work.

Calgary Defeated

CALGARY (CP) — The touring San Fernando men's field hockey team from Argentina outclassed a Calgary all-star squad Friday night but managed only a 1-0 victory on a goal by Ricardo Cabrera.

Village Cricket

A village cricket match at Centennial Park, Central Saanich, Wednesday resulted in a draw between Archangels and Castaways of the Victoria and District Cricket Association. Archangels, a Central Saanich team, were bolstered by teachers from Brentwood and Shawnigan schools.

Chelsea Collects Cup Winners Cup

ATHENS (CP) — Chelsea maintained England's impressive tradition in the European Cup Winners Cup soccer competition when it clinched the trophy with a 2-1 win over Real Madrid of Spain in their final replay here Friday night.

The match was a replay after the two teams drew 1-1, after extra time on Wednesday.

Goals by John Dempsey in the 31st minute and Peter Osgood eight minutes later brought the London club its first European trophy and thwarted Real's hopes of winning the competition at its first attempt.

The Spaniards pulled one goal back in the 75th minute through Fleitas but they were unable to earn another last-ditch reprieve as they did in the game Wednesday.

Chelsea is the fourth English club to win the trophy following Tottenham Hotspur, West Ham United and Manchester City.

How We Lost Alaska Claim

By JAMES McCOOK

Dr. Huculak of Vancouver opens an old wound by his scholarly examination of the negotiations of the 1820s which led to treaties between Russia, Britain and the United States on division of the north-west coast of North America.

When Canada thinks about it — and she has been thinking about it in recent years of talk about sovereignty in the North — there is a sense of irritation about the boundaries of Alaska.

The British had explored the coast by sea and the aggressive fur-traders from Hudson Bay and Montreal had put their outposts where no other white people ventured. And yet the Russians were able to gain rights to territory far from the coast.

What they gained by treaties in the 1820s was transferred to the United States in 1867 when they sold Alaska for $7,200,000 in gold.

Huculak states the obvious when he says Britain was the loser in the negotiations with Russia 150 years ago and he gives credit to a fellow-Ukrainian, Pierre de Poletica (1778-1849), Russian ambassador to the United States. Poletica proved his skill in dealings with John Quincy Adams for the United States and George and Stratford Canning for Britain. The Russian claims to territory, especially inland areas, were not imposing but Poletica was a master negotiator.

Poletica's childhood was uncommonly painful. At the age of four he was sent to join an elder brother in the cadet corps establishment in St. Petersburg, family influence having him admitted before the normal age of six. He was so small that he could hardly dress himself and kept losing his shoe laces and the rag issued him for a handkerchief, "for which I was often and severely switched," he recalled.

The continuous pain of punishment hindered his progress in study until his second or third year in the corps school when the harsh discipline was a little eased. Poletica disliked the army for which he was being trained and when school was done he became a translator, which brought him into contact with diplomats and scientists he admired.

He became friendly with a French diplomat and Tsar Alexander's spies reported this. The French were suspect in Russia and Poletica was never fully forgiven. Others received credit for work he had done. Fluent in English, French, German, Ukrainian and Russian, Poletica was an engaging personality who won the respect of the British and American negotiators while handicapped by abrupt and uninformed orders from the Tsar.

Adams for the United States knew precisely what he wanted and the Russians understood and accepted his position. The British were uncertain.

George Canning as Foreign Secretary was poorly informed on Pacific Coast questions and his cousin, Stratford, as ambassador to Washington was considered by Adams to be the most trying of all the foreign ministers with whom the American had to deal but "his great virtue is sincerity."

More than sincerity was needed in the negotiations. Adams had been American minister to Russia and had developed a friendship with the Tsar which facilitated the Russian-American negotiations. The British seemed out in the cold.

A mountain on the Canada-Alaska border was named for Poletica. Huculak says it is 7,620 feet high while the peak honoring George Canning is only 6,927 feet. That seems just.

British explorer Martin Frobisher.

EARLY NORTHERN VOYAGES

They Did It the Hard Way

By TORCHY ANDERSON

When Columbus discovered America he did not know what he had discovered. It took a lot of imagination, courage, greed and speculation on the part of others to gain even the first glimmer of realization that he, and they, had not bumped into a mere minor obstacle on the short route to China.

In more than 700 pages of this new book Admiral Samuel Eliot Morison (U.S. Navy), a man who makes a habit of turning history into best sellers, devotes himself to the northern voyages to

THE EUROPEAN DISCOVERY OF AMERICA, by Samuel Eliot Morison. Oxford University Press. $15.

North America from the earliest legends to 1600. This accomplished academic historian and practical sailor, born in Boston in 1887, is working now on a sister volume, "Southern Voyages."

The admiral has the rare ability to write history with accuracy spiced with humor. He can make history fun without losing basic honesty.

After all, none of the explorers were perfect and their actions were sometimes ignoble, sometimes stupid, occasionally heroic and, quite often, funny. Example: Frobisher and his officers dancing on an icy shore to the tune of the ship's musicians in order to entertain the Eskimos. One gathers the show was a flop.

The Eskimos may have been amused but they did not stow their harpoons, spears and other tools of their way of life.

Admiral Morison goes into the field of history like an expert bird dog trained to bring game into flight. He misses little. In research for this book he travelled much. A friend flew him over the coastline from Florida to Baffin Island.

He took many aerial photographs himself and the best that can be said of them is that superb historians are not always supreme photographers. Other photographs, maps, ancient pictures by the score, are excellent. His notes and references are very extensive and follow each chapter.

Morison makes one realize that voyages to the west from Europe were once regarded as speculatively as we regarded a trip to the moon only a few years ago. The "road to Cathay" was shrouded in a fog of myth, monsters, demons and heaven on earth.

The ancient cartographers loathed empty spaces on their maps — hence many islands that did not exist and coastlines as imaginary as the monsters. And these imaginary isles were visited by some imaginary mariners.

Into this ocean of mystery sailed St. Brendan and his Irish monks. Morison has some fun trying to figure out just where these holy sailors cruised, but the assumption appears to be that it was not too far from home. And they had a celestial supply that came up with the groceries at crucial moments.

The Admiral points out that the first European settlers on the bleak coast of Newfoundland were not Viking warriors but peaceful farmers and merchants taking their few cattle in search of new pastures. Their ships were not warships but ordinary cargo craft of quite a different pattern. So it appears the familiar picture of a tall-prowed ship with a horn-helmeted, well-armed Viking gazing landward, should be amended to include a rustic lookout, with maybe a cow sniffing the land breeze.

The author will have no part of the "finds" of Norse swords and inscriptions in the interior of the continent. This will, doubtless, bring down on his head the anger of chambers of commerce where these historic relics are a tourist lure.

To the Norsemen, North American natives, either Indians or Eskimos, were "skrellings" and they managed to annoy these people just as other Europeans were to do 500 years later. These five centuries were one of those gaps in interest by European nations that is hard to understand. Maybe they were too busy having wars and cutting off heads to sail off into the blue.

There are parts of this book that may lack interest for some readers, but I found few pages to skip. One of the most interesting contributions to the bare bones of voyages is the deep research by an expert into the ships, how they were built, how they sailed and, not to be forgotten, how badly they stank by the time they made landfall.

The men who braved these early voyages sustained what, to us, were fearful hardships. Their clothing was seldom dry, their food questionable at the best. The reek of their ships almost carries down wind into history.

They did it the hard, hard way.

The Demands People Make

Elizabeth Bowen has always been familiar with the darker corners of children's imaginations. Her heroine here is older but still somewhat of a child, and the dark shadows have a Gothic tinge about them.

Eva Trout is as ungainly as her name; a huge lump of a girl, who finds it hard to express herself. The death of her father has left her enormously rich, but she lacks love.

Reaching out for affection,

she invents an engagement, but when she turns to the acutual pople in her life she is betrayed. Then, after trying to use her money to build an independent life, she finds that she has unwittingly betrayed those who trust her.

Miss Bowen is concerned with the demands that people make on each other. Her deftness of touch strikes just the right note from a range of characters who never tip over the edge into grotesquerie. Even the landscapes have a cutting edge; they are used to express the personalities who live in them. It's a joy to read a novel of such unobtrusive skill. A. W. J.

Indian Culture Survives at Table

By STEVE HUME

First contact with the white man meant violent and destructive change for the Indian peoples of North America.

The energetic and ruthless European invaders cared little that ancient civilizations were being disrupted, and often whole social structures disappeared over night, and nations like the Beothuk people of Newfoundland vanished.

It is popular these days among the successful descendants of the conquering whites to guiltily lament the destruction of a unique culture based on profoundly different ways of looking at the world.

Only a remnant is left of the Indian culture that once extended from Arctic ice to southern desert and from Eastern forest to Western plains.

But the culture wasn't as soft as many of the romantically inclined would like to believe. It was pretty tough in many ways, and while some of the old patterns disappeared under pressure, others still exist.

One of the best ways to determine what areas within a culture were the strongest and most viable is to observe what activities and patterns are adopted by a conquering culture.

The Normans conquered Saxon Britain and imposed their own way of life, but the conquered people had their own vitality and before long the winners had adopted the ways of the losers.

It's reflected in both the language and the traditions of the latter day Britains.

The same thing applies to modern North Americans, not so much in terms of what we speak as in terms of what we eat.

The Art of Indian Cooking is a delightful little paperback that provides some sharp insights into those elements of Indian culture that have been among the hardiest and the best survivors.

The book catalogues nearly 200 Indian dishes from five general areas. There are the gardeners and gatherers of the American southwest, the fishermen of the Pacific Northwest, the wandering hunters of the plains, the planters of the south and the woodsmen of the east.

The list has been compiled by Yeffe Kimball, an Osage Indian and a consultant on Indian affairs to the U.S. government, and Jean Anderson, a journalist and cooking specialist.

THE ART OF AMERICAN INDIAN COOKING, by Yeffe Kimball and Jean Anderson. Avon Paperback. 95 cents.

Get the book and you'll find the recipes make fascinating reading as well as providing interesting and delicious dishes for your table.

You'll be amazed how many Indian dishes have been adopted into the standard diet of the North American and had their origins forgotten.

You'll be equally amazed at the number of easy to prepare dishes that depend upon vegetables and other produce readily available at your nearest supermarket.

The book is really worth buying. It's a chance to wow your dinner guests with some exotic gourmet dishes that can be made with a couple of squash, some greens and a few cups of unroasted peanuts.

Writings Reveal Emotions of Prison

By JUDITH YEMEN

Canada's penal system, which condemns a man to mental rot in a nine-by-five-foot cell, has been roundly criticized by politicians, social scientists, writers and the public.

Based on the "cancer" theory, the system removes the convicted criminal from normal society lest this disease spread to and infect those around him.

He is wrapped in the security of a prison cell, forbidden to associate with those around him, and left to stew in the juices of his mental agonies. This intensifies one of his basic problems: the inability to communicate in socially acceptable ways.

Canadian writer Gertrude Katz is one of those critics who believe that the convict needs contact with normal society in order to change himself. He also needs help in learning how to talk about himself and his feelings.

Mrs. Katz spent two years working with convicts in several Eastern penitentiaries, helping them put down on paper what was pouring through their minds.

The result is The Time Gatherers, perhaps the first anthology of convicts' writings published while they are still behind bars.

The literary content of pieces from these fledgling writers cannot be criticized. Most of the men have limited formal educations and Mrs. Katz, while she gave advice and criticism, did as little editing as possible.

The range of the writing is incredible. One man's life story is told in the vernacular of a ghetto foundling pushed from foster home to foster home to crime. Another man's daughter is eulogized in tender, lilting poetry.

The thought content will not give you any deep insights into phenomena such as the recent riot at Kingston Penitentiary. Rather it will give you glimpses into a few of the highly individual and intensely emotional minds of convicts.

Capturing the West in Words and Paint

By HUMPHRY DAVY

There are not many artists who achieve national acclaim during their lifetime. Paul Kane was one with his paintings of the early Canadian west and later with his book, Wanderings of an Artist among the Indians of North America.

But while he achieved recognition as an outstanding artist, it is surprising how few people have had an opportunity of seeing the rich and wide variety of his paintings of the west in frontier days.

The majority of his watercolors, oils and sketches

have rested in the Royal Ontario Museum and in the Nelda C. and J. J. Lutcher Stark Foundation of Orange, Tex., and no attempt was ever made to assemble a sizable collection for reproduction in book form.

For the most part, Canadians have only seen a few of Kane's finished paintings reproduced as illustrations for historical books. Few have seen his hundreds of sketches or read his Wanderings of an Artist as the book today is hard to come by.

Now for the first time they have an opportunity to see a collection of his works in a superb volume edited and with a biographic introduction by Russell Harper. It was published for the Amon Carter Museum, Fort Worth, Tex., and the National Gallery of Canada.

Harper, a member of the faculty of the department of fine arts of Sir George Williams University in Montreal, gives us 48 color plates and 204 black-and-white illustrations plus Kane's Wanderings of an Artist.

It is a visual travelogue of Kane's journey through the prairies to the Pacific region in the great fur-trading days of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Paul Kane, born Sept. 3, 1810, of English and Irish parentage, came to Canada with his family in 1819. They settled in York (Toronto) where he was educated.

As a young man, he worked in a furniture factory and later as a portrait painter in Ontario, then known as Upper Canada, and in the southern United States.

Between 1841-45, the red-bearded artist traveled in Europe to study the paintings of old masters in the art galleries of France and Italy.

It was while he was staying in England that he met George Catlin, a U.S. artist, who had become a celebrity in London for his paintings of Indian tribes.

Catlin was unpopular in the United States because of his crusade on behalf of the Indians, who he saw were being wronged and ill-treated by both government and people.

Catlin was so concerned with the fate of the North American Indians that he tried to get the U.S. Congress to buy his record of native tribes. He firmly believed, like others in his day, that Indians as a people were doomed to extinction.

But congressmen were unsympathetic. Government policy at the time was to dispossess the Indians of their lands and to populate the west with whites.

Catlin, a disappointed man, left for England with his paintings and collection of ethnological items, where he continued his campaign on behalf of the native peoples.

Harper believes the turning point in Kane's life occurred when he met Catlin and was inspired by him to preserve for posterity a record of Indian customs and their way of life before they vanished as a people.

He returned to Canada and under the auspices of the Hudson's Bay Company started on a tour of the Canadian northwest. The year was 1846 and his journey across the continent was to take him almost two and one-half years.

Indian Village at Sault Ste. Marie by Paul Kane

He travelled by canoe and horseback along the fur trade routes, crossed the Rocky Mountains and went down the Columbia into Oregon, then a part of British North America. From there he journeyed to Victoria.

While Kane mainly concentrated on painting Indians, he also sketched the forts, the buffalo and the landscapes he passed through. The result is that we have a unique historical record of the Canadian west in frontier days. No other artist excelled him in this respect.

The book includes several of his sketches of west coast Indians, including two of Fort Victoria showing the Indian village across the harbor. There is also one depicting the Indian village at Esquimalt.

But this volume would never have been possible without the author's enthusiasm for Kane's work. It was a tremendous task which took extensive research and four years to complete.

It is the most comprehensive work today on Kane and his paintings and may well be the art book of the year. The quality of reproduction is excellent.

The book won't only appeal to art historians and ethnologists but to the general reader for it is an absorbing story of the west before it underwent great change.

GOSSIPY TIDBITS FROM HISTORY

By ANTHONY JENKINS

Anyone in an extravagant mood might do well to consider Nancy Mitford's latest biography. Handsomely furbished with a multitude of well chosen illustrations (the colored ones are particularly good), the book offers far more than the usual "coffee-table" froth.

Although her subject is not as suited to her particular brand of wit as were her previous ones, the text abounds with gossipy tidbits that enliven her account of Frederick's struggle to consolidate his territories. If the long middle section of the book tends to get bogged down in summaries of battle after battle, Miss Mitford frequently pulls things together with an anecdote that puts everything in the strongest of forces and which seems to be carelessly tossed off, but isn't, of course.

As might be expected, she is at her best when describing the tempestuous love-hatred between Frederick and Voltaire. She keeps both parties in just the right perspective; Frederick need not have been such a merciless tease, and Voltaire might have been more generous to his royal patron.

She is also extremely good in the introductory chapters describing the incredible relationships between the members of the Prussian royal family. If she sounds flippant, her tart wit gets us right to the centre of things: "Frederick was on better terms with his father than ever before; both realized that as long as they lived apart, they could get on perfectly well. 'Keep away from Jupiter', said Frederick, 'there is less danger of thunderbolts'."

The last chapters have a piquant twilight air about them, matched perfectly by the autumnal tones of the illustrations, and they show Frederick alone in his palaces, cut off by his misunderstandings with his most capable brother, aware of the follies of his thoroughly ridiculous heir and cheated by death of so many of his friends.

Perhaps, at the end of the book, one feels that Frederick's mind has not been thoroughly explored, but then one has been treated to a Grand Tour of the period by a guide whose tastes are in perfect tune to the manners of the time.

'THE ANDROMEDA STRAIN'

A Triumph of Science Over Art

All the people in the tiny New Mexico town appeared to be dead.

The two men who had been sent there to recover a top-secret satellite didn't know this until it was too late.

When they died, the Vandenberg Air Force base put out a secret alert. Armed escorts hurriedly rounded up a handful of America's top scientists and shipped them to an underground laboratory in Nevada.

Their assignment was to find out everything they could about what it was in the satellite that killed off the town. They didn't have much time, for it was possible the earth could become contaminated with the deadly mystery.

That's the pulse outline of Robert Wise's film The Andromeda Strain. The movie is adapted from Michael Crichton's best-selling novel of the same title.

A relative of mine whose interest in science fiction predates my birth says the movie is better than the book. But you don't have to be an aficionado to enjoy this one.

The truth is The Andromeda Strain is a straightforward suspense drama dressed up with great gobs of technological razzle dazzle.

California Institute of Technology and Pasadena's Jet Propulsion Laboratories lent what must have been considerable advice in the making of this movie.

The hardware — computers and all the rest of that classy electronic stuff — doesn't quite match the brittle, ethereal brilliance of the machinery in 2001. But it's good enough to be continually fascinating.

Because the advanced technology in The Andromeda Strain is set in present time, February 1971 to be exact, it is all the more convincing.

Like most everyone whose experience of space age machines is restricted to what the U.S. government permits network television to watch during moon shots, I find inside glimpses of the stuff endlessly fascinating.

What happens in this movie is that interest in the machinery is fully sustained because of the plot's suspense. If those scientists don't find out what's going on with that satellite, the world's future is dangerously uncertain.

There's nothing left to do but realize that machines will be man's greatest ally at the outer limits of the fight for survival.

Unfortunately, I can't find much good with the acting in The Andromeda Strain. The characters do have important roles in moving the plot along, for it is the scientists' hunches which must be translated into fact if the mystery is to be solved.

Sadly, the acting does not rise above the level of so many of the made-for-TV dramas. In almost any other movie, this would be fatal. But The Andromeda Strain has enough going for it to make the movie worthwhile despite its flimsy personalities.

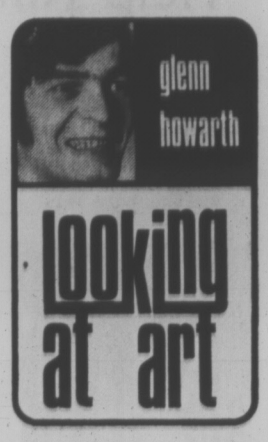
Aside from its suspense and the concomitant thrills of detection, The Andromeda Strain lays out some ironies about U.S. militarism which are good for a few wry twists.

For example, the investigation nearly collapses when the scientists learn their base may have been built to support research for chemical and biological warfare.

Other small human and circumstantial details enliven the plot, but I don't want to give everything away.

The Andromeda Strain raises some questions about possible human dilemmas in space exploration, but it remains largely entertainment. That's not to suggest you'll leave the film convinced that the whole thing was strictly make-believe.

Young Victoria Artists Finding Success in East



John Leonard and Dennis Cliff, two Victorians, are enjoying success in the art world of Toronto. In a discipline where starvation is almost a tradition, where even the best artists must teach to eat, it is good to see artists selling, winning, without compromising their integrity.

John Leonard studied at Victoria High School, not doing too well in mathematics, fed up with everything but art. He graduated in 1960 and went to work for Vancouver Island coach Lines, telling himself that next year he would leave for art school when he saved enough money. He kept putting off his departure. Then he was gone.

Dennis Cliff studied under Donald Harvey when the university was still Victoria College. One day Don Harvey picked up a newspaper and found his ex-pupil photographed in front of an award-winning painting. Professor Harvey's pride was my first introduction to Dennis Cliff, then I went to Toronto too.

John and Dennis live in the region of lower Spadina Ave., a commercial district where many Toronto artists have their studios. John's workshop is across from Grosvenor's Tavern, an "in" nightspot where 50-year-old waiters wear large peace symbols on the front and back of their T-Shirts. You enter John's studio up a narrow fire escape in a dark alley. He lives and works above a fish market, unpleasant when the heat of summer lifts smells.

Home is two large rooms with 15-foot ceilings. One is the living room-bedroom, while the other is the studio, kitchen and baby room. John and his wife Marilyn manage the economics of living and working in one space without difficulty.

When I visited John last fall he had paintings in the Realism show, the best contemporary exhibition to be organized in the East last year. To be accepted was an honor. Entered were two huge canvases, images of revolvers. One was a Smith and Wesson .38 about seven feet long pointing back into the picture space with its cylinder hinged open.

The guns were handled in what Barry Lord of The National Gallery called "deadpan style". Any emotional content was implicit in the fact that this was a gun; John did without expressive handling. And the result earned deserved praise from all but a few who asked why John was interested in such violent imagery. Guns kill.

But John was a marksman before he was an artist; he competed in the Dominion Rifle Championships in Ottawa twice while still in high school. His imagery came from a fascination with his own personal history, a love of guns ingrained before he realized their true significance. And it is that significance he later explored. He made paintings of five-foot-long bullets and voiced plans for images of machine guns.

John's latest paintings have been of packing crates and paper bags, painted so every splinter is visible as are the fibres in the paper bags. Such paint work is within John's capabilities, and the imagery easily explained by the commercial district in which John lives.

He has exhibited in group shows, and held two-man shows sharing the high fees with another artist. Hart House Gallery of the University of Toronto helped him as it has other young artists. This fall he will have a one-man show at the Pollock Gallery, one of the best commercial gallerys in Toronto. This gallery represents outstanding Americans and Britons.

Dennis Cliff, whose studio is a few blocks from John's, has been represented by the Pollock Gallery for sometime. A one-man show of Dennis' work ends there this weekend. While John is jumping from a preoccupation with one type of image to another, Dennis' work is consistant and non-figurative.

Taking carefully cut strips of canvas, Dennis paints a smooth atmospheric color progression along their length ranging from light to deep tone. He then laminates these strips to a canvas backing so carefully that it is impossible to see the join between strips. The collaged result is two, even three color grids interwoven into a shimmering surface. He does it well with a method that is impossible to analyse, and yet contains an ever-present logic truly his own.

Dennis' work has changed little over the past year except for using a spray gun for his tonal progressions instead of stained canvas techniques. And to replace stretching the collage on a frame, Dennis now backs the works with fiberglass. This allows more freedom of shape at the canvas edges, eliminating the fancy woodworking required by odd shaped stretchers.

The canvases are his main work, but there are collages made of paper in the possession of the Toronto Museum that are just as excellent.

Dennis won the major prize of $1,000 at the Toronto City Hall Show this year.

Both John and Dennis are participating in The Festival of Canada to be held this summer in Binghampton, N.Y. Besides theatre and film, there will be a large exhibition of Canadian Art both historical and contemporary. Emily Carr will be among those in the historical classification; the two Victoria expatriates will be among the 13 contemporary artists invited to submit.

Closer to home, an Emily Carr exhibition at the Vancouver Public Gallery opened this week. Since it is the most complete compilation of her work to date, a visit to Vancouver is a must for those interested in B.C.'s art history.

Do We Have to Borrow History?

audrey johnson

sounding board

What makes a good Canadian?

Is it making as much money as you can in Canada and spending it in the U.S.?

Is it writing anti-monarchy letters to the paper and regarding our past colonial status as something shameful?

Is it turning our backs on our own history and saying "We begin as of now — we have no past except what we can borrow from our American neighbors?"

Absurd you say. Quite right. I'll even plead guilty to a gross distortion.

But one can't help getting that feeling sometimes. Like now.

It seems that often when a chance comes to spotlight something truly Canadian by using Canadian artists or writers to celebrate a moment in history, we blow it.

We blew it in 1958 when we had another centenary to celebrate and made the centrepiece a pre-packaged pageant spectacular, totally produced by an American firm from Ohio.

And it seems we are blowing it again now with our Victorian Days major stage production at the McPherson, celebrating a collection of Yankee folk heroes.

What have Deadwood Dick, Wild Bill Hickcock et al, to do with the present centennial?

The argument is doubtless that the whole thing is lighthearted fun, that Victorian Days are not intended just to celebrate the B.C. centennial, but to become an annual event, that the accent is on the style — mellerdrammer — as a spoof of a Victorian era stage art form.

Sorry, I don't buy it.

From having been party to the early discussions of the Chamber of Commerce committee, I am aware that Victorian Days is intended to be our answer to Calgary's Stampede, Montreal's winter carnival and other such jamborees of special character.

Basically the whole idea is to provide a lure that will bring visitors to the area at a time when they normally would not be here.

Money, money, money is the main objective, let's admit it. Money hopping out of tourist pockets and into our own.

But must we be so bare faced about it?

Could we not cover our traps with a little more subtlety and depth by providing real value for the dollars we hope to gain?

We could make the whole business meaningful and worthwhile for our own people by using our own colorful history, building up our own folk heroes and using our own very competent artists and writers to tell the tale.

There are some writers in this city capable of putting a stage show together, believe it or not, just as there are characters and incidents in the story of Fort Victoria willing, given the right manipulation, to come out of the shadows, and as capable of entertaining audiences as any figure borrowed from a foreign source.

Two of Canada's most completely successful regional celebrations — the Calgary Stampede and Charlottetown Festival — have built their fame and financial success on the use of indigenous material.

Don't tell me Victoria has not got such material. Every region, no matter what borrowed varnish it has assumed, can strip away the encrustation and find the original grain beneath, running in its own direction.

It needs hard work and above all imagination and discernment, but the special effort is demonstrably worthwhile.

Victoria's tale is not wholly told when it's presented as "a little bit of old England." Still less has it any trace of the American wild west character.

Its past is a conglomerate of many national, racial and circumstantial influences.

How wonderful to dig down with the devotion and perceptiveness of the archaeologist and then, with the help of the artists, piece together the real image.

Unless we are willing to do that the chances of building something of value — and incidentally of bringing in the hoards of outsiders with dollars to spend — are slim.

Superficiality and legend without substance have their own built-in obsolescence.

170 Arrested

City Pianist in Competition

LINN HENDRY
... to Montreal

Ten Canadians are among the 56 contestants entered in the Montreal International Piano Competition, taking place between May 29 and June 13.

Of the 10, two are from British Columbia, one being Linn Hendry, the 20-year-old Victoria pianist who came from her home in Penticton five years ago to study with Robin Wood at Victoria Conservatory of Music.

The other is Vance Hoy of Vancouver, presently a first-year piano performance major at University of B.C. where he has studied for tthe last three years.

Miss Hendry, who has been teaching at the Conservatory since 1968, recenttly placed second in the CBC Talent Festival, was a City Medallion winner in the Victoria Music Festival in 1967, and gained her Performer's ARCT diploma with honors at the age of 16.

The Montreal International Competitions are held for a different instrument each year and are regarded as highly prestigious.

A panel of internationally noted judges presides and winners share a total of $22,000 in prizes. First prize is worth $10,000.

Thirteen countries are represented in this year's event which begins with qualifying tests, May 29, 30 and 31, and concludes with a final gala concert of winners June 15 in the Salle Wilfrid Pelletier, Place des Arts.

Festival Performers Help Raise Funds

JENNIFER ANGUS
... Wednesday concert

Several of the fine young performers from the recent Victoria Music Festival will be featured Wednesday evening in the 25th annual concert and coffee party given by the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club in aid of their scholarship fund.

The concert will start at 8 p.m. in St. Matthias Hall, corner of Richmond Road and Richardson Street.

Vocal numbers will include the Craigdarroch Ensemble, directed by Gladys Pearcy and accompanied by Mrs. S. E. Bulman-Fleming, with Jennifer Angus and Linda Scanlon as soloists.

John McVie will also be a vocal soloist. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Helen McVie.

Piano solosits are Frances Crampton and Barbara Brill.

String players will include cellist Rolf Gilstein accompanied by Wendy Stofer, and a trio consisting of violinist Marc Destrube, cellist Garry Russell with pianist Roger Scobie.

An accordion trio consisting of Eleanor and Freda Smith and Rolf Gilstein, and recorder solos by James Kennedy accompanied by Frances Carter, will also be on the program.

The coffee party convened by Miss Helen Cruickshank will follow the concert.

Centennial Drama Festival Here in June

At McPherson Playhouse, from June 2 to 5, "Victorians will have an opportunity to see a showcase of good drama presented by various British Columbia groups," says Miss Christine MacNab, chairman of the local committee in charge of arrangements.

The B.C. Centennial Drama Festival will feature plays selected from the various zone festivals around the province. They will not necessarily have been the winners, Miss MacNab states.

The selected groups have been invited to perform here on a non-competitive basis. There will be no awards but there will be both public and private adjudications.

Both one-act and three-act plays will be seen in different programs each of the four nights.

On opening night there will be a presentation by Victoria Theatre Guild of an original play by Joan Mason Hurley, The Grandmother.

The same program will see Campbell River Players in Tennessee Williams' Long Stay Cut Short and Brien Friel's Losers, performed by the Yellow Point Drama Group of Nanaimo.

Others to be seen will be three-acters by New Caledonia Players of Prince George and Terrance Little Theatre — Next Time I'll Sing to You and The Killing of Sister George, respectively.

Bringing short plays to the festival will be Powell River Players, Duncan Drama Group, North Pacific Players of Prince Rupert and United Players of Vancouver.

The festival is sponsored by the B.C. Drama Association.

SYMPHONY AUDITIONS

Laszlo Gati, musical director and conductor of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, will hold auditions for all instruments of the orchestra on June 1 and 2. Interested musicians can audition at this time and should phone the Victoria Symphony office, 592-2449, for an appointment.

Island Girl Wins Award In Speech Examinations

Highest marks in Canada in 1970 speech examinations conducted by Trinity College, London, have been gained by a Ladysmith student who has been a consistent high placer in the speech division of the Victoria Music Festival.

She is Roberta Stillin. As the result of achieving honors in all previous speech examinations, she gains an award which is offered in each country where Trinity College examinations are held.

This year Roberta was a winner at both the Nanaimo and Victoria festivals. She is a pupil of the noted teacher, Anne Mossman, FTCL, of Brentwood.

Sooke Road Tenders Called

Tenders have been called by the highways department for paving of 3.2 miles of the Sooke Road and for a total of 1.8 miles on Mt. View Avenue, Ledsham Road and Bellamy and Phelps Streets, Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch said Friday.

Also called are tenders for 4.2 miles of hard-surface on the East Sooke Road, one mile on the Matheson Lake Park Road and .6 miles on the Finlayson Arm Road, Bruch said.

Musical Art Society Renews Scholarship

The annual open scholarship offered by Victoria Musical Art Society will again be available this year.

Applications will be received up to June 15 and adjudication will take place on the afternoon of Sunday, June 20.

Mrs. Flora Goulden, president of the Canadian Federation of Music Teachers Association, and John Bailey of the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto, will be in Victoria and will act as judges.

Further information concerning the scholarship competition can be obtained by phoning 598-5455.

A well-attended annual meeting of the Musical Art Society, held at Craigdarroch Castle, heard a report by Mrs. S. G. Watts, president of the board of directors, indicating that the society had concluded a successful season on both financial and artistic sides.

Following the business meeting a piano recital was given by Linn Hendry, who will leave Victoria in the near future for study in Paris. She was presented with a gift of luggage by the society board.

On Stage Next Week

Tonight at McPherson Playhouse, Bastion Theatre's attractive, rollicking musical, Lock Up Your Daughters, goes into its final performance. Curtain is at 8 p.m.

If male choral singing plus a chamber orchestra in a Centennial Festival of Song sounds attractive, First United Church is the place to be tonight at 8:15. Arion Male Voice Choir, Eugene Gleemen of Oregon and Vancouver Metropolitan Chamber Orchestra under Capt. Leonard Camplin will perform individually and en masse.

A pops concert featuring the Newport Choir from Washington State, Medford Concert Orchestra of Oregon and Interlake Jazz Ensemble from Washington, will be presented at McPherson Playhouse, Sunday. Starting time is 7:30 p.m.

At St. John's Church on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.; second in a series of recitals will feature John Mitchell at the organ.

Opening of a four-night run of the "mellerdrammer," Deadwood Dick, a presentation of Victorian Days directed by John Krich, is Wednesday at McPherson Playhouse. Curtain time will be 8 p.m.

A concert and coffee party is scheduled for Wednesday at St. Matthias Church Hall, corner of Richmond and Richardson Street. The concert program will present several young festival winners, and will start at 8 p.m.

At the Galleries

Victoria Painters of the Past Century will be the exhibition honoring Victorian Days at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery, showing Tuesday through May 30. Concurrent with this will be the 21st Annual Jury Show, continuing through June 13.

Period Pieces is the title of an exhibition on view Monday through Saturday at The Print Gallery, 1208 Wharf Street.

At B.C. Provincial Museum's Heritage Court, Tuesday through May 31, there will be a Victoria Art and Craft Showcase with demonstrations and displays of painting, sculpture, weaving, pottery, photography and other media by local artists.

The Village Art Gallery, Bastion Square, is showing original paintings and Leafhill Gallery, 47 Bastion Square, has a one-man show of water colors by Stephanie Steel until May 30.

Book of Photos On Royal Tour

Local photographer Jim Ryan is publishing a book of outstanding photos of the Royal Tour.

The 32-page book called Royal Visit '71 will be available to the public next week.

The Happy Sound of Barbershop

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Sometime in the future your dad may be telling your as yet unborn son that in his heyday he barbershopped.

He won't mean that he cut hair or shaved jowls for a living — although, on the side, he may have done that too.

Or maybe he'll say that he is a "woodshedder" from away back.

But that's not as ominous as it sounds either.

All he will mean is that he, in combination with others, has been a maker of happy sentimental music.

For by that time undoubtedly, "to barbershop" will have become a widely accepted verb if barbershoppers continue to increase and spread all over the continent as rapidly as they have done in little more than 30 years.

Victorians have begun to get the message — those who have had the luck to be present when the entertaining, musically delightful Village Squires have been on the program.

If this bright group is a good example of barbershopping—and it is—there is small wonder the movement has built so dramatically.

From 25 people who met to sing some songs in Tulsa, Okla., in 1938, the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America (SPEBSQSA) was formed.

What began quite casually that night in Tulsa has now become an organization with more than 700 chapters all over North America claiming 32,000 members.

The continent is divided into districts and Victoria is part of Evergreen District which comprises Alaska, British Columbia, Alberta, Washington, Oregon and part of Idaho and Montana.

Victoria received its charter in January, 1968. In order to be granted a charter, the would-be chapter must have 35 paid-up, really active members.

In three years the grey derbied, red waistcoated Village Squires have developed rapidly under the vibrant leadership of conductor John Varrelman.

They have done well in the district competitions which are held once a year, have assisted charities, and are engaged in trying to organize a chapter up-Island and in sponsoring novice quartet contests.

The group represents a cross-section of all businesses and professions in the area. Their unofficial watchword is "fellowship."

In a talk with Varrelman, Allan Watson and Paul Raike of the Squires, it became easy to understand their enthusiasm.

They stress that the standards of barbershop singing are extremely high and we were in complete agreement that "good" music doesn't mean music of only one kind, namely, classical.

SPEBSQSA maintains its high quality aim through its system of district competitions and annual international competition, when 15 chorus winners and 45 quartets meet.

Unremitting effort goes into the improving of barbershopping within its own particular idiom.

What makes barbershop harmony different?

"All the chording in this type of harmony is very strong," explains Varrelman. "Another unique factor is that the tenor line is always well above the melody line."

"Arrangers are extremely important to good barbershop and many very good ones are at work all the time now in this category," he tells you.

"Of course at our weekly sessions, we do a lot of free harmonizing (woodshedding) which is extremely good exercise for developing a sense of melody. There is always a quartet, preferably more than one, in every good ensemble and we have ours, of course."

Sing-outs — engagements — for the Village Squires include those for which they are paid, such as conventions. Charitable concerts are given without fee for the War Amputees, Goodwill, Multiple Sclerosis Society, and Christmas carols at the Veterans' Hospital.

However all fees taken at sing-outs also go to charity.

Director Varrelman, the lithe, dynamic conductor with a performing style that is quite individual, is an Englishman. He came to Canada from England seven years ago, after having spent three years of his life as a professional musician, training and organizing glees and choruses.

"I was once a boy soprano," he grins, admitting he can't resist singing along with his Squires even in his most athletic episodes as leader.

The Victoria barbershoppers will probably be heard on cross-Canada radio within the next few months as they were co-winners with the Arion Male Choir, of the CBC Award at the recent Victoria Music Festival.

Once a swamp, Goodacre Lake became what it is because of gardeners like Bob Templeton working at city greenhouses

Victoria Grew Up Beautifully Under Hundreds of Green Thumbs

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

It's fashionable to think of Victoria's parkland as a natural heritage, losing a battle to blacktop and the automobile. But most of that greenery was put there by man.

Walk down to Goodacre Lake in Beacon Hill Park and take solace from the exhaust fumes in the shade of the magnificent, towering firs. But remember that less than 100 years ago the whole area was barren and swampy.

Various planting campaigns, probably begun in the early 1890s, are now paying off, as the city's parklands reach the "saturation point," says parks superintendent Al Smith.

From now on, most tree planting will consist of replacement.

But even a program of replacement requires careful planning and patience. For example, says Smith, "if we wanted to plant a tree in 1971, we should have started in 1965."

It takes that long to get from the seed or cone stage in the civic nursery greenhouses through the early years in the nursery gardens to the time when the sapling is moved on to a boulevard or into a park.

Then a young tree has to take its chances — about four to one — in the cruel world of vandalism, curb-jumping cars, diseases and road-widening.

About 400 streets were planted by the city last year, and about 125 were lost.

"But we are getting to the point now where there are few streets left in the city without trees."

Just a decade ago there was a serious shortage and then parks director Herb Warren began a program of planting as many as 1,600 trees a year. Now whenever a curb is built on a city street the boulevard it encloses is planted. But with what?

Few species planted by the city are native to Vancouver Island. The Garry oak is an exception, and some examples in the area are 600 years old.

But most of the tall firs and redwood are no older — and many of them younger — than our more senior citizens.

90,000 Plants Grown a Year But Tree Production is Falling

The imported varieties provide stunning colors, but headaches as well.

The Siberian elm, planted along Yates, are so bushy the local merchants complain that the foliage obstructs business. They are therefore a problem for the parks staff who must trim them four times annually, compared to once a year, or less, with other kinds. This naturally drives up the cost of maintenance — from about $2 per tree a year, to $20.

"Weed trees," Smith calls them.

Replacement of destroyed or dying trees takes place gradually without affecting the overall foliage of a street.

The blossoms that make streets like Cornwall distinctive in spring are produced by trees planted about 1915, Smith says. The roots are dying and a stiff wind can topple one easily. Each one that dies is replaced.

Although Victoria is fondly called the "Garden City" by its citizens, the number of trees under city care is a surprisingly low 14,000 trees. By comparison, Vancouver has planted as many as 20,000 in a single year.

The encroachment on green space by growing streets may be more a myth than truth.

A small controversy last August was waged over the loss of trees and boulevard space along Shelbourne, when that street was widened to become a major traffic artery.

But in that case, green space was the winner, says Smith. After the public works department used what it wanted of the many expropriated lots for blacktop, the rest was turned over to parks.

"They gave us 70,000 square feet of land and we lost maybe 20,000." A single patch at the corner of Denman is providing a 9,000-square-foot "beautiful little pocket park" where a few trees and flowering shrubs will surround a bench.

"Oh, we gained on that, even if we did lose a few trees."

But trees aren't the only thing produced by the city's expert gardeners.

Some 90,000 plants are produced in the greenhouses each year in an attempt to keep blooms in sight all year round. Constant searches for new strains are going on to find all-weather flowers. One result has been different types of heather that produce bloom 12 months of the year.

The famous hanging flower baskets are the best example of sustaining the color of the civic garden.

In every one of the 600 baskets that adorn key downtown streets in summer, there are 22 different plants packed in — so many that to keep them all alive parks staff have to pump the baskets with chemicals.

The baskets, which will appear soon, are at present going through a three-week "hardening off" process outside the greenhouses. They have been in preparation since January and carry a theoretical price tag of $10. The whole flower basket operation will cost more than $12,000.

The baskets will keep blooming until late September. "We're kind of sneaky in that respect," says Smith.

To a non-gardener, touring the civic nursery operation, from the big shed full of earth "where it all starts" to the cut flowers in the mayor's office, the whole business seems a little mysterious.

Especially when one realizes that all they really started with was a rocky piece of coast, 29 inches of rain a year, and the odd lucky break in winter.

TB Hard to Find

VANCOUVERE (CP) — Dr. David Mowat, director of the British Columbia division of tuberculosis control, Thursday said TB threatens to become a hidden menace. Dr. Mowat told the annual meeting of the B.C. Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Society it is becoming increasingly difficult to find the new TB cases.

"Their stability in fast highway driving just has to be experienced to be believed."
Road & Track

The New Mercedes-Benz 250 Sedan

Above is just one of the numerous eulogistic quotes from an exhaustive road-test report published by Road & Track magazine. The car under appraisal was the Mercedes-Benz 250 Sedan.

The report went on to say "We might conclude that in North America Mercedes sedans are often bought by the wrong people. North Americans relying on styling as they do, these cars are often misinterpreted as just "conservative" sedans, when in fact, it is possible to cover ground faster in these cars—and with more safety—than in the typical North American high-performance sedan."

At Mercedes-Benz we find this information significantly important. "We want the 250 Sedan to be appreciated for exactly what it is—a fine automobile superbly engineered, classically styled, luxuriously appointed, and a positive joy to drive.

The only correct way to thoroughly appreciate a Mercedes-Benz 250 is on a thorough test-drive. Not just around the block, but over several miles of twisting back roads with tricky bends and broken surface. Then take it on the highway. We predict you'll be pleasantly astonished.

But don't take our word for it, or the word of Road & Track. Try it for yourself and draw your own conclusions.

MAN GETS SICK OF HOME LIFE

CRETEIL, France (UPI) — Jean Pierre Mauderon discovered the ideal place for free food and lodging was the local hospital.

Each evening he crept up six flights of stairs to sleep in luxury in an empty patient's room. He fashioned a skeleton key and for weeks helped himself to meals regularly from the hospital kitchen. This week a suspicious cook questioned him.

He is still getting free board, though now its in the local jailhouse.

ALL METRIC BY OCT. 1

All hospitals operated by the B.C. mental health branch will convert to the metric system Oct. 1 this year, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark announced Friday.

He said the metric system, increasingly used in the health field, minimizes danger of errors. The Canadian Hospital Association is encouraging all hospitals to adopt the system, he said.

Temperature recording, weight measurement and medical forms will be affected by the changeover.

One of the most important things about feeding your vegetables is to use a balanced fertilizer. One of the best balances for steady growth and quality is the 12-18-9 formula of Green Cross Lightweight Flower, Shrub & Tree Food. But for quick results you may prefer to use a "level formula" 20-20-20 Water-Soluble Plant Food.

A few other hints:

For Insects and Diseases—Dust regularly with Multi-Purpose Flower and Vegetable Dust. Ideal for most vegetables.

For Insects Only — Garden Guard containing rotenone is an effective treatment which can be used right up to harvest time for many beetles, caterpillars and aphids.

For Tomatoes—Use Tomato & Potato Dust. Controls blights and contains carbaryl for insects.

Roses

The amount of fertilizer you give your roses will have a big bearing on how long and how well the bushes flower. So keep the blooms coming. Feed your roses generously with Lightweight Flower, Shrub & Tree Food plus plenty of water.

And to clean up those aphids and other insect pests . . . apply Gardal Rose and Ornamental Spray. Or if you prefer a dust, use Green Cross Rose Dust. Regular use of these insecticide/fungicides will also protect your roses and other ornamentals from diseases such as Black Spot and Mildew. And take note: Gardal leaves no visible deposit to mar the beauty of the leaves.

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

Tonight

ZUT! 7 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. This zany summer show is back, with nonsense and laughs. Tonight it offers such trifles as a sketch with Joan Stuart and her lover (Barry Baldero) discussing the merits of telling all to cuckolded husband Al Boliska; an interview with a baseball "superstar" on the secrets of pitching; and Don Lautrec singing Hosanna.

THE ANDY WILLIAMS SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun.) The Smothers Brothers join Andy and team with their host and another guest, Ray Stevens (Andy's summer replacement last year) for their version of the history of communication. Andy sings "Jean," "Hello, Young Lovers" and "Walk a Mile in My Shoes." Also appearing are Gladys Knight and the Pips, a popular Motown group singing "Friendship Train."

LAWRENCE WELK 7:30 p.m., Channel 4. The maestro salutes one of the most revered of modern-music composers, Hoagy Carmichael, the man who wrote "Stardust," "Georgia on My Mind," "I Get Along Without You Very Well," "Skylark," "Two Sleepy People," "Lazy River," "Lazy Bones" and "In the Cool, Cool, Cool of the Evening' among his many fine hits. They're all included in this lovely nostalgic hour.

MY THREE SONS. 8:30 p.m., Channel 7. (Rerun.) Polly and Chip suspect that they are being followed for reasons they cannot figure out. The situation becomes comically tense. Then Chip discovers the man tailing them has been hired by Polly's father, which upsets him more than just a little.

THE CHEROKEE SHAFT: THE STORY OF MINES AND MEN. 8:30 p.m. Channel 4. A penetrating study of the nation's most dangerous way to make a living. The hazards of coal mining and the constant conflict between nature and progress are revealed with force and life through the eyes of workers in their homes and on the job at Maple Creek Mine near Washington, Pa. The program also explores continuing struggle of a dissident faction of United Mine Workers members against their own union and its president, Tony Boyle. Lawyer Kenneth Yablonski, son of Jock Yablonski, murdered leader of the dissidents, speaks of their attempt to destroy an inbuilt fatalism among miners, But Boyle himself refused to be interviewed. A surprisingly forceful documentary for this network. Well worth seeing.

PERFORMERS. 10 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. This show, having its debut tonight, was conceived to be a showcase of undiscovered Canadian talent originating from a different city every week. Tonight's show, from the stage of Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto, introduces four Toronto singers, Gordie Tapp remember him? is series host.

Sunday

WONDERFUL WORLD OF DISNEY. 6 p.m., Channel 2; 7:30, Channel 5. (Rerun.) "The 101 Problems of Hercules" is the story of sheepherder Buckley E. Jones and three faithful dogs, who prove they are his best friends, and his reliable aides. When Buckeye is wounded by renegade Indians while taking his flock to the high mountain meadows for the spring, the dogs take over while their master goes for medical aid. The dogs trudge on with the flock, overcoming such adversities as a desert windstorm, vicious wolves and sheep rustlers. A well-done tale.

FBI. 8 p.m., Channel 4. (Rerun.) International intrigue, suspense and assassination attempt blend into this episode. "The Target" is beautiful Maria Chernov (German actress Karin Dor), daughter of a high-ranking communist official. She has defected and come to America and the Reds want her eliminated. The plot is uncovered when the assassin (Eric Braeden), accidently drops a piece of microfilm. It's found by a waterfront guard and turned over to Inspector Erskine.

COMEDY SPECIAL. 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Hart Pomerantz and Lorne Michaels present their final comedy hour of this video season. High point of the hour is the Clara Ward Singers, a gospel group. They offer Feelin' Good and Landmark. The comedy, unfortunately, is predictably Pomerantz and Hart.

BONANZA. 9 p.m., Channel 5. Hoss has a close call. He's accidentally shot by homesteader Tom Brennan (John Schuck), who then refused to help his victim for fear of prosecution, a stand encouraged by his calloused father. It takes a heap of talking to save Hoss.

THE BOLD ONES. 10 p.m., Channel 5 (Rerun). A good cast, including Robert Hooks, Della Reese, Keith Andes, Julie Adams and Georg Standfort Brown, in addition to regulars E. G. Marshall and David Hartman. Story deals with threatened death epidemic caused by mystery virus. Suspected carrier is Bakumba (Brown) an African native in the U.S. Della plays an aunt to a young boy afflicted by the virus, and Hooks is his older brother, an escaped prisoner, who adds to the drama when he wants to see his nephew.

NET FANFARE. 10 p.m., Channel 9 (Rerun). Brigit Cullberg, internationally known Swedish choreographer is the subject of this biography. To mark the occasion, Miss Cullberg created her own ballet exclusively for television. It is called "Red Wine in Green Glasses," features her son, dancer Niklas Ek, and the music of Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto. There are some interesting observations from Miss Cullberg on televised ballet and its restrictions, but it's a grand opportunity for ballet lovers to observe one of the world's most renowned choreographers.

Monday

MUSIC ALBUM. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Singers Julie Amato and Ed Evanko join Wally Koster in a salute to Cole Porter. They're backed up by Lucio Agostini's chorus and orchestra for such Porter standards as C'est Magnifique, Love for Sale, My Heart Belongs to Daddy, Easy to Love and Every Time We Say Good-Bye.

ROWAN AND MARTIN'S LAUGH-IN. 8 p.m., Channel 5 (Rerun). This show revolves around comic Joey Bishop. He's a model as Laugh-In takes a look at the mod world of prisons. He plays Ali Baba whose "open Sesame" runs aground and won't open the cave. And Joey also is president of the Losers Club who unveils the secret to his success as a failure. Joey can speak from genuine experience. He's the only TV star whose shows have been cancelled by all three networks.

IT WAS A VERY GOOD YEAR. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. Mel Torme takes the viewers back to 1959 this week. It was some year. The Edsel came out, and Khrushchev got mad because he couldn't get invited to Disneyland during his visit to the U.S. And Eddie Fisher and Elizabeth Taylor got married. Giselle MacKenzie, who starred on TV's "Your Hit Parade" that year, helps Mel by singing some of the 1959's big hits and also doing a medley of all-time favorites.

REALTIES—THIS LAND IS. 9 p.m., Channel 9. The region once was called "Egypt," but it's really Southern Illinois, where leathery-faced river boat men, hardened coal-miners and farmers worked and played hard, in an area bordered by the Wabash, Ohio and Mississippi rivers. This is a documentary tracing the area's history to the earliest explorers in the 17th century. There is a poignancy to an elderly farmer's recollection of the good old days at the turn of this century. He tells the audience, "They didn't have money, but then they didn't need money." An interesting special.

MONDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9 p.m., Channel 4. "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed? (Rerun) (1964). A lightweight inoffensive flick. Dean Martin plays a TV star (he plays a doctor in a series) who loves his fiancee, Elizabeth Montgomery, and any other pretty girl who happens to pass him. It's a loaded cast with Martin Balsam, Carol Burnett, as the nurse in the series, Jill St. John, Louis Nye and Richard Conte.

WORLD PREMIERE. 9 p.m., Channel 5. "The Psychiatrist: God Bless the Children" (rerun). The network had high hopes for this film, which was the pilot for one part of the Four-In-One series this past season. The film fared better than the series. Roy Thinnes, as the star of the film, comes to the aid an ex-addict, and uses him to resolve a threatened dope addiction epidemic. Pete Duel is the ex-addict, and Luther Adler plays Dr. Bernard Altman, chairman of the psychiatry department in the hospital.

NEW SERIES being filmed near Toronto by Canadian Broadcasting Corporation places stress on reality. Paul Harding (with pistol) stars as Renny, shown here as a young First World War officer, in Jalna. The war episodes are being filmed at the Cheltenham Brickworks north of Toronto, abandoned three years ago. (CP Wirephoto.)

Sullivan Coming Back With Special Productions

By JOHN MOSEDALE
Times News Services

NEW YORK — Ed Sullivan, after stepping down as host of television's longest-running series, will return next season with six to 10 specials on CBS, the network which he's been so closely identified with for 23 years.

The run as a weekly variety show was done in by an apparent combination of live-cost production as opposed to packaged tape shows, and lowered ratings. While those ratings have diminished from their peak years, "we still have a pretty hefty audience," in the words of producer Bob Precht. An industry source, noting the show did better than it had the previous year, said there was simply a feeling "that there comes a time for a show to end."

Long after others surrendered to the demands of economics and comfort, Sullivan insisted on keeping his show live. In spite of the expense and occasional mishaps, the process offers testimony to what already is referred to as television's "golden years" as opposed to the technically superior but somehow slick technology of the tape age.

There was such a moment in the tribute to the late lyricist Oscar Hammerstein II, "a very eloquent and emotional man," as Sullivan puts it.

At the close of the show, Hammerstein stepped to the footlights and recalled the awful moment when France fell to the Germans. Rather than take the deep-think or historic view, he recalled, he once wrote a lyric reflecting the details of life in the City of Light that always have called all men; everywhere the chestnut blossoms, the street cafes, the strolling lovers "and no matter what they do to her, I'll remember her that way." A spontaneous stampede of the emotions in the studio audience carried coast to coast.

Similarly, Broadway writer-director-producer Joshua Logan interrupted a tribute paid to him on the Sullivan show in 1953 with a personal address to the audience revealing his mental breakdown. "A lot of people who are disturbed mentally can be cured. There is no reason why they should go through life bearing a stigma. . . . The proudest moment of my life is that, although I had been in the theatre a good many years, I never won the Pulitzer Prize until after I had been in the sanitarium."

Sullivan calls this "the all-time big moment on the show."

The live moment is not necessarily dramatic. Sullivan wound up his visit to the set of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," singing "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" in tandem with Peter O'Toole. "I was much the better singer," he said, laughingly, disputing some critical assessments.

There was the first pairing of Maurice Chevalier with Sophie Tucker in "I Remember It Well" from "Gigi" and the more lasting duet of Rudolf Nureyev and Dame Margot Fonteyn in "The Sleeping Beauty," as well as Maria Callas and George London in "Tosca."

But for the nascent television hosts, the lesson of the Sullivan years is to keep it light, lively and laughing. Over 23 years, the most consistent repeaters have been comedians, make of that what you will: the Canadian comedy team of Wayne and Shuster appeared a record 65 times; Topio Gigio, the Italian mouse, 64; Jack Carter, 52; Myron Cohen, 49; Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara, 47; Alan King, 45.

Granted that he can be dismissed as a "pointer" with a lot of money. The same opportunity was open to anyone else over the past quarter-century and, Nielson knows, they tried.

Sullivan stands alone. Amid all the analyses and explanations, there is no explanation.

His wife might have come close when she recalled an appearance at Guantanamo Bay during the Cuban crisis. "It rained and rained," she said. "With all those lights and heavy electric equipment, everyone except Ed was sure there would be no show.

"Then Ed walked on stage and the sun came out."

TRICIA, COX CHOOSE FLAT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Tricia Nixon and Edward Finch Cox have chosen a two-bedroom, $180-a-month, third-floor apartment in a 50-year-old building near Harvard University as their first home, the Boston Herald Traveler says in a copyright article.

The daughter of President Nixon and the son of a wealthy New York family are to be married in Washington June 12.

The newspaper says the couple will take up residence in September when Cox returns to classes at Harvard Law School.

Secret service men will live in the 16-apartment building, the newspaper says, and will be in touch with the young couple by closed circuit television.

JIMMY STEWART'S DILEMMA

Wife Search Bogging Down

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jimmy Stewart, long a movie star, now is searching for a television wife with little success.

Assisting in the search for Stewart's spouse is writer-producer-director Hal Kanter whose most recent series was the successful show, "Julia."

Of finding a wife for "The Jimmy Stewart Show," Kanter said, "There hasn't been such a search since David O. Selznick hunted for Scarlet O'Hara's maid in 'Gone With The Wind.'

"We've talked to every woman in the business over the age of 15.

"I've seen at least 50 actresses. Jimmy has read with 20 of them. We've screen-tested five and there are four more yet to be tested.

Kanter has eliminated a hundred prospects including Shirley Temple (under contract to the UN), Mrs. Miller (the show isn't a musical), Phyllis Diller (we want a female), Hermione Gingold (aw' c'mon).

Asked why the NBC series was so unimaginatively titled, Kanter snacked his forehead with the palm of his hand.

"The deep think boys at NBC gave a great deal of thought and research to the title," he explained, "and discovered the world 'show' is known to everyone. They research everything."

Will "The Jimmy Stewart Show" be revelant?

"It will be relevant of the human condition but not necessarily to the passing scene. Jimmy is going to play a very tall man because his wardrobe was made that way.

"The only reason Jimmy is doing the show is so he can see the series 10 years from now and be amazed at how young he looked."

Actually, Stewart will play an antropology professor at a California college. He will portray the father of a 29-year-old son and the grandfather of an 8-year-old. He'll also be blessed with an 8-year-old son of his own.

Rest Home Man to Sue Gaglardi

Victoria rest home operator John Hanrahan said today he will sue Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi for a statement Friday alleging he isn't fit to run a business.

Hanrahan said local operators are "boiling mad" over Gaglardi's reaction to about 50 of them turning in their provincial licences in a feud over the amount of government grants to cover guests on welfare.

"He's pushed the operators to the point where there will be evictions (of welfare guests) now for sure, I'm afraid."

In a phone interview from Kamloops Friday Gaglardi pledged that rest home guests on welfare would continue to get proper care despite the earlier eviction threats by some of the operators.

"It's good to have these people come out from under the rocks and show the kind of people they really are," Gaglardi said.

NO ABUSE

"Welfare guests in rest homes will not be abused — they will be properly taken care of."

The rehabilitation minister, whose department handles welfare, said he would check and see why rest home operators who turn in their licences were licensed in the first place.

"Take Hanrahan for instance," he said. "He hasn't one social assistance case in his home (Beacon Hill Villa). The Hanrahans don't belong in this type of business at all."

Hanrahan is vice-president of the B.C. Rest Home Association. The Victoria branch has about 50 members from the 60 or so rest homes in the area.

"We've never spoken like this to Mr. Gaglardi and we didn't expect him to speak to us this way," Hanrahan said.

MOST IRRESPONSIBLE

"We feel he's the most irresponsible minister ever to handle a situation like this."

Hanrahan said he has had about 15 calls from local rest home operators who are furious with Gaglardi. Rest home licences for return to the government are still coming in "but I guess they'll come in a lot faster now."

"I now intend to sue him for saying I wasn't a fit person to run a business."

A majority of Victoria members of the rest home association had earlier proposed transporting their welfare guests to the nearest general hospital in a mass eviction because the government would not increase sufficiently the allowance it pays for care of rest home guests on welfare.

PLAN SCRAPPED

But this plan was scrapped at an emergency meeting in Victoria Thursday night and operators attending decided instead to turn in their provincial licences and switch to guest home status.

They argue this will mean their clients are in the same position as a hotel guest and those who can't pay the bill will have to leave and will become the responsibility of the municipality or the provincial government.

There are over 300 people on welfare in Greater Victoria rest homes. At the moment the province pays from $5 to about $5.50 a day for their care, depending on the amount of care they require. In rare cases where heavy care is required the allowance is increased.

The operators have argued for months that they can't provide the necessary service for welfare guests for the current allowance. Increase requests have ranged between $185 and $240.

Farmer Ed Hegelsen Rinses Shelled Morsels

Sowing Oyster Seeds And Reaping Money

By HELEN MELNYK

Vancouver Island's farming industry is thriving — oyster farming, that is.

The 1970 B.C. harvest totalled over one million pounds of oyster meat worth $750,000.

Coopers Cove Oyster Farm, located on the shores of Sooke Bay, is one of the estimated 68 farms on the Island. The farm has been run by the Hegelsens for 19 years.

Ed Hegelsen, son of Hegelsen senior and operator of the farm, related the life history of an oyster prior to the time it is served up on a platter.

The so-called Pacific oyster originates from Japan. Oyster seeds or spats are imported from Japan, attached in clusters on empty shells.

As soon as they arrive, the seeds are planted offshore on tidal flats. The Hegelsens cultivate their oysters on 54 acres off Denman Island, near Courtenay, where warmer temperatures enable the oysters to mature much quicker than in Sooke waters.

Oysters filter-feed on plankton, microscopic sea life. Various mysterious digestive processes convert the plankton into vitamin and mineral filled oyster meat, a nutritious food for humans.

The maturation of an oyster is highly peculiar; it changes its sex part way through life. All little oysters are males for the first few seasons. As they increase in size in their third and fourth years, they begin to produce eggs and henceforth function as females.

Pollution has not as yet created a serious problem at Courtenay, according to Ed Hegelsen. In other areas, however, sewage and pulp mill wastes have increased oyster mortality.

At the age of three years, an oyster crop is ripe for picking. The Hegelsens transport the mature oysters from Denman Island to their plant at Sooke. Some are prepared for immediate marketing, while other are placed in the cool Sooke Harbor waters for storage.

Four of the 11 staff at the farm plant were cleaning or shucking oysters with expert ease. After opening an oyster by inserting a specially shaped knife into the hinge of the shell, the meat is cut away.

The shucked oysters were washed in another room and placed in cartons, ready to be sold to local stores and restaurants, as well as to wholesalers in Vancouver.

Plump oysters, about four inches long, are prime in price and quality. Designated for table use, they wholesale for $7.85 a gallon. As the size of oysters increases, the price sharply drops to $4.65 a gallon and they are considered fit only for soup and stew.

The big oysters taste as good as the smaller ones, as far as Ed Hegelsen is concerned.

"But we can't convince other people of this. I guess if they open a package and see a lot of little oysters, rather than just one or two big ones, they figure they are getting more for their money."

There is some truth to the old saying that oysters should only be eaten during those months in which the letter R occurs. During the summer months, the spawning season, oysters are unpalatable and possess little food value.

Methods of preparing oysters are as manifold as they are appetizing. Oysters can be baked in sherry cream, barbecued with mushrooms or broiled in Vermouth wine.

Ed Hegelsen prefers his oysters raw with ketchup and beer.

PORT ANGELES DAY OVERWHELMS JAYCEES

The Jaycees were overwhelmed with the response from Port Angeles residents today as over 900 persons arrived for Port Angeles Day here.

Several hundred were left waiting for the boat as the ferry pulled out of the Port Angeles harbor packed to capacity. They will arrive in Victoria on the next boat.

Two of the ferry passengers were later chosen as tourists of the week by Bob Garling, Port Angeles Jaycees vice-president and Victorian Jaycee Joe Richards. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Hansen will spend today and Sunday, as guests of various local businesses.

'Country Cousin' Role Irks Sidney

The "country cousin" treatment Sidney is receiving from the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau may result in it withdrawing from the organization.

Len Siver, president of Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce, made the threat of withdrawal from the bureau Friday, over a dispute concerning solicitation of operating funds.

In an effort to raise funds for the local visitors' information centre, the Chamber has been canvassing Victoria attractions whose brochures are displayed in the Sidney tourist office.

But the Chamber has now been told by the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau of which it is a member that inter-municipal soliciting of funds is not allowed.

Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce contributes $330 annually toward the VIPB (combining funds for the chamber and both municipalities). In return the Chamber receives $300 toward operation of the local tourist centre.

Silver said that it is hardly worthwhile for the Chamber to continue as a member of the VIPB.

In addition, a check made in the Victoria bureau reveals that the only publicity given the local area is the fact that fresh fish can be bought in Sidney.

St. Croix Sailors Bitter Over Weekend Regimen

Tied up in the Inner Harbor this weekend to help make British Columbia's centennial a happy event is the cleanest — and, by some reports, the most miserable — destroyer-escort in the Pacific fleet.

News of the unhappy St. Croix reached the Times newsroom Friday afternoon after members of the crew came ashore.

Some crewmen phoned in to complain and checks with other members of the 200-odd crew bore out their assertions that at least some crewmen on St. Croix are far from being happy.

RUM BOYCOTT

To the charge that they had refused to draw their rum ration Friday morning as a sign of protest against what they considered intolerable working conditions, the ship's captain, Cmdr. Jim Cumming said he wasn't aware of the boycott. He had assumed the men hadn't drawn their tots because shore-leave was piped at the time and they were anxious to get home.

Cmdr. Cumming said crew members not on leave drew their rum tots as usual at 11:30 a.m. today, with no further indication of the discontent mentioned by some men Friday.

The grievance most frequently aired by the protesters was that St. Croix was on "foreign-port routine" instead of home-port routine while in the Inner Harbor.

This means that instead of having weekend leave, each officer and man aboard must report for duty at 8 a.m. daily.

ROYAL CLEANUP

Cumming noted that Esquimalt is the ship's home port, not Victoria. It was necessary, he added, to have a full ship's complement aboard to keep the ship spotless during the hours she will be open to the public this weekend.

Other complaints hinged on the fact that her crew had been kept painting and scrubbing three weeks before the Royal visit.

A crew member, who described himself as "a senior hand with 10 years' service" said "we're damned tied of being told everything is wrong."

He said he was contacting the Times "because we're all pretty unhappy. Not being unionized, we're wondering what we can do. We can't go past the captain."

Asked if the men had complained to their divisional officers, he said they had, but with no effect.

Cumming said he had heard of no complaints from his officers, part of whose training was to handle such problems.

SAME VIEW

Another senior hand said the captain's assertion that discontent was only evident in the junior rates was incorrect; that warrant officers and sergeants shared the same viewpoint.

OPENING SHIP

"We are opening up below decks to the public and it is important that the whole ship be clean," Cimming said.

Of another complaint that St. Croix was being referred to as the "ship of fools" by other men serving in the fleet, Cumming claimed:

"I have never heard this. The ship has always had a tremendous reputation as the cleanest and most efficient.

"The most important thing is the fact that the ship is in the Inner Harbor to celebrate the centennial. I don't want to play the other matter up. It is vastly overrated."

Ask The Times

Q. What was the exact day in which British Columbia joined the other provinces to become part of Canada? Also, when did Victoria become the capital of B.C.?—S.D.B.

A. British Columbia entered Confederation July 20, 1871, according to the Canadian Parliamentary Guide. When the colonies of Vancouver Island and mainland B.C. were united in 1866, New Westminster was designated the capital but this was transferred to Victoria two years later.

Island Hike Ends For Tired Tramper

Hiker Bill Hembroff of Courtenay has completed his epic trek the length of Vancouver Island — tramping the 400 miles in 25 days.

He was scheduled to spend his final night Friday at a lonely farm between the radar station at Holberg and the remote cape at the northwest tip of the Island.

All going well he will have completed the final dozen miles along a rugged trail by later today.

Hembroff, 48, stayed at the radar station Thursday night and left there shortly after noon Friday. Tired but happy, he joked with station officers and told them he was in good shape.

He undertook the marathon hike in an effort to raise $10,000 for a centennial museum at Courtenay. With a friendly pat from Premier Bennett he started from the Legislative Buildings in Victoria April 28.

Hembroff said two parts of the hike were particularly arduous. Worst was the road north from Gold River which he found lonely and tiring. The walk from Port Hardy was also trying.

Outdoorsmen Probe Wilderness Lakes

A large party of Victoria and Vancouver outdoorsmen are on their way today to inspect three west coast lakes they want included in the Pacific Rim National Park.

It is the largest organized group to visit the wilderness lakes of Tsusiat, Squahicum and Hobiton, in the Nitinat district between Port Renfrew and Bamfield.

Included are members of the Victoria Outdoor Club, the Alpine Club of Canada, the Vancouver Island Ramblers, the Sierra Club of British Columbia, the Victoria Natural History Society, the Victoria Canoe Club, the Dogwood Canoe Club of Vancouver, and the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association.

They are all equipped with canoes. Some members plan to explore and study the area for a week, but the majority will return late Monday.

The three lakes have been the subject of dispute between the forest industry and outdoorsmen for the past year.

They are the last major wilderness lakes on the southern half of Vancouver Island and conservationists want to preserve them.

The forest industry wants to log the watershed, claiming loss of the timber would curb their sawmill operations.

The federal government has proposed that the lakes be included in the national park which now encompasses the West Coast trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew, the Effingham Islands in Barkley Sound and Long Beach to the north.

Holiday Bus Trips

Special bus trips to the city centre for the Victoria Day parade Monday will be provided by B.C. Hydro.

Additional early morning trips will be in operation on all routes, but in the afternoon regular holiday service will go into effect.

YM-YWCA Director Resigning

After 11 years at the Victoria YM-YWCA, Art Burgess is retiring as physical director.

Burgess will be leaving the Y at the end of August to enter the faculty of graduate studies at the University of Alberta.

He will work as a teaching assistant while taking his masters degree and writing a thesis on the sociology of sport. He plans to investigate the effects on small children of highly competitive sports.

Burgess came to Victoria from the Vancouver Y in 1960 to replace Archie McKinnon as physical director.

He says he hopes to return to Victoria when his studies are finished and will return to the Y "if there is a position open."

THE BEAK UPON THE bench is only human, and I can understand the irritation felt by a provincial court judge over the disruptive antics of some Women's Lib shook troopers. But, really ... bullwhips on bare backsides?

We move forward or we drop back. And the Vancouver judge's suggestion, if followed, would be a backward move for a struggling, imperfect society.

It isn't all that long since the female offender could be tethered to the tail of a cart and flogged through English streets. The scold, the shrew or the woman suspected of witchcraft might be ironed into a ducking stool and dunked so mercilessly that some victims drowned.

In fairness, some of the barbarisms practiced today would have left the floggers and duckers aghast. Grandpa, aged, infirm and penniless, could then at least count on a nook in the poorhouse if he lacked a home chimney-corner: he wasn't the pawn of a duty-shirking government that might more kindly slip him a lethal Mickey Finn.

But that's no excuse for sacrificing hard-won gains in other directions, and I'm glad to note that in spite of the bullwhip and bare backside jazz Hizzoner delivered humane judgment.

The toughest dong administered to any of these latter-day Pankhurstites was a $75 fine ... and if this male chauvinist pig may be permitted the observation, they damn well deserved it!

I'm enchanted by reports that two kangaroos have been glimpsed in East Sooke Park, and would like to believe that a pair of big-eared, long-shanked marsupials are indeed hopping about among the thickets.

But conviction must wait on proof, because I still haven't forgotten the day when a saucer-eyed newspaper carrier intrigued Ten Mile Point residents with a similar account.

The newsboy, a nice kid even though he didnt deliver our product, was pedalling along in the eerie half-light of a newborn day when he saw something that all but toppled him from his bike.

Large, twitching ears. Mild eyes. An indistict form that bounded off light as a feather into the road-bordering woods.

Kangaroo!

Only it wasn't, as investigation made reasonably plain. What he'd seen in the shadows was a blacktail deer — one of a few that may still haunt the Ten Mile boondocks for all I know.

Mind, I won't go so far as to claim that East Sooke Park is kangarooless. But, lacking proof to the contrary, I remain skeptical. More likely, a couple of bouncing blacktails,

Among life's minor annoyances is the cardboard insert that some magazine publishers insist on smuggling between the pages of their books.

This noxious attempt to foist piggy-back advertising upon the reader creates a nuisance. Only by firm pressure can the magazine be persuaded to stay open where you're reading. Page-turning is made awkward.

My own way of dealing with these inserts is to rip 'em all out and drop them in the nearest wastebasket with hostile thoughts for the advertisers whose messages appear on them.

There are enough impediments to easy reading without adding more ... a fact that publishers in what may well be the twilight era of the magazines should consider. Why hasten the day when television, the new opiate of us masses, will gobble them entirely?

Question here from a reader who is going to be out of town on vacation when the 1971 census is taken on Tuesday, June 1. What to do about it?

I turned this one over to my girl Friday — and every other day — who did a nine-call secretarial on it.

Here are her gleanings.

If you're going to be out of the city when the census taker cometh, leave the necessary information with one of your neighbors.

Needed are the names and initials of all in your family, and their relationship to the head of the household.

Other questions to be answered:

Do you own your home, is it a single dwelling, and is there an apartment or room rented out in that home?

If you happen to be out of the country, the details listed above may prove sufficient, or the enumerator may leave a form to be filled on your return.

All of which sets me wondering what Canada's population now numbers. The 1966 census put us at 20,014,880. The 1969 estimate was 21,061,000, of whom 182,000 lived in Greater Victoria.

Pretty soon we won't be able to turn around without bumping into each other!

Temptation Is Essence Of Man's Moral Life

There is a scene in Marc Connolly's play, The Green Pastures, in which the Slender Angel says to the Stout Angel, "Po' ol' Satan. Whutevah become of him?"

I'll tell you what become of Satan. We, in our cleverness and sophisitication, have explained him away. We know that belief in a personal devil is just so much primitive supersitition — and we are intellectually far beyond that sort of thing. We don't object to the tongue-in-cheek use of the Devil in a dramatic way by a novelist or playwright, but no one in this emancipated age can be expected to take him seriously.

I wish to say a word on behalf of Satan. I do not suggest that we should believe in the existence of a personal Devil. But what bothers me is this, that by explaining away Satan as a primitive mythological figure we have tended to assume that we are also explaining away the moral and psychological reality which that figure represents and expresses.

The biblical figure of Satan, or the Devil, symbolizes the reality of temptation. The biblical notion of temptation declares that man, because of the freedom to make choices with which God has endowed him, lives in a state of inner tension. Our grandfathers used to say that God has us by one hand and the devil by the other. Contrary drives and urges struggle in the heart of man, and man must decide among them.

Temptation is in the conflict between conscience and impulse, between ideal and inclination. Temptation is a psychological fact. Temptation is of the essence of man's moral life.

In biblical thought temptation is not deemed reprehensible: It is accepted simply as a fact of human nature. Temptation is in itself morally neutral. And there is no suggestion in the Bible that temptation can ever be eliminated or overcome. We have no grounds for thinking that by the exercise of piety or by some sort of psychological calisthenics we can get ourselves beyond temptation.

Jesus himself faced temptation through the whole of his life. As the writer of the letter to the Hebrews put it, he was "in every respect ... tempted as we are." The story of his temptation by the Devil in the wilderness — explain how you will the reality behind it — is an unambiguous declaration of the reality of temptation in the life of every person.

C. S. Lewis expressed a simple biblical perspective on human nature when he wrote this: "No man knows how bad he is till he has tried very hard to be good. There is a silly idea about that good people don't know what temptation means. This is an obvious lie. Only those who try to resist temptation know how strong it is."

You can, if you wish, dismiss Satan as an outworn mythological figure. But you cannot escape the reality which that figure symbolizes.

Cast of 90 In Church Pageant

A pageant depicting the early history of Esquimalt United Church will be the highlight of its 60th anniversary celebration.

The pageant, to feature a cast of 90, will be presented Monday, May 31 at 8 p.m. in the church.

The church began in 1911 when a group of 17 men and women got together in Esquimalt and organized it.

The cast will be dressed in costumes of the day and will present a number of scenes including one duplicating a photograph of an adult Bible class in 1913. Under the leadership of Noah Shakespeare, the photographed class won two banners for having a large class attendance record of 35 adults.

The pageant will include an old fashioned Sunday school concert and a humorous scene of navy men on a church parade and will conclude with an up-to-date scene, with the youth of today challenging the church, now 60 years in existence.

On Sunday, May 30, a special service of worship will be held at 10 a.m. when Rev. Tom Griffiths, Rev. Robert Moses and Rev. Howard Turpin will assist Rev. Hartwell Illsey.

Choir members from past years will return to take part in the service.

Following the service, congregation members will remain for the cutting of the 60th anniversary cake, decorated with the history of the church, by Mrs. Rose Rogers.

The Billy Tickel Trio will provide the background music.

'Maleness' of God Hit by Women's Lib

By EDWARD B. FISKE
New York Times News Services

NEW YORK — Over the centuries, Christian theology has usually been closely linked to social and economic systems.

Kings in the Middle Ages justified their authority by religious sanctions. Max Weber and other sociologists found a casual connection between the Calvinist ethic of frugality and the rise of capitalism. Some historians have even asserted that the imperative in Genesis to assert "dominion" over the natural world has helped cause the current environmental crisis.

Now Christian orthodoxy is under attack for a new kind of social tie from a new source: the women's liberation movement.

In recent months a small number of woman theologians have begun to argue that Christianity — with its concept of God the Father — has helped create and perpetuate social practices that discriminate against women.

THREE POINTS

The feminist attack on Christian orthodoxy zeros in on three area:

1. The masculine godhead. Genesis says that God created man in his own image and as "male and female." Nevertheless God has usually been portrayed as a man, referred to with masculine pronouns and thought of as possessing masculine qualities like justice. Christians furthered the process by asserting that God became human in the person of a Jewish male.

2. Ethical hypocrisy. According to the feminist theologians, Christian leaders developed an ethics based on passive virtues like humility and obedience but then used them as a means of subduing the other sex. "While exhorting others, chiefly women, to practise Christian virtues, they have themselves pursued power, creativity and self-fulfillment on levels far removed from obedience, self-abnegation, or for that matter, chastity," wrote Barbara Sykes in a recent issue of The Episcopal New Yorker, the diocesan newspaper.

3. Religious symbols. Feminists maintain that the fundamental symbols of Christianity are rampant with male chauvinism. The story of Adam and Eve, for instance, blames women for the presence of sin in the world. Catholics complain that the figure of Mary has been idealized into a "sexless" projection of male vanities and that the usual picture of her kneeling before her son is an affront to the role God intended for women.

FEW DOZEN

There are still probably only a few dozen woman theologians and graduate students in theology, but they have already begun the task of de-masculinizing their discipline.

The obvious starting point has been to introduce female qualities to the concept of God in the manner that Christian Scientists have done for decades with their belief in a "father-mother-God."

Female theologians are consciously seeking to play down the masculinity of Jesus and emphasize his universal qualities. "It's not the maleness of Christ that was important; it was his humanity," said Elizabeth Farians, whose Ph.D. is from Notre Dame.

Although women's lib theology is still in the early stage of development it has already begun to draw some fire from male scholars. James Hitchcock, a specialist in Reformation history at St. Louis University, for instance, has charged that, like black theology, it is essentially an attempt to "redefine theological terms and categories to serve political ends."

Choirs To Perform

The choirs of Calgary, Vancouver and Spokane Anglican cathedrals will perform in Victoria this weekend.

The choirs will combine to sing 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Sunday services in Christ Church Cathedral. Both services will be sung in the English cathedral tradition.

Mr. Patrick Wedd, organist and choirmaster of St. Mary's Church, Vancouver, will present Olivier Messiaen's Ascension Suite.

Very Rev. D. J. Carter, dean of Calgary, will be preacher at the 11 a.m. service, and the Rev. Canon Baker at 4 p.m.

Art Recovered

ROME (Reuter, — Italian police recovered six stolen 15th-century paintings worth about $1.6 million as they were about to be smuggled over the Swiss border and arrested two men, it was announced here. The police art squad said the paintings, by the Venetian painter Bartolomeo Vivarini, were stolen from the Church of San Bernardino in the village of Morano Calabro in the southern province of Calabria.

Charges of 'Diplomacy Sabotage' Denied by Local Fishermen

American charter-boat operators and part-time commercial fishermen are trying to sabotage international fishing agreements between Canada and the United States, using false accusations in "a power play," a spokesman for local fishermen charged today.

Dick Williams was commenting on a statement by Jim Bolin, manager of the West Coast Trollers Association in Port Angeles, accusing Canadians of catching illegal salmon off the Washington coast.

Bolin says the Canadians are taking immature coho in large quantities. Fishing of any coho is banned until June 15 when the season opens.

W. R. Hourston, department of fisheries area director in Vancouver, backs up Williams' claim that the accusations are false.

"If they're inferring that we're taking immature silvers — we're denying it. The fishermen aren't taking them."

Williams says that WCTA members are "kelpers" and "pukers" — owners of small boats who fish mainly on a part-time basis.

In international agreement between Canada and the United States which allows Canadians to fish between the 3 and 12-mile limit off Washington and the Americans in similar boundaries off the west coast of Vancouver Island is due to be re-ratified in June.

Williams says that Bolin's move is geared to stall the new agreement.

"The WCTA has a very large fleet of small boats that fish very much in one area. They aren't interested in fishing anywhere else. They just don't want any Canadians in there. Quite frankly, they don't want us there because we outfish them with our better selection of gear."

He says that Bolin "is grinding an axe" and that the Canadians have repeatedly tried to negotiate with the WCTA.

"But we can't get him to get any of his executive along. He runs a one-man show — and he admits it."

Because of discontent with the WCTA, Williams says that American commercial fishermen with boats the size of Canadian trollers broke away from the WCTA and formed the North West Trollers Association.

They, too, want the reciprocal agreement renewed.

Williams explains that Canadian-reared and American-hatched salmon meet in a "big area of intermingling stocks."

"Last year all our stocks were down on the American side. There's no way you can draw a line at the mouth of the Juan de Fuca."

Williams is sure that Canadian fishermen are not going to risk the penalties involved if they're caught with illegal salmon aboard.

"We have to observe all American fishing regulations. If you're caught you can kiss your boat goodbye. You lose the whole bloody outfit for a few measly cohos."

THE GALLUP POLL

Most Canadians Favor Open Books

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION
(World Copyright Reserved)

Most Canadians (58 per cent) accept the principle that when a company refuses to pay a wage increase to its employees, they should have the right to examine the company's books todetermine its ability or inability to pay. Among those in labor union homes, almost seven-in-ten (69 per cent) think they should have this privilege. Just over half of those in non-union homes (54 per cent) agree with the suggestion.

Belief that employees should be able to see the company's financial status when a wage increase is refused is most wide-spread in Quebec, where 64 per cent of the people hold this view. In Ontario the proportion is smaller, 58 per cent, compared to 55 per cent in the Maritimes and 54 per cent in the west.

The question:

"WHEN A COMPANY REFUSES TO PAY A WAGE INCREASE TO ITS EMPLOYEES, SHOULD THEY HAVE A RIGHT TO EXAMINE THE COMPANY'S BOOKS TO DETERMINE ITS ABILITY OR INABILITY TO PAY, OR NOT?"

The table below shows how Canadians think, regionally, as compared with the national average, and how membership in a labor-union affects their thinking.

| | Yes, Have Right | No, Have Not | Undecided |
|---|---|---|---|
| CANADA | 58% | 32% | 10% |
| Maritimes | 55 | 27 | 18 |
| Quebec | 64 | 30 | 6 |
| Ontario | 58 | 30 | 12 |
| The West | 54 | 36 | 10 |
| Union Members | 69 | 22 | 9 |
| Non-Union | 54 | 35 | 11 |

THAR'S GOLD IN THET COURTHOUSE

YREKA, Calif. (AP) — If Siskiyou County officials ever dig a basement under the courthouse, they probably won't give the dirt away. They've found it's paydirt.

County Supervisor George Wacker and Ernest Hayden recently dug out a sample of the dirt and gravel under the building to see if it could be easily removed to open up a new storage area.

Wacker, a miner in his youth, panned the sample and found "quite a string of gold," in it. He estimated there is about $1,000 worth beneath the building.

SNEEZE ACCEPTED AS EXCUSE

WIGAN, England (UPI) — A court cleared Brenda Welsby, 20, of a careless driving charge when she told them she had hit a highway bridge after sneezing.

Her lawyer, Clifford Barker, said that a sneeze was like an act of God and could not be avoided. Miss Welsby, who escaped with cuts and bruises, said the sneeze came without warning.

RARE INDIAN FINDS

She's a Beachcomber Whom Museums Pursue

By PAT MUNSON

Hours of patient beachcombing and "knowing what to look for" have filled the North Saanich home of Edie Cross with rare Indian artifacts, some of which will be loaned this summer to the Whitney Museum in New York for a travelling display of American art.

An affinity for the coast Indians grew out of childhood years spent by Mrs. Cross with her family near Cowichan. Fascinated by Indian culture, Mrs. Cross began collecting relics and carvings in 1919 by cruising the coast, searching the beaches after storms and making friends with Indians in remote villages.

In 1962, her collection overflowed available space and 230 items were acquired by University of B.C.

"But I was lonely without my Indian things" explains the energetic, husky-voiced collector, who feels strongly that Canadian Indian art should stay in Canada. Now the pleasant seafront home is filled again with the fierce and funny masks of Indian tradition, delicate ornaments, deerhorn spoons, whalebone arrowheads, woven baskets and the painted and carved utensils of native culture.

Only a few pieces will be loaned to Whiney Museum. One of these is a large stone mortar bowl of Haida Indian design from Masset, carved with hands clasping it and a beaver head. There is also a carved and painted ceremonial box from Bella Coola which contains a Tlingit blanket made of goat hair woven on a warp of cedar roots, and a whaler's curtain date 1860, found in Nootka.

The whaler's curtain, painted on Hudson's Bay muslin was used as a screen in dances during the whale season, above which gyrated the fearsome mask of D'Sonoqua, wild woman of the woods.

Strange relic of another culture is the stone bowl carved in the shape of a seated human figure. Found in the Gulf Islands (others have been found in the Fraser River) the carving is similar in style to Polynesian work. Mrs. Cross estimates that this piece is 2,000 to 3,500 years old.

Especially prized by Edie Cross are the spirit dance costumes (one decorated with rows of puffin beaks) and the talking sticks hung with clattering deer hooves.

An Indian friend reprimanded Mrs. Cross a year ago, when she was suffering with back trouble. "No wonder you sick with all these things together!" exclaimed the friend, meaning that the powerful spirits represented by the dresses were not in harmony.

But Mrs. Cross has been a privileged spectator at Indian dances and appreciates the reverence with which these articles are treated. By collecting, she feels she is helping to preserve the remaining elements of early Indian tradition.

It takes a keen eye to discern the difference between an ordinary sea-polished pebble and a "libret" an ornament which some native people used to push through a hole below the mouth. A rusted fragment of metal may turn out to have the distinctive markings of a "copper", the beaten copper plaque which was once the most valued symbol of wealth.

Prosperous chieftains would toss their coppers into the sea to impress visiting tribes at potlatch time (sending their men down to retrieve the precious status symbol when no one was looking).

In the Cross collection, a Mungo Martin carving is flanked by another, more instricate design by Charlie James, Mungo's teacher. There is a huge bear mask peering out of a black bear skin from the Nass, wolf masks from Nitnat, a "fool" mask with grotesque squinting eyes (an Iroquois influence) and masks trimmed with eagle feathers clipped in arrow forms, Nootka fashion.

VD Program Avoids 'Scare'

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario department of health has hired five writers and designers for 17 weeks to create a multi-media program to inform about venereal disease.

"It's going to be different from the kind of scare programs sporadically thrown at us in my generation," Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said in an interview.

The program, outlined briefly to a legislature committee studying his department's $990 million estimates, was announced several months ago by former health minister Thomas Wells.

The disease was described as a "near epidemic" in a report published at that time.

The public campaign will make use of recorded telephone messages, posters, pamphlets on sale "on the street" like underground newspapers, films, books, television and radio, material for schools and special literature for homosexuals.

By June 15, persons in Metropolitan Toronto will be able to dial a recorded telephone message that will explain where the nearest clinic is and what hours it will be open. Depending on the response, the telephone message may be extended to Hamilton, London, Windsor and Ottawa.

Balls Not Affected

Victorian Days balls planned by the Esquimalt Chamber of Commerce next Thursday and by the Princess Mary's Regiment next Saturday have not been affected by cancellation of the inaugural ball, and will be held as scheduled, spokesmen said Friday.

'Poison Power' To Power People

DUNCAN — The local SPEC group will send copies of "Poison Power," by Dr. John Goffman, to people in positions of power who tend to think nuclear power would be an asset.

The membership agreed Thursday to purchase 50 copies of the book, which discusses the dangers of nuclear electrical generation, and send them to people like Dr. Gordon Shrum of B.C. Hydro and provincial cabinet ministers. A dozen of these books will be kept on hand for the use of the Cowichan-Malahat membership.

Weaker Dollars Pad U.S. Incomes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Census Bureau says U.S. families earned a record median income of $9,870 last year, but in actual buying power the dollar lost ground for the first time in nine years.

The bureau reported Thursday that a survey of 50,000 families indicated median income increased $440 from 1969.

But because of inflation, the bureau said, the purchasing power of $9,870 was only $9,867 in "constant dollars" — dollars that have been adjusted for cost of living changes.

In another report Thursday, the commerce department said Americans, their government and their businesses were in debt by a record $1.84 trillion by the end of 1970.

If you are planning a trip to Europe, read why you should sail there on the Empress of Canada.

If you're looking for something more than just transportation, if you want to make your travel time part of your holiday, and if you would like to arrive in Europe relaxed, rejuvenated, and rarin' to go — then welcome aboard the Empress of Canada.

Empress of Canada. 25,800 tons of stabilized, air-conditioned, holiday atmosphere. A veritable floating hotel with every comfort.

Elevators to take you from deck to deck.

A shopping centre with Duty-Free Shops.

Beauty salon.

Barbershop.

Even supervised nurseries where the kids can play while you kick up your heels.

Think about it.

And think about the six glorious days you'll spend in complete freedom.

To wander at will.

To enjoy the lounges — where drinks are one-third the price you'd normally pay ashore.

Think about the meals.

Temptation-filled menus where the only problem is "everything looks so good". And where the only thing missing is a price list. The meals are included in your low fare.

You'll probably eat too much — but who cares — you're on holiday.

From the moment the Empress of Canada leaves Montreal and heads down the scenic St. Lawrence, you're in a different world.

A friendlier, more carefree world.

Of parties and singing and dancing and laughter.

Where you can swing to music 'til the small hours. Or take things easy while professional talent entertains you.

You can join in (or ignore) the deck sports.

Try your luck in the Casino.

Watch a first run movie in the Cinema.

Take a dip in the pool.

And whether it's at mid-morning or afternoon snacktime, marvel at the service provided by the Empress staff.

The kind of personal service you thought had gone out of style.

Sound inviting?

It is.

At least once everybody should experience the joy of an ocean crossing.

And of all the great ships that have plied the Atlantic, the Empress of Canada is right up there with the best of them.

Sleek, gleaming, comfortable.

With accommodation suitable for all — Tourist or first class.

Fares start as low as $283 — one way tourist — even lower during thrift season.

Regular sailings from April 22 to November 16.

Ask CP Ships or your Travel Agent to take care of the details.

They'll help you with passports.

Explain about the large baggage allowance.

Give you helpful information about your destination.

Show you how you can take your car with you if you wish.

All you have to do is decide to go.

Decide to sample the Empress of Canada way of life to Europe.

We'll meet you in the Banff Room for cocktails.

The Red Curtain Is Going Up

Great Sights, Good Food, Reasonable Prices, and No Tipping

By NORMAN WEBSTER
The Globe and Mail

PEKING — "Holidays in China, the People's Republic," a recent add in The Times of London said, and for the first time in nearly five years there may be something to it.

The ad offers Cook's tours visiting Hong Kong, Canton, Shanghai and Peking, from 350 pounds for 18 days — "subject to government approval." The governmount in question is the one in Peking.

There are indications that that approval may soon be given to a range of travellers. The news should be encouraging to people who play a bad game of ping-pong but would still like to visit this country.

With the Cultural Revolution behind it, China seems ready once again to put selected sections of its industry, agriculture, society and history on general display. Guides and hotels are being readied, lists of applications studied, historical sites prepared.

In Peking the Forbidden City, home and court of China's emperors, has been shown to foreigners in recent weeks and will reopen to the public this summer. Visits to the Great Wall of China and tombs of the Ming dynasty outside the city still require special permission, but it is being readily given.

The huge museum of China's history and its revolution which borders Tien An Men Square on the east may soon reopen doors closed during the Cultural Revolution. Chinese officials have said the Museum of Fine Arts will probably be open again to foreigners soon.

Likely stops on any tours are reported by recent visitors to be gearing up. Peking, Canton, Shanghai, Nanking, Hangchow, Wuhan, Changsha and others have good hotels and a supply of guides.

Members of Peking's diplomatic corps recently returned fron a 12-day trip in the provinces with glowing notices for the facilities and treatment.

Foreign groups given visas will likely include athletic, educational and cultural delegations, leftist organizations, fair numbers of journalists, some politicians (perhaps including a few Americans) — and before long perhaps even groups of ordinary tourists. A group organized by the Centre for Continuing Education of the University of British Columbia will make a three-week visit in August.

Not all visits to China ceased in recent years. There has been a limited amount of travel here by foreigners.

Generally they were from countries which have especially warm relations with China (e.g. Albania, North Vietnam) or from areas China is wooing hard (e.g. Africa). There have, though, been trips by groups from countries on less than intimate terms.

Japanese politicians, workers, teachers and students have visited in the past year, and last fall in Shanghai and Nanking I kept running into a squad of young Scandinavian leftists with Mao badges on their shirts. Groups from England and France have toured, and one from Australia was here this month.

Signs that China plans to step up the flow include the reopening of obvious tourist attractions, recent discussions in Peking with Albanian, North Vietnamese and North Korean travel representatives, Premier Chou En-lai's warm words to the visiting ping-pong teams, the sudden opening up to foreign journalists, the optimism of well-connected travel agents in Hong Kong and discreet hints by Chinese officials to diplomats in Peking.

When full tourism is finally resumed, something that might take a couple of years, China will be one of the great places in the world to visit — for its history, its people and culture, its social experimentation and its prices. A few notes for those who may come soon:

Most travellers will enter the country from Hong Kong. You go from Hong Kong to the Chinese border by train, alight, pass through Hong Kong immigration, walk across a bridge over the border river, are checked by Chinese health, immigration and customs, eat lunch, then board another train for Canton.

It takes about six hours to Canton in all. By air it would take no more than half an hour, but there is no air link between China and Hong Kong.

You can fly into China. Aeroflot will bring you to Peking, Air France to Shanghai and Pakistan International Airlines to Shanghai or Canton. China has routes, too, to Pyongyang and Hanoi, but you probably won't be coming in that way.

There is no air link between Asia's two most important and unfriendly capitals, Peking and Tokyo. Nor is it likely that Canadian Pacific Airlines, which badly want to, will soon be flying into China.

Inside the country you will fly in prop planes, likely in comfortable British Viscounts or cramped Russian

The Chinese Are So Honest You Can't Lose Your Garbage

Ilyushins. China has not yet put into domestic service the British Trident jets it bought last year from Pakistan.

Chinese stewardesses are not, dressed by Emilio Pucci. They wear the same baggy pants and jacket as everyone else in China, usually grey.

In contrast to hotels, restaurants and trains, meals are poor on China's planes. Sometimes there is a cold plate of peanuts, buns, cakes and mysterious bits of pig. More often you are handed a plate, knife, apple and pear and left to peel your lunch.

Unadvertised tourist attraction: most airports are combination military-civilian affairs, and you can pass the time at some of them watching Chinese MiG fighters practise screaming takeoffs and landings.

All travel arrangements, hotel accommodations, visits and so on are arranged by the China Travel Service. Guide-interpreters of varying quality are also supplied to keep you on your appointed path, advise when you may or may not take photographs and fill you in on the Maoist political line.

The guides are necessary. Very few Chinese speak anything but, and there is no way you can puzzle out the meaning of the Chinese characters on street or shop signs.

Most churches you see are derelict, often with broken windows and covered with slogans. Sometimes people are living in them. There was washing hanging from the windows of one we passed in Shanghai.

There are no beggars in China, and there is no, repeat no, tipping. You get a receipt for everything and your change always comes back correct to the last fen (two fifths of a cent).

Nor are the tales of Chinese honesty exaggerated, at least where foreigners are concerned. You need not lock your hotel room, and you can leave a bag or a camera unattended almost anywhere and find it still there when you return.

This can create problems. It is very hard to throw something away in China. When you are checking out, your room will be searched for things you may have forgotten, and the contents of your waste basket may pursue you through the lobby.

As your plane taxis out to take off, the stewardess informs passengers in Chinese and English that no firearms, explosives, inflammables, corrosives, poisons or radio-active or other forbidden materials may be carried by them.

"If you have any of these, please give them to us," she says. "They will be properly taken care of and returned at the end of the flight." (Really?)

It is, in addition, forbidden to use cameras, binoculars and radios while the plane is in flight.

Sample prices: a room for two with bath in the first class hotel for foreigners in Nanking costs $4.40 a night. Meal prices, too, are more than reasonable.

Best idea is to travel Chinese plan for $1.30 a day you take what they give you, waiting in anticipation at each meal to see just what is coming. Don't worry. Three times a day there will be enough rice, meat, vegetables, and noodles or bread to feed two or three of you — and it will be good.

In trains, as on planes, there is a heavy ration of politics over the loudspeakers. Music is interspersed with Mao quotations, current slogans, the reading in full of major editorials, news and injunctions to passengers not to waste hot water. Each four-bunk compartment in the first-class carriages has a little knob just under the table on the right which turns the volume down — but not off.

This ensures you won't miss reveille on the overnight trains, 6:15 in the morning, boy, and you are knocked out of bed by The East is Red, two snappy quotes from the Chairman and a rousing chorus of Sailing the Seas Depends on the Helmsman.

Long Beach is everything you used to hear about a Southern California vacation.

And then some.
The great white beaches. Long Beach puts 5.5 miles of clean sand and ocean right at your feet (if you stay inland, it's about a 20-mile freeway drive to the beach). And the only time the beach is as crowded as the Fourth of July is during the Sea Festival in August.
The sun. It still shines 300 days out of the year. And you can see mountains, and Catalina Island.
Roses and orange blossoms. You can still smell them in the air.
Year around golf, on courses that appeal to both duffers and pros alike.
A blend of the old and the new. Lots of fine examples of old Spanish architecture, yet high rise hotels, luxury motels, and contemporary office buildings.
The fishing's still great. The Long Beach off-shore preserves and Belmont Pier, Pierpoint and Pacific Landing combine with the 1800-boat Marina in Alamitos Bay to make it a sport fisherman's dream.
And then some. Long Beach is the center of Southern California. Look at the map. It's about 25-30 minutes from major Southern California attractions. Disneyland and Marineland included.
And there's the Queen Mary —now open to the public.
Finally, a Long Beach vacation is a good buy. The average family cost-per-day is less than other areas of Southern California.
But hurry. Good news travels fast.

EMPTY SHANGHAI AIRPORT READY FOR THE WORLD

SHANGHAI, China — Neat, well-furnished and still shiny as new, the big international section of the Hungjao Air Terminal in Shanghai is mostly an empty showpiece.

Used by international air services only three times a week, the terminal, which this correspondent saw last week, symbolizes the near-isolation of China from world air traffic. However, its readiness for greater use may be a harbinger of future links that could result from the new Peking policy of opening doors to the outside world.

Similar big international terminals in Canton and Peking are also infrequently used. In fact, the only foreign airlines that fly into China are the Soviet Union's Aeroflot, the North Korean airline, Air France and Pakistan International Airlines. Peking's own Civil Aviation Administration of China runs international flights to Moscow, to Hanoi, to Rangoon, the capital of Burma, and to Pyongyang, North Korea.

Aeroflot has two flights a week into Peking, Pakistan International Airlines flies twice a week into Shanghai and Canton, Air France flies one a week into Shanghai and the North Korean airline flies once a week into Shenyang and Peking.

Chinese flights are made twice a week to Hanoi, once a week to Pyongyang via Shenyang and once a week to Rangoon.

The domestic air services in China are sketchy enough, though considerably more developed than the country's international services.

All main cities are linked, but frequencies even for the big coastal cities are not great. There is, for example, only a once-a-week non-stop flight originating in Shanghai and going to Canton. Other daily flights on this route stop twice on the way.

Civil Aviation Administration of China operates no pure jet aircraft. The mainstay of its fleet for longer flights are British Viscount turbojets and Soviet Ilyushin-14 turbojets. The Chinese themselves make a big, single-engine biplane for short hauls but no larger transport planes.

Peking acquired four British-made three-jet Tridents from Pakistan last year, but has not yet put these planes into service. When questioned, officials say a training program for personnel to fly and maintain the planes is still going on.

Actually, air travel does not appear to be popular in China. Train services are good, and people generally seem to prefer the trains.

Train fares were raised recently, and air travel is now cheaper than first-class train travel, but many planes still fly with empty seats.

Pilots on the Chinese planes wear no special uniform, not even distinctive caps, and dress in the same ill-fitting khaki trousers and jackets as military men.

Ground and cabin hostesses are helpful and courteous and especially go out of their way to welcome foreigners. They likewise have no special uniforms.

Polish Metropolis Presents Two Faces

KATOWICE, Poland (AP) — Part of Katowice is a bleak urban vista of slag heaps and muddy side streets. The air is peppered with coal dust.

Yet there are also modern apartment houses, and the shops offer more apples, wines and sausages than stores in many parts of Poland. Toy chicks and lilies brightened one shop window before Easter. The people are proud of the bigness of their city and its liveness.

The coal miners of Katowice are hard-working people who jostle each other on the street. But if you want culture there's an opera house, and movie theatres are showing Medium Cool and Belle de Jour.

This town, 150 miles southwest of Warsaw, is the home base of Edward Gierek, Poland's new Communist party chief, and it bears his stamp.

RIOTS HIT CITY

Gierek, himself a former miner, helped build this sprawling urban complex of three million people, 76 coal mines and 16 ironworks into one of the most prosperous areas that any Communist country has.

Riots elsewhere in Poland over higher food prices and low living conditions swept him from Katowice to national leadership last December.

"Things are better in Katowice because of Gierek," one student said. "Maybe now he can do it for all of Poland."

The coal miners here earn an average of 4,200 zlotys a month, or $175 at the official exchange rate. That's 50 per cent more than the average Pole makes.

Stores are better stocked, too. "I come to Katowice to do my shopping," says a woman from 50 miles away in Krakow, "because there's always more and better things in the shops, like dresses."

"Other regions say we have better shopping conditions, but we are not satisfied," Wieslaw Pietak, Katowice's chief retail planner, said in an interview. "There are some shortages."

"In the last five years we built 800 small shopping centres in Katowice province. But we are not yet keeping up with the rate of population growth. Some suburbs don't get new shops soon enough."

STRESS GOOD LIFE

It's the better side of life here that people like to stress, and other Polish cities are copying some of the tricks Katowice planners use.

To make sure their members get enough good food, trade unions have organized teams to go out to the farms and truck meat, fruits and vegetables to the stores. That way they help prevent the transport bottlenecks that plague other parts of Poland.

McLaughlin Planetarium Does Its Best

TORONTO (CP) — The McLaughlin Planetarium is doing its best to live up to the demands of the man who put up $2 million to build it.

R. S. (Sam) McLaughlin asked only that the planetarium adjunct to the Royal Ontario Museum here be the best that could be made.

Since the doors opened in 1968 to the domed building just off Queen's Park, McLaughlin, who made a fortune in car manufacturing has been back four times to check into the fruits of his gift — despite his age. He will be 100 next Sept. 8.

Sea travel. It's richer, but it's less expensive.

On a P&O Cruise, even your billfold gets a vacation.

In past years, vacation costs most places have skyrocketed. But on P&O, accommodations, three meals, snacks, recreation, entertainment and transportation can still average out to less than $26 a day.

Money travels better at sea.

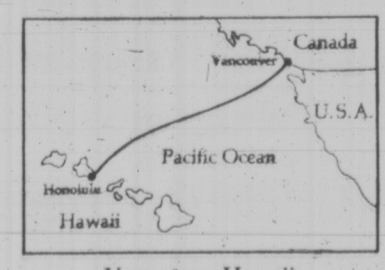
At sea, you avoid the little financial surprises that can turn a vacation into a trip to the cleaners. Like having to rent cars. Or pay a cover charge to enjoy live entertainment. Or being presented with an enormous dinner check. You know before you leave just about what you'll spend. Plus, on P&O, you enjoy a number of traditional British touches that don't touch your pocketbook at all.

1. If you wish, you can wake up to coffee and juice served in bed, free.
2. You have your own personal butler as a cabin steward to pamper and look after you.
3. Or help yourself to a deck chair. On P&O, we don't charge people to use them.
4. If you have small children traveling with you, you can leave them to play in a nursery under the watchful eye of a real English nanny. There's no charge.
5. On a P&O ship, a drink in a nightclub where there is live entertainment costs just 22 cents.

In fact, once you're aboard a big, beautiful P&O cruise ship, you can almost live without money altogether. And if that isn't getting away from the minor frustrations of life, what is?

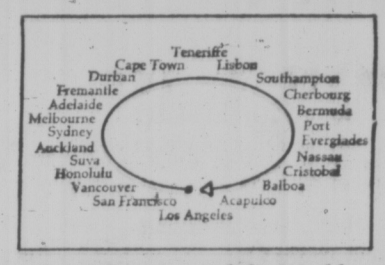
The Caribbean via Panama Canal. From US$ 306.

About two weeks. S.S. Oriana sails from Vancouver May 29, S.S. Iberia July 14. Via West Coast ports to Acapulco, then through Panama Canal to the Caribbean and Nassau. Or take S.S. Oronsay June 23 to Curacao and Trinidad. Fly home. (Air fare not included)



Vancouver-Hawaii. From US$ 161.

S.S. Arcadia sails from Vancouver July 24. Four full days of Pacific cruising, sunning, pool-swimming, deck-chair dozing. International cuisine in a charming dining room, and a full entertainment program shared with shipmates from all over the world. Plus service in traditional British style.



Seven Seas Around the World. From US$ 2926.

89 day escorted tour. S.S. Orsova sails from Vancouver August 25. Cross the Pacific via Hawaii, Fiji, New Zealand to Australia. On to Southampton via Cape Town and Lisbon. Tour of Portugal and Spain included. Return from Southampton on S.S. Iberia, via the Caribbean and Panama.

ALL DRESSED UP for the Victoria Days Arts Ball are (from left) Elinor Bertram, Jerry Gosley and Inez O'Reilly. The ball will be held Monday, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., in the dining room of the Commons Building of Craigdarroch College, University of Victoria. The organizers hope guests will wear costumes which, like the ones above, reflect the glamor of early Victorian society.

SCHOOL YEAR MISSED

Deadline Hits New Year Babies

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Happy is the child born on New Year's Day.

Everyone notices the first-born in each year. Their names are in the newspapers and often there is a picture of mother and infant.

Turn the pages five years ahead, and you are likely to find furious parents — because the Public Schools Act sets the deadline for admittance at Dec. 31.

A few hours, or a few minutes, can and do add up to a year's delay in starting school.

"Many of us feel the rule is not right and would like to see it changed," Dr. John Wiens, director of instruction for the Greater Victoria school district, said in an interview.

"But as long as the rule is there, we have to accept it. The topic likely will be discussed one of these days by the board."

The Public Schools Act states that a person is of school age in a school year "if, on or before the 31st day of December in that school year, he has attained or shall have attained the age of six or more years."

But if the child attains the age of six one day, one week, one month or several months after Dec. 31 — it's too bad, they cannot enter.

The school district's policy is drawn from the act but says "normally" only those who will be six or more by Dec. 31 shall be admitted.

This sounds like exceptions can be made, but Wiens said this isn't so. The word "normally" is a re-emphasis of the law, he said, referring to children coming from elsewhere not automatically being admitted at the same or next grade.

Wiens said there are several approaches which could be explored by the government "and it is up to them to change the rules."

"There should be some options, some flexibility, rather than a yes-no situation."

One approach could be admitting children at a certain age, but if local conditions make if feasible and advisable in the opinion of the local authority, an option could exist below that age.

If, for example, in any given year, there is a low enrolment of beginners and there is space, "we should seriously consider admitting students under the usual age. Those who are ready would graduate a year earlier."

Perhaps more important, he said, is that some children come unprepared for school so perhaps a two-year kindergarten program would improve their chances of learning later in elementary school.

One of the arguments against changing the law, he said, is to prevent children being admitted before they are ready for school because of parental pressure.

"If we had flexibility, no doubt we would be under considerable pressure and we would have to develop means of restricting inappropriate demands," he said.

Asked if many people bring this problem to the district's attention, he said not many "but enough to show there is a problem there." Some parents knew there could be no exceptions so they didn't pursue it.

Asked why there should be a fixed deadline anyway, he said it is a tradition in Canada and the United States. He favored children starting school when they want to during the year.

Wiens emphasized that his answers tended to be in terms of ideals. "What I am saying is not imminent, just what I believe," he said.

Asked as an administration man what chance there is of breaking the present rigidity, he said: "Not much in the next year or two, 50-50 if five years, a good chance in 10 years."

He also said there is a growing sophistication among starting children, resulting from such factors as television and day care, "and I suspect this will change the entrance age."

Williston Says Pollution May Foster Prosperity

Land values will increase because of industrial pollution, Ray Williston minister of Lands, Forests and Water Resources, told members of the Appraisal Institute of Canada Friday afternoon.

Williston said that while the immediate result of industrial pollution was to lower land values, once the pollution was under control land values would rise because of increased prosperity in the area.

Williston said that B.C. had not established regulations setting an absolute standard of pollution control, because in some areas it would be impossible for any company to meet such standards. Each industry is judged individually on the basis of its location and the effluent discharged into air, land or water.

"Polution control in B.C. is concerned with waste management," he said. The director of pollution control issues permits to industry outlining regulations that must be met to keep the pollution in line with standards set by government departments.

Williston said that the government of B.C. was trying to steer a middle course between preservation of the environment and the need to develop the provinces natural resources.

He said that prior to the passing of the New Environment and Land Use Act in 1970 decisions on pollution had been in the hands of the civil servants. "We were letting civil servants decide on the basis of pollution whether a vast enterprise should be undertaken," Williston said.

SPENT MILLIONS

"We were letting one man (the pollution inspector) decide after an industry had spent millions. The government must be in charge of such decisions," Williston said.

Under the new act an industry must get the approval of the Land Use Committee that the discharge can be absorbed by the environment.

The pollution inspector then sets the rules for handling the discharge.

Williston complained about scare headlines in the press about proposed dam sites. "I suppose they think we should hold committee hearings on ideas," he said. "When something tangible comes along then we'll hold a hearing."

Car Key Shopping Factor

The automobile can be the deciding factor in whether a shopping centre succeeds or fails an Urban Geographer from the University of British Columbia warned delegates to the national conference of the Appraisal Institute of Canada at the Empress Friday.

Dr. R. James Claus advised appraisers to make careful studies of traffic patterns and automobile registrations in an area before deciding on a site for shopping centre development.

"From the number of cars in an area it is possible to judge the income in the area and potential sales," Claus said.

He pointed out that if a potential business is planned for a traffic oriented area great care must be taken in selecting the site.

Claus said that women in North America will not turn left in an automobile if they can possibly avoid it." In England they won't turn right."

"The automobile gives us mobility but also imposes rules of its own," Claus said. Research has shown that a man will drive 10 miles home and stop for gas on the way, but is unwilling to go a block or two out of his way once he gets near his destination.

He said the traditional assumption that the best business sites are located at crossroads no longer holds true. "This was true for railroads but does not apply to automobiles," Claus said.

He pointed out that a corner location is a poor choice for a dry cleaner. Their business involves two stops for a driver. A corner location means that a driver has trouble getting back out into traffic.

The best location is in the middle of the block on the right hand side of the road. "A husband will pull in on the way to work to drop off the dry cleaning," he said.

He will pick it up on the way home and will have to cross the street to do so.

The disinclination on the part of the public to cross the street doesn't count in this case, Claus explained." The husband wouldn't dare go home without the dry cleaning."

"If the city comes along and puts in a divider on the street the dry cleaner is dead," he said.

He said that an appraiser advising on a business site must know the traffic volume, the type of road, traffic speed and type of traffic. "It is vitally important to know whether traffic is commuter, shopper or tourist," Claus said.

He pointed out that while urban planners and sociologists don't know why cities are the way they are let alone what they will become gas companies do know. They have spent millions finding out in order to predict future sales.

Girl Wins Top Award For Salesmen

Ann VanderHooft was awarded a $100 bursary as best salesman for Victoria and the best salesman for B.C. award at the Future Unlimited Banquet Thursday of the Victoria branch of Junior Achievement.

Winning the provincial award means that Miss Vanderhooft, a Grade 12 student at Claremont Senior Secondary, will compete in the national Junior Achievement conference in Montreal this July.

The bursary is awarded by Sales and Marketing executives of Victoria.

Other award winners at the banquet, held at Craigdarroch College at the University of Victoria, were:

President of the year — Paul Partridge of Ubican, sponsored by The Bay Company of the year — Ubican.

Best Shareholders report — Thurco, sponsored by Victoria Press.

Treasurer of the year — Suzanne Heard;

Best marketing executive — Mike Martyn of Jaycan, winner of the $100 bursary awarded by the sales and marketing executives of Victoria;

Miss Junior Achievement — Laura Porcher of Fortran sponsored by IBM.

Executive awards — Paul Partridge, president of Ubican; Sherry Froese, president of Telstar; Julie Petersen, secretary of Jasco.

Delegates to the national conference in Montreal are Laura Porcher, Kerry Milveen and Danny Belcher.

Best sales for the year were by Ubican, which sold $1,377.56 in glass candle holders.

Miss Heard also won the provincial treasurer of the year award. Partridge was runner up for provincial president of the year.

Evidence Disproves Pill, Cancer Linked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A British doctor has reported that a two-year study of 220 women taking birth-control pills showed no relationship between the pill and the incidence of breast cancer. In fact, he reported, taking the pill may even reduce the danger of lumps to the breast.

Birth control pills, many of which increase the hormone estrogen in a woman's body, have come under attack by many authorities who contend they may cause cancer or other diseases.

"No evidence has been found so far that oral contraceptives are associated with an increased risk of breast neoplasia (tumors)" said Dr. Martin P. Vessey, a lecturer in epidemiology at the University of Oxford.

"Indeed," Vessey told an American Cancer Society conference on breast cancer, "these preliminary data suggest that the preparations tend to protect against the development of benign non-cancerous lesions."

Vessey said he and two other researchers conducted a study from Dec. 1, 1968 until last Dec. 31, interviewing women in five London hospitals admitted with breast lumps.

TRACK OPERATION OFF AND RUNNING

Operation Track Shoes is in the last lap and still running strong.

The prize will be collected Sunday, June 6, at Centennial Stadium, University of Victoria, when the first Vancouver Island track meet for the retarded gets under way. Entrance to the event, which will last from 1 to 4 p.m., will be free.

"We want to make it as much like a regular track meet as we can," explained Judith Armstrong, 18, one of the organizers of Operation Track Shoes.

"We've received about 40 applications already and one mother wrote with hers that these children liked to do things other kids do. It gives them a feeling of belonging."

The race began in February when the president of the Shawnigan Lake Boys School Spade club showed films of the Chicago Special Olympics and the Canadian Special Olympics at the Oak Bay fire hall.

Judith, who was a member of the Oak Bay Spade club before she graduated from high school last spring, said few attended the showing. But those few began going to Spade clubs throughout the city, suggesting that a similar event be held here.

Spade, a Kiwanis-sponsored organization for secondary school students, organized a meeting at Mount Douglas which drew about 80 people from a variety of organizations, and Operation Track Shoes was off the ground.

The group adopted a motto Give Us Ground We Can Cover and began to organize. They plan 18 events. Entrants will be divided into four age groups: 7 to 10, 11 to 15, 16 to 18 and open, and these groups will further be divided into novice, intermediate and junior levels.

If finances allow, there will be medals and trophies for the winners.

Children from all over the Island are eligible to enter.

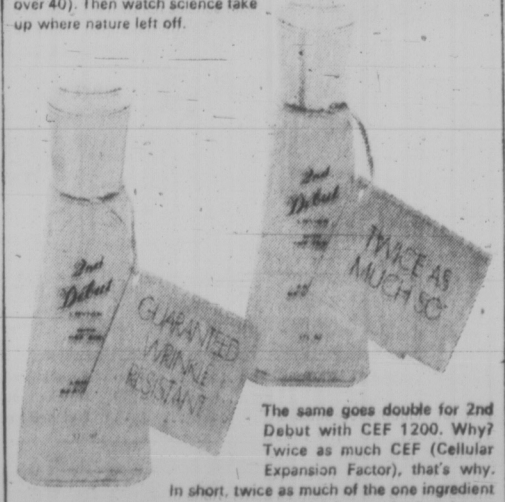
Discover 2nd Debut and put beauty before age!

And 2nd Debut helps your skin resist a lot more than just wrinkles. Like age lines and crow's feet, for example. Not to mention all the other annoying little telltale signs that your skin has started losing some of its natural moisture.

How? By adding a scientific ingredient based on a European discovery known as CEF (Cellular Expansion Factor) that compels your skin's inner cells to drink in the necessary pure, fresh moisture. Just rub in 2nd Debut once in the morning and again before retiring. (Use 2nd Debut with CEF 600 for mild ageing problems; or CEF 1200 for the impatient woman in a hurry, or for the face over 40). Then watch science take up where nature left off.



The same goes double for 2nd Debut with CEF 1200. Why? Twice as much CEF (Cellular Expansion Factor), that's why. In short, twice as much of the one ingredient that can compel your inner skin cells to drink in pure, fresh moisture.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Something to make your eyes pop! . . .

We've been sitting at our typewriter for close to half an hour . . . groping for words with which to describe Standard Furniture's current show of Selig contemporary furniture . . . No way! Standard calls it the "Eye" show, so we suspect they had the same problem . . . it calls for seeing rather than reading about . . . So if your eyes haven't yet beheld it . . . you owe it to yourself to visit Standard before the show closes the end of next week . . . You'll find the whole third floor set up in groupings of this ultra-modern furniture . . . an entirely new concept, and the largest display of its kind in North America . . . See the "Katz Meow" . . . a huge sectional sofa with "lynx" covering and frame of high gloss bright candy red lacquer . . . The body-caressing chaise covered in fake monkey fur . . . The huge circular conversation pit group . . . which seats 10-12 people comfortably, around a glass-topped table . . . The chair made of sausage-like tiltable cushions . . . sheer heaven to sink into! . . . The wide-whale corduroy chesterfield with an enormous ottoman footstool . . . Hide-a-beds you can show off proudly with a brave new look . . . For color, shape, imagination and sheer audacity, this show is a humdinger . . . For heavens sake don't miss it! . . . Standard Furniture, 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

The bare shouldered look for evening will be very important for fall, says N.Y. designer Oscar de la Renta.

Charming dresses for summer chic . . .

One fashion that's become a summertime classic is the sheath . . . the straight or slightly shaped little sleeveless dress that epitomizes comfort and coolness . . . and can be dressed up or down by means of well-chosen accessories to fit any occasion . . . Looking through the new summer dresses at Wilson's this week, we spotted some really lovely sheath dresses with the Eva Fisher label . . . The unusual prints and patterns . . . some of which look as if they'd been applied with an artist's brush . . . rated a second and third look . . . These dresses of easy-care polyester or trevira . . . are sleeveless, but mostly have separate sleeves which you can put in if you prefer your upper arms covered . . . They're made in various countries of Europe . . . by top manufacturers . . . and Eva Fisher is the English importer who gathers there dresses from all over Europe . . . Moreover, they're exclusive to Wilson's here, so you're not apt to meet your counterpart! . . . When you're in Wilson's, don't forget to have a look at their "continuous" sale rack . . . We noticed a smart rose and wine knit coat from Austria . . . marked down from $145 to $69.95 . . . less than half price! . . . A lovely mint green suit . . . other coats and a few dresses . . . all with price tags snipped quite drastically! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

U.S. designers are concentrating on "wearable" clothes for fall. Elegance and simplicity are the key words.

Cooking with panache . . .

If you're not hungry when you start leafing through the new cook books just arrived at the Book Nook, we guarantee you soon will be . . . so Be Prepared, as the Scouts say! . . . We were positively drooling over all the excerpts we read . . . which tends to cloud the judgment, but in this case, we think not . . . "The Bride's Cook Book" is just what you need if you're planning a bridal shower or other entertainment involving food . . . Contains dozens of ideas for different kinds of parties and showers, with suggested menus and some lovely recipes . . . Be sneaky . . . use it yourself first to plan the party, then present it to the bride! . . . $6.95 . . . "Barbecues", put out by Gourmet International, tells you everything about charcoal, gas and hibachi cooking. Instructions for barbecuing everything . . . including making fancy sauces . . . A mouthwatering book! . . . $4.75 . . . There are a couple of new fondue books . . . "Fondue Cooking" at $2.49 and a paperback "The Fondue Party Book", $1.25 . . . "The Gentle Art of Flavoring" would make a lovely gift . . . It's in simple dictionary form with good, clear type . . . $10.75 . . . Be sure to look at "Hostess Book" by Fanny and Johnnie Cradock . . . It's a honey . . . a guest gift . . . and makes good bed-time reading, too! . . . The Book Nook, 10 Centennial Square, 386-0813.

French designers have abandoned the midi because it didn't sell well in America . . . and after all they have their eyes on the dollars.

New series for the discriminating collector . . .

Seems like just about everybody you meet is climbing on the collecting bandwagon . . . And we think it's a pleasant way to spend your money . . . whether it be mere dollars or hundreds thereof . . . because so many collector's items keep increasing in value . . . thus enabling you to have your cake and eat it too! . . . Figurines of Lady Musicians are Royal Doulton's latest contribution to collectors . . . Introduced last year as the first of a new series, there are two exquisite figures . . . a cello and a virginals player . . . which you'll find at Montague Bridgman's . . . Just 750 each of these two models were made and there won't be any more . . . Each one is priced at $200 . . . and comes in a carrying case along with an individually numbered certificate signed by one of Royal Doulton's directors . . . Completely hand made and hand painted . . . moulded with exquisite delicacy and detail . . . these figures are completely charming . . . and would be a real acquisition by anyone lucky enough to obtain one or two . . . Bridgman's have just two of each . . . There will be two more Lady Musicians appearing later this year . . . and continuing as the years go by until the 18th century orchestra is completely formed . . . By that time each figure should be worth a small fortune! . . . and even if you're not a collector, one of these could be a joy to own! . . . Montague Bridgman Ltd., 811 Government St., 383-0821.

Stronger, darker,livelier colors are the new look in make-up.

Nighties to dream in . . .

We don't think we're exaggerating unduly when we tell you that . . . in our opinion . . . Impacts 'n' Imports has the best selection of really nice sleepwear in town . . . At any rate, more and more women in search of flattering night attire are heading for the attractive shop in Centennial Square . . . We saw the sweetest cotton/fortrel sleep shirt there this week . . . pale blue or delicate pink trimmed with ruched white lace threaded with narrow satin ribbon in contrasting shade. This has a shirt bottom, long cuffed sleeves, and buttons right down the front . . . Another short gown for which you can have a matching coat is pink cotton-fortrel . . . Lace and colored embroidered flowers on the yoke . . . And still another gown is yoked in a smocked effect trimmed with lace . . . These cottons can go right into the washer and dryer and come out looking crisp and fresh . . . without ironing, of course . . . Charming little bed jackets in the same cool fabric to wear for breakfasting or reading in bed . . . Saw a long mint crepe gown with cap sleeves and embroidered trim . . . particularly becoming to the woman who's a bit skinny around the top and prefers the covered shoulder look . . . Many more becoming styles to suit every figure . . . $12 to $15 at . . . Impacts 'n' Imports, 8 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

Sleeping in a water bed is said to be not unlike floating in a calm sea.

Silk suits for summer in town . . .

Don't know whether they've stopped making suits, or what . . . but there certainly don't seem to be too many around . . . Particularly those tailored silk suits which are so very useful for city life in late spring and summer . . . Would you believe, no less than three women asked us the whereabouts of such suits during the past week? . . . Well, we've just seen several beauties in Eaton's Import Room . . . One from Fouks, of Paris, is a wheat colored pure silk pongee . . . with culotte skirt, beautifully cut jacket with flapped patch pockets . . . Size 12 . . . Another is from Jean Patou . . . a delicious shade of crushed strawberry silk . . . with large box pleats in the skirt, skirt jacket and tie belt . . . this too is a size 12 . . . A pure silk shantung suit in a pale mocha shade has an A-line skirt . . . Available in a 16 . . . while the same style consisting of dress instead of skirt and jacket would be a real find for the women who wears a size 20 . . . Another suit-type costume for the woman who's no longer sylph-like is a poppy red dress and jacket by Sylvia Mill of London . . . Fabric's a silk mixture that doesn't crease . . . Unusual buttons . . . red with concave silver centres on the artfully cut jacket . . . Quality clothes for the younger generation . . .

We happened to be downstairs in Wilson's Junior Dept. one day this week when a lady came in enquiring about something or other for her child . . . and gratutously offered the opinion that nowhere but nowhere else in town has she ever been able to find children's clothes with the quality and stamina of those sold by Wilson's! . . . So true, we agreed . . . Even if something costs a wee bit more at the outset . . . it pays for itself, many times over! . . . Those adorable little Swiss leatherette or velveteen pants with their colorfully embroidered straps are back in stock again . . . Green, blue or red cotton velveteen and a new fabric which looks like leather but is completely washable . . . There's a great selection of Viyella tartan kilts and pants . . . Some really smart stretch pants for girls . . . machine washable . . . white, navy, red or lilac with a patch hip pocket and white stitching . . . We like the Dorothy Brown pant dresses in cotton and orlon checked gingham with white collars and cuffs . . . Others in polyester knits . . . And Wilson's underwear for little girls . . . St. Michael's vests and briefs, either cotton or nylon knits . . . have got to be the greatest! . . . Dainty and hardwearing as all get-out! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

DEADLY PASSENGERS READY TO SHOOT

Marshals Lying in Wait for Skyjackers

By BILL TERRY

WASHINGTON (WP) — About 1,000 unidentified sky marshals, trained at nearby Ft. Belvoir, Va., are now flying the commercial routes armed with .38-calibre pistols.

If a plane hijacker makes his intentions clear and is armed, the marshals are prepared to fatally shoot him without warning or question.

Fortunately, there have been no shoot-outs on any American hijacked planes — and in a London plane recently hijacked, the hijacker was unarmed and was arrested peaceably.

The American sky marhals now in service (including four women) are post-November graduates of the Ft. Belvoir Training Centre, and are officially called Customs Security Officers. They work in teams to foil political hijacking such as those of the Middle East last fall — some political hijackers are as highly trained as the sky marshals. Officials at Ft. Belvoir note that most of the 107 hijackings of the past 10 years are the work of fanatics, but are not less dangerous to passengers for that.

The sky marshals are not armed with mace or other chemical weapons to incapaciate a hijacker. Instead, they are trained to shoot to kill. To qualify, the marshals must be able to discharge 12 bullets in 25 seconds, and all shots must be accurate enough to hit and kill a man at 45 feet.

The marshals are known only to the crew and are assigned to various sections or compartments of the plane and function independently of each other, except in case of trouble.

There is no regular, prerehearsed or in-flight plan for these officers to put into action during a hijacking. It all depends on the situation.

The only prearranged aspect is a set of hand signals worked out by the team that resembles those of a third-base coach in a baseball game. There is no verbal communication between the marshals.

A pre-flight briefing, however, is held between the airliners crew and the marshals, during which any problems (such as the presence of a known underworld figure aboard are discussed.

The .38 fires a hollow-nose slug that expands when it hits. It is derigned to explode and kill when striking anywhere near a vulnerable area of the body.

Sky marshals also carry a set of handcuffs and a blackjack.

The training course at Ft. Belvoir lasts four weeks and concentrates largely on target practice. Many marshals are former police officers or government agents. Most are in their 20s or 30s.

The training includes a course in judo and agents are skilled in the use of a knife and hand-to-hand fighting with fists, although the only lethal weapon carried is the pistol.

The course includes what is called "putting out a line" of talk or a cover story the marshal is prepared to use in talking with fellow passengers to mask his identity. These stories vary and include a hometown story, an occupation, destination and reason for travelling. Occupations are usually generalized and not particularly interesting, in order to reduce curiosity. "We keep it simple," one said.

The marshals are told to keep to themselves. They are not allowed to sleep (even rest), drink or watch movies. They are most often conservatively dressed, although this is not mandatory.

Most of those graduated so far are white, but some are black, some are Mexican-American and a few are Orientals. In a recent graduating class of 80, four were women — including one who had never been in an airplane.

The stated mission of a CSO is "to observe passengers and prevent piracy." Prevention is heavily emphasized. The airlines, which were cool to the idea of armed agents aboard flights in the beginning, now make available any information revealed in the airline profile check.

The heart of this check is an instrument called a "magnetometer," an electronic sensor that reveals metal objects concealed on a passenger on in his luggage.

The luggage may be opened and the passenger required to stand for a body search. In extreme situations, no part of the body where a tear gas cannister or vial of nitroglycerine may be concealed is excluded from the search.

Also scrutinized under the airline profile are passenger characteristics and behavior. Persons of Latin heritage are given special attention because of the frequency of hijackings to Cuba and other Latin American countries. The same is true of Arabs because of the activities of the Popular Front and Al Fatah. Blacks with Afro hairdos are given a second look. So are foreigners who may simply "look suspicious."

The profile also considers a traveller's deportment, whether he is nervous or appears to be concealing something — one, for example, gingerly carrying a bag especially if he has purchased a one-way ticket.

Marshals are now flying out of most major U.S. air terminals principally on the seaboards, but are not restricted to them. Air centres such as Chicago, St. Louis, Denver and Tucson are embarkation points for these officers, who are required to fly two months running, followed by one month on the ground, usually as narcotics agents or in some capacity of protecting U.S. government property.

The sky marshal program is still largely in what one agent called a "state of flux." It has not been in existence long enough to have developed a characteristic routine to the point that firm and tested plans are ready for implementation in case of air emergencies. "It is changing constantly," the agent said, "as new reports come in from the field."

One already-experienced problem area is that of "super fatigue." A flight from Los Angeles to London lasts 17 hours, during which time a marshal is not allowed to sleep.

Some flights from Syndey, Australia, for example, to Los Angeles, are even longer. Sky marshals have been trained and conditioned "to force themselves to function under stress for periods of 24 hours."

But after that, and sometimes before, officials said "a man will begin to break down. His body resists, and it is no longer a mental thing."

ARREST TECHNIQUES are learned as part of stiff training program for sky marshals, whose faceless number includes four females. Their sidearms fire hollow-nosed slugs which shatter when they connect.

Italians Win Title For Alcohol Intake

ROME (UPI) — Italians have become the world's No. 1 alcohol consumers and drunken driving may be responsible for more than one traffic accident in every two, according to the Italian Automobile Club.

The club made the estimate in a news conference in which speakers asked the government to pass legislation authorizing the use of breathalyzers, at present unknown in Italy.

A spokesman said Italy's per capita consumption of alcohol has gone up to more than four gallons a year, putting Italians ahead of Frenchmen as the world's heaviest drinkers.

He said consumption of wine and beer has doubled in 10 years and consumption of hard drinks has increased four times. Italians now spend more than $1.6 billion a year on alcoholic beverages — six times more than on medicines and four times more than on entertainment.

The spokesman said lack of breathalyzers makes it hard to estimate how many traffic accidents are due to drunken driving. But he said the World Health Organization put the average in Western Europe at 50 per cent and the Italian rate is likely to be higher.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Separate Lovers

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've been happily married for 21 years to a great man. He provides his family with a beautiful home and lots of love. We have three fine children, a 20-year-old son away at college, and a son, 14, and a daughter, 16, at home. We have taught our children healthy attitudes about sex and up until now none has ever given us cause to worry.

Our college son has been living with his girl friend in an apartment off campus for almost a year. After we got over the initial shock, we didn't offer too much opposition. We pay his tuition and he works part time to cover living expenses. He has never sponged off us. He is making good grades and we want him to finish college.

He is coming home for a visit and is bringing his girl friend. The big question: Should we let them sleep together here, which goes against our grain, especially since there are two teen-agers in the house? Or should we offer them separate bedrooms, which would be hard to do because they know that we know they normally sleep together?—Mother X.

DEAR MOTHER: Feeling as you do, offer them separate sleeping accommodations. When kids return home for a visit, they should respect the code of their parents' home, and since it "goes against your grain" to provide your unmarried children with coed sleeping quarters, they can either accept your decision or sleep elsewhere.

DEAR ABBY: I have a winter home in Florida and frequently have visitors from up north come to stay with me. I welcome their visits, but why do these guests invariably forget some article of clothing or their personal belongings when they leave?

It is such a nuisance for me to have to get it wrapped for mailing, then take it to the post office and have it insured and returned to the owner.

I have seriously considered giving all the leftover articles to the Salvation Army as a way of training my guests to either take all their stuff with them or lose it. I'd like your opinion.—E.S.G.

DEAR E.S.G.: Wouldn't it be simpler to just give guest quarters a quick inspection before your guests leave? Your scheme may cure a few chronically careless guests, but what can the Salvation Army do with the top half of a pair of pyjamas?

DEAR ABBY: I have been a professional artist most of my life. Not only do I love to paint, but it has been a tremendous help to me financially. Last year my husband died, and soon my only child will be leaving for college. The thought of my being alone has depressed me so much that I haven't been able to paint lately. If I don't produce something soon I fear that my reduced income will present a serious problem. How can I pull myself out of this vicious circle?—In a Slump in L.A.

DEAR IN: Start a new circle. A circle of new friends. Join your local art council. Museums and universities from coast to coast have membership associations. Dues go for education and acquisition. And members go for fun. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: Tell the woman who asked you whether or not she should marry an ex-priest to go ahead and marry him. He will make an excellent husband. He already has taken the oaths of poverty, obedience and chastity.—Beat in Bucyrus.

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote asking you if they should send a gift, or a card of "congratulations" to a mother who has given birth to a mongoloid child. Thank you for saying, "By all means, yes. To a mother, a child is a child."

I know your advice was sound because I had a Mongoloid son. Friends called. They stopped by. They even gave me a surprise baby shower when he was a month old. Here is the message on one card which meant so much to me:

"God gave this child to you to guide,
To love, to walk through life beside.
A little child so full of charms,
To fill a pair of loving arms.
God picked you out because He knew How safe His child would be with you."

God bless friends like that.—Mrs. C. B. Beacon, N.Y.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HELP ME TO HELP MY MOTHER IN HOUSTON: Only your mother can help herself. Poor soul. She, like many other vain women, would rather NOT wear a hearing aid and pretend she's hearing everything, than to wear one and hear everything. Please tell her that at least half the women her age have a hearing loss, and the new hearing aids are so cleverly designed now that they are practically invisible.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

DESIGNER LAUGHS LAST

Trigere Elegance Back in Step

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pauline Trigere is one of the New York fashion designers enjoying the last laugh. She never went overboard for the extremes of style as did some of her competitors, never went kooky or peasant or hippie, but stuck firmly to her belief that clothes should become the wearer completely.

Result: Miss Trigere is having her own quiet revenge as women's clothes for fall and winter make the full cycle and return to classics, to the ladylike look, to elegance, to what some fashion critics have called the civilized look.

"I've heard in the last few weeks that clothes are getting wearable," said Miss Trigere at the Thursday afternoon opening of her fall and winter collection for buyers and press. "It was news to me for I'd always thought clothes were for that . . . to put on and wear."

That barb out of the way, Miss Trigere turned to a show featuring her "floating fit," largely accomplished with bias cut of fabric, to her special way with capes, and to hemlines two and three inches below the knees.

The "floating fit," she explained, is not a tight, corseted look but one that skims over the body, outlining bust and especially accenting the waist either with or without belt.

Capes always have been a Trigere trademark and she's never done them better than in a group for daytime in tweeds, over tweedy dresses. Her new "capulines" are half capes in a way, fur-bordered numbers which cover the back from the shoulder down but show off the dress at the front.

Miss Trigere likes the knees covered and most of her daytime costumes had skirts long enough to cover the calf-high boots, designed by the famous shoe team of Herbert and Beth Levine. Occasionally, she dared skirt slits above each leg or centre front.

Her one concession "to you know what" started out as a skinny, sweater-like top to a long black crepe skirt with high, side slit showing black short pants studded with gold nailheads. Off came the skirt to show solidly golden hot pants.

Fur trims like fisher and fox in silver, blue and black were used repeatedly for both day and evening clothes. Since she also designs furs, there were floor-length minks and sables enough for a king's ransom.

One whole group of dresses, in both street and floor-length, she called her "T-dress" for some reason. Anyway, they had the divided legs of culottes with a lot of swirl at the hem, the rest of the garmet fitted through waist and bodice.

Some of her best dinner dresses were in mohair or jersey, cut on the bias, simple of line and depending on subtle pattern on black for interest.

And for the record, Miss Trigere, who was born in France, gave the French pronunciation of "panne," the lush, deep pile fabric which Americans usually refer to as "pan-ay." It's "pan," she said, as in pot and pan.

X-Rated House Tour A Success

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Laurel Hill Nursery School's annual fund-raising house tour — with two "X-rated" nude attractions — was a great success, the co-operative's treasurer said Tuesday.

An estimated 400 persons paid $4 each to tour 11 homes and art studios. They saw a nude couple lying on a patchwork quilt while an artist drew them, and a nude artist dancing on a paint-smeared canvas.

Warnings signs reading "rated X" and "nude model" were posted at the home of artist Eleanor Dickinson and at the Chicken Factory, a complex of studios near the waterfront.

Treasurer Pauline Wald said the nursery school made at least $800 profit and that she hadn't received one complaint.

One lady visitor said the nude couple at the Dickinson home were "tastefully arranged" and that her children played outside while she and her husband watched the artist work.

"My little girls thought the sign meant they couldn't go inside because they might break things," she said.

fashion flashes

Drifting, fight, colorful evening dresses will be popular, often two-piece or three-piece with a jacket, banded in lace, embroidered or hemstitched.

Lively but soft pastels, such as violet, will be mixed with yellow, white, mint green, in dresses with solid violet skirt, bodice in stripes.

Peasant blouses will be white with lots of floral or cross-stitch embroideries, lace ruffling, sleeves elasticized to flounce at wrists.

Shorts will widen and lengthen to look more like a skirt, knickers ballooning into bloused pants with equally balloon-sleeved shirts.

Sweaters will be long and loose for belting, with collars and puffed sleeves as in the Thirties, ribbed midriffs to accent the curve of the figure.

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Micky, my cat, at eight months of age has suddenly developed an urge to roam. Does this mean that rabies vaccination is a good idea? —J.E.

DEAR J.E.: Yes, rabies vaccination is advisable for any roaming feline. The vaccination can be given any time after five months of age. Presumably he has long since been vaccinated for the more common, strictly feline, viruses.

DEAR DR. MILLER: While on a weekend trip, my son carried to camp a baby bird cupped in his hands which he said he found in an "abandoned" nest. I made him take it right back to the nest. The next day we carefully observed the nest and found the parent bird feeding the babies. I had always heard that a bird would abandon a nest if it had been touched by a human. Was this a particularly brave parent bird? Or are they not really so afraid of the human scent after all? —R.M.

DEAR R.M.: Man's scent is of no great import to birds. Their sense of smell is generally secondary to other systems, anyway. However, parent birds can, and often are, frightened away from nests, many times permanently, as a result of human intrusion.

During periods when the parents are off on other chores, nests and their contents may be examined by an expert, without grave consequences. Unfortunately, the well-meaning amateur is likely to blunder and distrub the nest or frighten the adult birds to the extent that they may indeed abandon.

Birds are less likely to abandon young than eggs. (This was in its favor when you returned the nestling.) In any event, parent behavior is variable, more so perhaps among birds than other species. Even within the same species of birds, some parents may vigorously defend and care for the young while others will abandon them at the slightest pretext. Eggs and nests tend to be more readily abandoned late in the season as the hormonally directed maternal drives ebb.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

Waterbed Fatal

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP) — An 11-week-old baby rolled off a waterbed and suffocated between the bed and the wall, police said. William Moeller apparently slipped off the bed, police said. The jelly-like consistency of the water-filled bed allowed the baby to squirm deeper into the space between the bed and wall. Eventually his head became pressed against the bed's vinyl covering, officers said.

Harkness Deplores Canada-Russia Pact

HARKNESS
. . . NATO weakened?

By DAN TURNER

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Donald Macdonald exchanged salvos with a Conservative predecessor in Commons debate Friday about the wisdom of Canada's friendly overtures towards the Soviet Union.

Douglas Harkness, defence minister between 1960 and early 1963 during the Diefenbaker government, said he believes that the Russians are using Canada to weaken the NATO alliance.

The Soviet Union, he said, still wants to spread communism throughout the world and is the only real threat to the securiy of Canada and the Western bloc.

Canada's "cosying up" to the Russians could have far-reaching effects on defence arrangements and Canada's national security.

"This whole business of the agreement with the Russians and so on causes one to believe that what Russia is doing is using this as a means of weakening NATO, which has always been one of her long-term objectives."

CALLS IT FLASHBACK

Mr. Macdonald, debating defence policy in the Commons for the first time since he was appointed minister last September, mockingly called Mr. Harkness's speech "a first-class flashback to vintage 1950 cold-war days."

While Mr. Harkness obviously didn't think the West had anything to gain from opening negotiations with the Soviet Union, others did.

They included U.S. President Richard Nixon, West German Chancellor Willy Brant, and the command of NATO itself.

Mr. Macdonald told Mr. Harkness that not everybody had stuck to his cold-war position.

"Flashing back to the honorable member's vintage 1950s speech, it will be recalled that Richard Nixon at that time was not exactly a flaming left-winger."

NIXON CHANGED

Mr. Nixon announced Thursday what he called a "significant development" in breaking the deadlock in nuclear arms talks between the U.S. and the Soviet Union—the negotiation over both offensive and defensive weapons.

The Russians had been insisting on limiting the SALT talks to defensive weapons systems.

The day before Prime Minister Trudeau had signed an agreement on his tour of the Soviet Union that is designed to tighten relations between the two countries.

Mr. Harkness said Canada didn't have much to learn from a country that was "keeping the Middle East conflict alive" and "holding down the population of Eastern Europe."

The indications were that the Soviet Union was less interested in detente than in expanding its power and influence.

MOTION HITS CHANGES

The exchange was the highlight of the opposition day debate based on a motion by Conservative Defence Critic Michael Forrestall. The motion said the government is downgrading the armed forces and prompting Canada's allies to question its credibility.

The basic consideration that the government must keep in mind when preparing its defence white paper, he said, is that a threat still exists.

It would be dangerous to develop a defence policy on the basis of what resources it felt it could set aside for defence, rather than on the realization that Canada needed the strength to counter such a threat.

Although Mr. Forrestall made several references to the threat, he didn't define its nature.

He said Canada's per capita expenditure on defence is $88, compared to the U.S. per capita cost of $360.

This showed "the contribution being made by the United States military forces to world peace. . . ."

QUESTIONS LIMITS

While there might be "ample wisdom" in the white paper reflecting "what appears to be the clear national will against expanding defence forces at this time," he hoped that the forces would not be so restricted to lessen their credibility in the eyes of Canadians and their allies.

"I hope the government fully understands that reductions and continuation of the budget freeze . . . erode even further the shaky morale of the armed forces."

Mr. Forrestall got some agreement from John Roberts (L—York South) on his contention that the forces' maritime command should be extended and altered to a submarine surveillance force, rather than a submarine defence force.

Mr. Roberts said it should be a coastal patrol.

The nuclear balance between East and West depended on both sides having a second-strike nuclear potential that would ensure that any would-be initiator of nuclear war would be hit back, he said.

Canada should not meddle with that balance by taking too strong a defensive role against the Russian submarine nuclear threat.

Mr. Macdonald said Mr. Forrestall was advocating spending millions of dollars on strengthening maritime command, which showed his failure to come to terms with the serious financial questions of balancing defence expenditures against other government expenditures.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) said his party didn't agree with the Conservative motion. Some defence expenditures should be squeezed out, he said.

The government should get out of its NORAD agreement with the U.S., which was "obsolete" in the missile age.

Satellite Pact Set Unanimously

WASHINGTON (AP) — Countries participating in Intelsat have agreed unanimously on a new and permanent arrangement for international communications via satellites.

President Nixon hailed the outcome Friday as the 79-nation Intelsat conference wound up arduous negotiations begun 27 months ago.

"For 79 nations to agree on anything is a major accomplishment," Nixon told the group.

Nixon said the instantaneous communications provided by satellites will not wipe out differences between peoples but "at last now we have a chance to close completely . . . the information gap" between them.

Intelsat is the International Communications Satellite Consortium, a unique public utility born in 1964 out of the development of earth satellites capable of beaming communications signals around the world.

Weddings

Moller — Lutes

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized in the Chapel of First United Church, Victoria, at 8 p.m., on May 1, 1971, when Allison Marjorie, only daughter of Mrs. Jean Lutes and Mr. Allen W. Lutes, exchanged vows with Mr. Jan Moller, only son of Mrs. Rigmor Moller. Reverend R. A. Faris officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked radiant in a floor-length gown of French lace with her chapel veil held in place by a floral cluster of pearls. She carried a cascade of red roses and white carnations. Miss Delora Pashley, as maid of honour, and Miss Kathy Nelson, bridesmaid, wore identical pink empire-styled gowns of pink peau de soie. Mr. Maurice Auger acted as best man, and Mr. Earl Walle ushered the guests.

At a reception at the Red Lion Inn, Mr. C. M. McLeod proposed the toast to the bride. After a honeymoon in the United States and Mexico, the happy couple will reside in Victoria.

Rates for publication of Wedding or Engagement notices, with or without pictures, available on request from the Advertising Department (Special forms to assist you in writing copy also available.) Sinclair — Worth

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on April 16 1971, at 7:30 p.m. in St. John's Anglican Church, when Carolyn Jane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Worth, Alderwood Street, exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Alexander William Sinclair, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Sinclair, Kenneth Street, Victoria. Canon Grahame Baker officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length white peau de soie dress with lace bodice, a pearl floral headpiece held the chapel veil and she carried a red rose colonial bouquet. Maid of honor Miss Christine Kintoff, in yellow, bridesmaids Miss Vicky Worth and Miss Fiona Sinclair in green, wore floor-length gowns of peau de soie, and carried colonial bouquets of spring flowers. Flower girl Annett King was lovely in her full-length gown of yellow and carried a basket of spring flowers. All attendants had rose buds in their hair to match their gowns. Ring bearer was Jimmy Worth. Best man was Mr. Keh Wiggan, and ushers were Messrs. Ian Sinclair and Larry Robbins. Mother of the bride was attired in a tangerine ensemble with beige accessories and an orchid corsage. Mother of the groom wore an apricot ensemble with white accessories and an orchid corsage.

At the reception held at Holyrood House, Mr. H. Davidson proposed the toast to the bride. The bride's table, elegantly decorated with bride and groom dolls that the bride's grandmother attired, was centred with the wedding cake that had been made by the bride's mother.

For her going-away outfit the bride chose a navy and white ensemble with white accessories and a corsage of red roses. On return from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair will make their new home in Cobble Hill. Out-of-town guests were from Port Alberni, Ladysmith, and Cobble Hill.

Noren — McWilliams

Spring flowers decorated All Saints Anglican Church, April 10, 1971, for the wedding of Colleen Lynn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. McWilliams, to David Charles, only son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Noren. Reverend C. E. Lonsdale officiated at the candlelight double-ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked radiant in a floor-length gown of silk organza. The high neckline, empire waist and deeply cuffed full sleeves were adorned with eyelet lace and satin ribbon insertion as was the front of the fitted bodice. A full train adorned with lace eyelet and satin ribbon swept back from the waist. A four-tiered scalloped chapel veil of silk illusion misted from face framing lace headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses, orchids and stephanotis. The bride was attended by Miss Dona Cheston, maid of honor, and Miss Cheryl Noren, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Judy Nazar. They wore identical gowns of pink and mauve floral sheer over taffeta, styled with high neckline and deeply cuffed full sleeves. Rosettes entone were worn in the hair and they carried miniature parasols of mauve tulle decorated with mauve and white mums and mauve streamers. Best man was Roger Conrod and Messrs. Terry McWilliams, brother of the bride and Rod Prewett ushered the guests.

Reception followed at the Royal Colwood Golf Club. Uncle of the bride, Mr. Hector Elliott, of Calgary, proposed the toast to the bride. For her going away outfit, the bride chose a two-piece violet wool suit with mauve and black accessories. A corsage of blush orchids completed her ensemble. Guests attended from Calgary, Vancouver, Campbell River, Courtenay, Nanaimo.

Grudgfield — Parsons

A beautiful R.C.M.P. wedding was solemnized on April 10 in St. Patrick's Church when Constable Donald Grudgfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Grudgfield of Flin Flon, Manitoba, took as his bride JoAnne Patricia Parsons, daughter of Supt. Joseph Parsons (Rtd.) and Mrs. Parsons. Tall standards of white gladioli, yellow and white chrysanthemums decorated the church, and golden daffodils and purple hyacinths marked the guest pews. Reverend Father Larry Mackay performed the double-ring candlelight ceremony assisted by Dr. Samuel Parsons, uncle of the bride. The organist was Mrs. L. Gill accompanied by her son on the trumpet.

Given in marriage by her father, the radiant bride wore an empire-style floor-length white gown of peau d'elegance. Swiss Guipure lace richly adorned the mandarin collar, yoke and lily point sleeves. Her full-length illusion tulle veil was held in place by an Anne of Cleves cap re-embroidered with lace. She carried a bouquet of white orchids, stephanotis and daisies with satin streamers.

Matron of honor Mrs. Teresa Hammet, junior bridesmaids Shari Gay Parsons, sister of the bride, and Loretta Cassaro wore floor-length empire-styled gowns of daffodil yellow polyester and carried bouquets of yellow and white daisies. Flower girl Michelle Parsons, niece of the bride, wore a dainty frock of yellow dimity trimmed with white lace and carried a colonial basket of daisies. Ring-bearer Sean Parsons, nephew of the bride, wore a scarlet jacket to match the scarlet of the R.C.M.P. Constable Clare Hayward, Vancouver, was best man, and ushers were Constable Dennis Lait and Constable Charles Reiger, both of Port Alberni.

Mother of the bride chose a dress of aqua peau de soie featuring a Chelsea beaded collar. She wore a silver mink cape, matching accessories and a white orchid corsage. Mother of the groom wore a beige flower-printed dress with beaded mandarin collar and accessories en tone. A squirrel stole and a cymbidium orchid corsage completed her ensemble.

A reception for 160 guests was held at the Carlton Club. Constable Ian Parsons, brother of the bride, acted as master of ceremonies. Diane Loucks, cousin of the bride, attended the guest book. Music was supplied by The Classics. Assistant Commissioner Gerald Engel proposed the toast to the bride. For her going-away outfit the bride chose a cyclamen pink pant suit, a white corsage and black accessories. The happy couple will make their home in Nanaimo.

Hall — Calvert

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Calvert, 3107 Balfour Avenue, Victoria, wish to announce the marriage of their daughter, Phyllis Rosemay, to Dr. Charles David Hall, son of Mr. Allen Edey Hall and the late Mrs. Hall of Almer, Quebec.

The wedding took place on April 8, 1971, in London, Ontario, where the couple will reside.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GRAHAM — Janice, in ever loving memory of our dear Janny, who passed away May 22, 1967.
"We cannot halt the hands of time
Nor live again the past,
But we have precious memories
That will forever last."
—Mom, Dad, Jo-Anne and Granny.

LUSSE—In memory of my beloved father, James Clifford Lusse, who passed away May 23, 1959.
So loved—So sadly missed.
—Your loving daughter, Deenie.

MORGAN.— In loving memory of our son, David R., who passed away May 22, 1969.
Memories linger, David dear,
Though we often shed a tear;
Absent the smile we loved to see
One of the best; God could lend.
In memory's frame, you are cherished still Till we meet beyond the veil.
—Mom, Dad, Margaret and Art De Girolamo and family and Bill and Brenda Morgan, Calgary.

MOXHAM — In loving memory of our Elmer who passed away May 20, 1970.
His smiling ways and pleasant face,
Are a pleasure to recall;
He had a kindly word for each,
And died beloved by all.
Someday we hope to meet him
Someday we know not when
To clasp his hand in a better land
Never to part again.
His face will ever linger in our hearts, Dianne and children David and Karen.

WICKHAM—In treasured memories of our mother and nan Katie May who left us May 24, 1964.
It has been seven years since our Mother and Nan left our hearts filled with sadness and tears.
She had a heart that was true and gay.
Scattering sunshine along the way.
She knew how we loved her, and still lover her yet,
Though God took her from us we cannot forget.
She saw the pearly gates opened, a gentle voice said "come"
And with farewells unspoken she gently entered home.
—The Family.

Ups and Downs Of a Champion

By SALLY GLOVER

Vegetables sustain him, but he gets that extra boost from orange juice.

He's up a hundred foot pole in 27 seconds, but he's down again before his hat falls to the ground.

It's really a one-man show.

Danny Sailor, four-time world champion tree climber, skuttles up his personal 100-foot pole the way a six-year-old charges up the stairs. He does the 27-second stint before awe-struck spectators on the north side of the Jaycee exhibition every day at 3 p.m. and 7.

He's no spring chicken, but there was no sweat — not even a drop.

His age wasn't important he said because, "it's quality not quantity." (He won his first world championship in 1950.)

Speed he attributes partially to his diet.

He's a vegetarian.

"I found I could climb so much faster and easier without eating meat. There are lots of foods that contain more protein than meat. I eat lots of honey, orange juice, dates and nuts . . . you can't just eat spinach."

MARRIAGE?

"Ernie Alex showed me how to quicken my speed. He won contests before me, but he got married and slowed down," he said and chuckled.

Asked if he wished he had married, he said, "Not really. I got to the top!"

He first reached the top when he was 15, high rigging in Port Alberni. All Sooke Days got to be old hat after winning the tree climb eight years in a row.

Now and for the past 20 years or so, Sailor, he and his pole, (which he's carefully divided in two for travelling and his special logging truck, carry him to fairs in the summer and sportshows in the winter.

He's rugged, tanned and always smiling. He's often referred to as Canada's good-will ambassador.

CLOSE CALLS

There have been a few close calls, but that's to be expected, he said. Wednesday, "the wind just about blew me over. That was a little scary. It's a long way down. I might've fallen on somebody."

Thursday he sat greasing an aluminum pole before the show looking very much like a member of the fair work-crew.

Prior to his performance, all children 12 and under are invited to shinny up this 12 foot pole and grab as many one dollar bills taped to the top as the 15 second limit permits.

There were no winners Thursday.

The first curious spectators were over 60 years of age. As they inspected the show site, Danny Sailor hustled over to his nondescript truck, and emerged in a light, bright get-up. Fluorescent orange trimmed the cotton plaid shirt and white pants.

Speaker and sound systems were next. Sailor set them up.

SMALL CHILDREN

The crowd gathered, now mainly small children.

Only dollar bills are taped to the aluminum pole.

Sailor took a swig of orange juice, stepped into his boots, specially made with three-quarter inch soles and thick heels to keep the spurs in place, and gathered the remaining scattered gear.

He donned a boza-like plastic hat and slid his hands into bullet proof, nylon filled, buckskin gloves.

"They're supposed to stop bullets. I don't know if they do, nobody's been shooting at me," he joked.

EXERCISE TIME

The rope was connected. On your mark — Get set — Go!

At the top it was exercise time on an area 13 inches in diameter.

Touch toes . . . leg kick . . . Charleston?

Sailor is acclaimed to be the only man alive to toss his hat in the air and beat it to the ground.

He was down and a quarter of the way back up again before the hat.

First in line to shake hands with the star were the elderly, early arrivals. To the women came a kiss on the cheek, to the men and children, a strong handshake.

To all who watch — an amazing performance.

MOLTEN LAVA forms a wall more than 30 feet high, attracting crowds of the curious to the base of Sicily's Mount Etna today. The lava is flowing down a river bed and has spared the villages of Fornazzo and Sant'Alfio. (AP Wirephoto).

RIVER OF LAVA SPARES TOWN

SANT'ALFIO, Sicily (AP) — The flaming river of lava from Mount Etna ran into a small hill today and flowed around it into a deserted canyon, sparing this town of 4,000 persons.

"We are safe, we are safe," Mayor Salvatore Cozzubbo shouted happily. "Most of our land is burnt, but the town is safe."

The lava, which has slowed its pace, began a 2½-mile ride down the Cavagrande Canyon to the sea, with no town or village in its path.

"The canyon is steep and straight and the lava will just keep on going down," Cozzubbo said.

The townfolk prepared to celebrate. Sant'Alfio was spared in 1928 by another lava flow, which skirted the town and hit nearby Mafcali.

The lava already has burnt crops and dozens of houses, causing damage estimated at more than $16 million. It has also cut across three roads in the area and destroyed five bridges.

"But probably the biggest threat to our crops are tourists," Cozzubbo said. "They have come by the tens of thousands and trampled our fields to see the show. What the lava has spared they have ruined.

"Our vineyards and many trees have been damaged by people who climbed on them to get a better view of Etna. Our tragedy is fun and enjoyment for many."

Silver Threads Activities

A frolic at the main centre of the Silver Threads is being sponsored by the Victoria Rotary Club, Tuesday, starting at 1 p.m.

There will be games, chess, and prizes. Tea will be served.

The following Silver Threads day trips are being planned: Butchart's Gardens, Wednesday; Stanley Park in Vancouver June 17; Bellingham, June 24; Gulf Islands round trip, July 7.

There will be a three-day trip to Harrison Hot Springs, beginning June 22.

Tickets for all trips are available at the centre, 4 Centennial Square. Phone 388-4268 for further information.

ESQUIMALT

Monday — Centre closed for Victoria Day; Tuesday — quilting and knitting, cards, 1:45 p.m. Wednesday — whist club, 1:30 p.m.; Friday — quilting, dance, 1:30 p.m.

All branches of the Silver Threads will be closed Monday.

Events for the remainder of the week of May 24 will include:

Thursday — carpet bowling, 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Friday — jacko and cards, 1:30 p.m.; progressive whist, 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are on sale for the Salt Spring Island trip.

PRESENTING set of Britannia Junior Encyclopaedia to Linda Jensen, 386 Farview Rd. in Victoria, is L. E. Horntvedt, district manager for Encyclopaedia Britannica Publications Ltd. Linda won the prize for her entry in the Uncle Nugent Funland Contest, appearing in the Times.

Fire Hazard Reduced

Cooler temperatures and widespread showers have reduced forest fire hazards to low or moderate throughout the province, the forest service reported today.

Only 52 fires started during the past week compared with 305 during the previous seven days. Of the 131 fires still burning, all are under control and being mopped up.

The hazard in the Vancouver forest district including Vancouver Island, is rated low to moderate.

Costs of fighting forest fires to date this year are $638,000 compared with $115,000 for the same period last year.

Indecent Assault Brings Jail

A Colwood man who pleaded guilty to a charge of indecent assault was sentenced to eight months in jail Friday in B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria.

Justice J. S. Aikins sentenced Robert McIsaac, 32, of 219 Meade, after McIsaac admitted an indecent assault on a 15-year-old girl March 29 in the Colwood area.

Alan Bigelow defended McIsaac while Louis Lindholm was prosecutor.

TB Seal Society Elects President

James Douglas Helmcken has been elected president of the B.C. Tuberculosis-Christmas Seal Society at its annual meeting at the University of Victoria.

Helmcken was born in Victoria and is currently vice-president and general counsel of Laurentide Financial Corp. Ltd. He is the great-great grandson of Sir James Douglas.

He began working with the society in 1952, as chairman of the Christmas Seal Committee. In 1960 he became a member of the society's executive.

British Blues Come to Town

The blues have become an international language.

And Victorians will get a chance to hear English influenced blues tonight when folksinger Paul Hann plays a one-night stand at the Quee Queg in Bastion Square.

Twenty-two-year-old Hann has been featured on British and Canadian television and is currently touring Western Canada.

A self-taught guitarist, Hann strums and picks 12-string and six-string guitar. His repertoire ranges from country to contemporary urban blues.

Hydro Given Strike Notice

VANCOUVER (CP) — The union representing some 2,000 electricians employed by B.C. Hydro served strike notice Friday, but the term of a government mediator has been extended to May 31, legally preventing a strike until then.

Meanwhile, voting is to start next week at meetings throughout the province on a new contract for 2,300 Hydro office workers.

Sewage Dumping To End

Engineers are working to stop the dumping of raw sewage in West Bay, Esquimalt, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical officer of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, said Friday.

He was commenting on complaints that Dillingham Corp. engineers are using storm drains to re-direct sewage while main sewer lines are being installed at Macaulay Point. The drains empty into the bay.

"We have put up with this awful mess for at least two months," said Rod Wells, proprietor of West Bay Marina.

Jim Palmer, tugboat operator, said complaints so far appeared to have no effects.

"How do you put a stop to this?" he asked. "Everytime you complain they sneak off and dump the sewage from another location around the bay."

Whitbread said engineers admitted having made a mistake.

Some of the sewage was permitted to run into storm drains while they were installing a sewer line," he said. "They are now installing a bypass so that all sewage will go along normal channels to Macaulay Point."

Fairfield Cubs Out for Bottles

Fairfield Cubs and Scouts will hold a bottle drive in the Fairfield area Saturday, May 29, to raise funds to pay taxes for their hall, water, fuel, light and equipment. It will start at 9 a.m.

They will pick up pop bottles or cans; the newer type of beer bottles (short neck) or beer cans, any size of Beau Sejour wine bottles, one-gallon wine bottles of any company, and plastic red handle milk containers, three-quart size.

U.S. Agency Ups Estimate Of H Addicts

WASHINGTON (WP) — National Institute of Mental Health has conceded that it was mistaken last year when it estimated that the U.S. has about 125,000 heroin addicts. That figure should be about doubled, the agency's director told a senate subcommittee Friday.

Sen Harold Hughes (D-Iowa), the sub-committee chairman, and the only senator who turned up for the hearing on narcotics, voiced his outrage at the slow pace of federal action, cross-examining the U.S. health officials on their budget limitations.

"Gentlemen," the senator said, "if we had an epidemic of another disease of this dimension ripping this country apart, would we declare a national emergency? Threatening every school child in America? Turning kids into thieves and prostitutes?"

Hellyer's 'Party' In Action

OTTAWA (CP) — The Citizen says Paul Hellyer's new political movement, Action Canada, has had an Ottawa office for three weeks.

A story today says a woman at the front desk denied working for the organization but was seen Friday typing letters to various Canadian publications on stationery with an Action Canada letterhead.

The office, at 969 Bronson Ave., was listed on the mainfloor directory as Hendon Estates and the woman said she works for that firm.

The Citizen says the letters, over the signature of William Bussiere, executive assistant for Action Canada, confirm the organization is taking full-page advertisements in major Canadian dailies on Saturday, June 12.

Wallace, centre, provincial centennial chairman.

Campaign Needs $7,000

There is still $7,000 needed to reach this year's Easter Seal target of $35,000 but the campaign is running 20 per cent ahead of last year's, organizer Ray St. Dennis said today.

At this time last year some $23,000 had been collected in a campaign that fell $5,000 short of its $30,000 goal.

St. Dennis said more envelopes have been returned than in 1970 but the average dollar return is lower.

"This is what we are aiming at — more donations, giving just what people feel they can afford."

He said no provincial total is available but told of a novel way in which University of British Columbia students had helped.

Undergraduate engineers forfeited their five per cent rebate on books bought at the university bookstore and normally received by them when they return the books to the store on completion of assignments. The undergraduate engineers voted to do this all year and donate the money to a charity, choosing the Easter Seals fund. The novel fund-raising formula raised $8,007.65.

FISHERIES BOAT TO RECOVER GEAR

OTTAWA (CP) — A fisheries department boat has been sent to retrieve fishing gear abandoned by a Canadian fishing vessel that was chased by a United States patrol boat last Sunday off the British Columbia-Alaska coast.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis told the Commons Friday the research vessel G. B. Read was picking up the gear abandoned by the Anthony J when chased by a U.S. Coast Guard cutter.

Ex-Broker Jailed

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Alvin van Luven Jr., was sentenced to nine months in jail Friday after being convicted of three charges of forgery and one count of theft.

Van Luven Jr., 25, the son of the president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange and a former stockbroker himself, was described by the prosecution as being overprotected since leaving school, and unrepentant.

Judge W. S. Selbie said he believed there would have been considerably less press coverage if van Luven Jr. was an ordinary citizen.

"You lived your life with a prominent man," the judge said.

"By your offences, you have hurt your father, not yourself.

"As a stockbroker and a person in trust, you wiped out two accounts. You did it deliberately and ingeniously.

"It is no credit to you that persons involved suffered no financial loss. It was your employer that made good those losses."

Van Luven Jr. was found guilty May 4 of forging a $177.50 cheque in the name of J. Anderson, a client of the stockbroking firm of Hemsworth, Turton and Co. Ltd., where he was a junior salesman until May, 1970.

THE WEATHER

Skies were overcast along the outer coast early this morning and patchy cloud was reported in the Cariboo. Elsewhere in British Columbia skies were mainly clear.

Gradual clearing is forecast for the exposed coast this afternoon while other areas of the province will be generally sunny today as a weak ridge of high pressure builds offshore. However a Pacific disturbance south of the weather ship will cross Vancouver Island Sunday morning and the Southern Interior Sunday afternoon. Showers will mark its passage across Southern B.C. Clearing will occur in its wake Sunday night or Monday morning. This system will produce just patchy cloudiness in central and northern districts on Sunday.

DOMINION PUBLIC WEATHER OFFICE

Robbery Bid Foiled

Saying "give me your money or I'll kill you both," a young man attempted to rob an elderly Victoria couple in their home Thursday night, police have disclosed.

Mr. and Mrs. William Pick were alone at 1278 Bay Street when the young man, about 20 and slim, knocked at the door and stepped inside when it was opened.

He produced a six-inch knife and threatened the couple. Police said he then started to walk toward the bedroom and Mrs. Pick ran out and telephoned police from a neighbor's home.

At that the young man ran off. A police search turned up no suspects.

Queen Crowned

Lynn Morrison was crowned Miss Centennial for Central Saanich before a crowd of 300 in Brentwood Community Hall Friday night. Accompanied by her princesses Sharon Bickford and Vicki Foerster, Miss Centennial will ride in the Victoria Day parade.

CHESS MASTER

By George Koltanowski
International Chess Master

PROBLEM

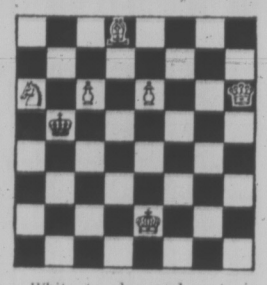
By Willy Hageman, German
BLACK: 1 WHITE: 6



White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

HINTS FOR BEGINNERS

When your opponent shows a disposition to play a backward or defensive game, do not play a forward game. Keep your pieces together, play steadily and look out for weak spots. If he pushes forward rapidly in the centre, try to get around him. If he advances pawns on both sides, try to cut his game in two. If he advances rapidly on one flank, wait till he has fairly committed himself in that direction and then attack on the other side. This assumes that your game is not so far committed as to leave you no option. These maxims may appear obvious. The difficulty is, however, to recognize their applicability in the position under your eyes when playing. This is the point which requires careful attenfion.

The solution to the problem above is: 1.Q-Q2.

VC Flag Ban Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation was introduced in Congress to make it a federal crime to display a Viet Cong or North Vietnamese flag while the United States is fighting in Southeast Asia. The bill was introduced by two Ohio Republicans, Clarence Miller and Frank Bow.

OLD CROOKS GET BREAK

MONTREAL (CP) — To octogenarian criminals who have not practised their criminal trades since 1896: the Quebec Provincial Police identification department has no room for you.

The QPP's ID squad is throwing out all fingerprints that are more than 75 years old in an effort to make space for the growing number of new records they are amassing at their Montreal headquarters.

Humus Lack Causes Gardening Problems

By JACK BEASTALL

The base of all soils is powdered rock which ranges from loose sand to sticky clay. These materials are inert and unable to support plant growth.

As soon as we mix a little animal waste (manure) or vegetable waste (plant parts) with these inert materials, we have the beginning of soil. These wastes are called humus.

Animal and plant wastes are a combination of complex chemicals and fibres. As the wastes decompose, the soil organisms convert them to more simple chemicals which plants and animals depend on for growth.

When the humus is converted to chemicals it disappears from the soil, and the soil slowly reverts to its original sand and clay unless more humus is added.

Lack of humus is the condition that exists in most local gardens, and is the cause of the many problems we have when trying to grow plants. The humus content of the soil is being reduced every hour of the day and the soil is reverting to sand and clay.

A potted plant is proof of this statement. We start with a rooted cutting and a pot full of good soil. When the time comes for repotting we have a much larger plant, a pot filled with roots, and a few dry grains of sand and clay. The black soil has been changed to chemicals which the plant has used to increase its size.

If we desire the plant to continue growth, we have to provide more soil, and the same thing applies to the garden. We either replace the humus as fast as it is consumed, or we let the humus content decrease and have sickly plants which are unable to resist disease and pest damage.

Previous columns on this subject have resulted in letters and calls asking where humus can be purchased. The only humus we can buy is horse and cow manure, the rest comes from the garden.

The plant and household wastes are partially decomposed by a method called composting, and this is carried out in a compost heap or box.

As soon as compost is mentioned we hear objections to attracting rats, dogs and cats. Also undesirable odors. No properly made compost heap has ever attracted a rodent or pet, and the only odor is that of clean mould and honey, the sweetest smell in the world to a true gardener.

Heard more frequently is the remark that nothing is available from which to make compost. This is an excuse rather than a condition that actually exists, for any material that was originally animal or vegetable can be converted back to soil. And that includes the wife's fur coat!

The following is a partial list of materials that will make new soil. Many of the items are abundant in every home, others are readily available in some areas.

From the garden we use all waste plant parts that are not too woody; weeds and discarded plants with soil on their roots; grass clippings that have been loosely spread and partly dried; hay, straw, and dry grass cut from vacant lots and roadsides; all fallen leaves.

Tips For Home Gardeners

Animals and birds, including pets, provide manures; turkey, chicken and all bird feathers; human and animal hair. Seven pounds of human hair has the same nitrogen content as 200 pounds of properly stacked fresh barnyard manure.

From the house we get all kitchen wastes including peelings, tea leaves, coffee grounds, citrus peels, and dishells, nut shells, and discards from the preparation of vegetables; spoiled liquid milk, dry tobacco, cigarette butts and tobacco ash.

Also dust from floor sweepings and the contents of vacuum cleaners; ashes from wood fires (bonfires or incinerators); cotton, wool, and pure silk, all of which are high in nitrogen; old rugs, and mattresses. The latter materials are torn into small pieces.

Old newspapers when the ink is dry, wrapping paper, letters, bags, shreeded paper used for packing, cardboard and cartons, are torn and presoaked before adding to the compost heap.

If bones are used they should be buried in the soil for several weeks or charred in a hot fire to remove fats before being placed in the compost.

From other sources we can collect sea shells (crush) and all seaweeds, apple pomace, spent hops, brewery mash, leather shavings dust, spent mushroom soil, and to add minerals we throw in scraps of steel, iron and crushed tin cans.

Never put into a compost heap any cooked food, bread scraps, crumbs, cooked vegetables, oils either vegetable or mineral, grease, fats, greasy or oily rags.

If every gardener used these materials to make the soil his plants so badly need, our pollution and garbage problem would be greatly reduced.

WORK FOR WEEK

Trim early-flowering broom as flowers fade. Leaving it for even a week results in less than spectacular effects next year.

Sheer aubretia and arabis roughly half-way back to get attractive new growths for summer and better blooming next spring.

Break seedpods from tulips which have flowered.

If nights are warmer, hardy potted plants from the house can be planted — chrysanthemums, azaleas (soak the rootball before planting), and Easter lilies.

Mulch surface soil around lilacs with old manure, well rotted compost and bonemeal.

Sow seeds of wallflowers and other biennials now, outdoors where a little high shade from sun is possible.

Succession sowings of most vegetables; thin previous sowings.

Don't neglect rhubarb. In sandy well-drained soil it must have ample moisture to produce a continuity of stalks.

Musicians Wanted

The Victoria Visitors' Bureau wants volunteer musicians and entertainers to greet summer cruise ships at Ogden Point.

"Anybody who can sing or play a musical instrument and will volunteer their services to meet the visiting cruise ships throughout the summer will be very welcome," cruise-ship committee chairman Norma Fitzsimmons said Thursday.

Volunteers usually get in on the fun themselves, she said, because the welcoming committee is regularly invited to visit aboard the ships.

The committee's final plans for greeting the P and O cruise ship Arcadia June 3 at Ogden Point have been made. When the Arcadia docks at 7 a.m., she will be greeted by members of Gerry Gosley's Smile Show, musicians, a military band and a girls' drill team.

Firm Eases Job Problem

One of the most pressing demands heard these days is for more employment opportunities for university students.

One local firm has eased the problem slightly by devising a scheme to employ students as part of a commercial venture.

Shawnigan Building Supplies Ltd. is employing five students at $1.65 an hour in a driveway-renewal project.

The process involves coating asphalt driveways with an acrylic substance which restores the surface and protects against erosion by grease or oil.

Mike Jiggins, owner of the Shawnigan firm, said he hopes to employ up to 30 students in the scheme but that present business will only allow five students to be hired.

He said he students started work last week and will be employed until the end of August, when they go back to school.

The timing of the project is good, Jiggins said, because the summer months are the time when the restoring substance should be applied.

The project employs girls and boys.

When workers are not actually applying the restorer, they circulate brochures advertising the product, or give free estimates of the cost of an application on a specific driveway.

Jiggins said the average homeowner would pay $40 to $50 for the process. The cost is calculated per square yard of driveway.

Students are manning a booth at the Jaycee Fair, providing information on the process. They are paid for their hours in the daytime but donate time at night with no pay.

preferably adjoining, and identified only by the inscription: 'Agent d'orientation du gouvernement du Quebec."

—"Neither the personnel of the Federal party nor the personnel of the Quebec party shall have access to, or make use of, information or instructions intended for the exclusive use of the personnel of the other party."

—"Personnel of the Quebec department of immigration shall in their private conduct and in their professional or social activities conform to the standards governing the conduct and activities of the federal personnel of the mission."

—"If a member of the Quebec personnel fails to comply with these standards the head of mission may intervene, and his decision, which can be appealed to the two parties to the agreement, will be enforced in the interim."

OPEN OFFER

Immigration Minister Otto Lang told the Commons Wednesday that other provinces can get the same treatment as Quebec.

Which raises the possibility of 10 two-room provincial offices within federal immigration offices abroad.

The Ottawa-Quebec agreement sets out that after an applicant is accepted for entry to Canada by the federal visa officer he can be steered in the direction of the Quebec orientation officer.

Quebec has its own immigration office in Paris. But it wants space in federal immigration offices in, for a start, Athens, Beirut, Brussels, Lisbon and Rome.

NEW PARTY would appeal to many Canadians if a viable alternative were presented to the Liberal and Conservative groups, says Judy LaMarsh. She was referring to former cabinet minister Paul Hellyer's plans for possible formation of a new political movement.

IN FULL COSTUME standing with two of his sons, is Chief Dan George, North Vancouver Indian who was nominated for Academy Award for performance in movie Little Big Man. George will open Stsamis Indian cultural festival Monday night with former Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes. Festival will be held at Macaulay Point through May 29.

. . . PREMIERS TO MEET

of threatening to stall agreement on an amending formula to gain other goals.

But Bennett does sympathize with Ontario's position as a rich province whose financial resources are being funnelled by Ottawa into Quebec.

This attitude combined with Bennett's off-stated view that this is no time to be talking about the constitution anyway could lead him into an alliance of sorts with Ontario's tough-talking Davis.

There will be pleas from Ottawa for all provinces to agree on the amending formula as a single, practical example of constitutional progress.

Justice Minister John Turner has said in cross-country travels that such progress must be made to demonstrate to the "moderates" in Quebec that federalism is sufficiently flexible to accommodate the province's needs.

But many of the politicians, apparently sensing a public mood of frustration with unemployment, are behaving as if they aren't quite sure whether it would be politically wise to make constitutional progress at this time.

The agenda for the meeting will likely be announced a few days beforehand by the prime minister. He has said he wouldn't mind extending the talks to discuss economic issues.

Biggest Source of Concern

Perhaps the biggest source of concern at the moment is the new attitude of the Ontario government, which in recent years has submitted willingly to the role of wealthy relative to the poor-cousin provinces.

As the largest of the three provinces that receive no federal equalization payments — Alberta and B.C. are the others — Ontario is a vital source of tax revenue for Ottawa distribution.

By carrying out its threat of opting out of a number of shared-cost programs, Ontario could undermine the fiscal strength of the Canadian nation.

Premier Davis by no means has the full support of everyone in Ontario, where there has been much pride taken in the avoidance of the provincialism that some other provinces have pursued.

As the new boy at the conference, Davis can expect to hold a big share of the spotlight and Premier Bennett, as the host premier, can also look forward to a greater role than he has commanded at past conferences.

Ultimate Veto to B.C.

Bennett supported the amending formula devised at the Ottawa conference, saying it would give fast-growing B.C. an ultimate veto along with Ontario and Quebec.

Until B.C. reaches 25 per cent of the population, however, it is protected to a degree by the formula's requirement for at least two western provinces having at least half the western population to approve constitutional changes.

It also calls for two of the four Atlantic provinces to agree to any changes.

But the formula isn't the only achievement of the Ottawa conference that could be delayed or even scuttled by a breakdown in the Victoria talks.

Entrenchment of fundamental rights in the new constitution, formal protection for English and French as official languages and a higher status for the Supreme Court of Canada — removing it from under the wing of Parliament — were also tentatively included in a framework of agreement at Ottawa.

August Conference

Many of the issues to be discussed at the constitutional conference will undoubtedly be further aired when the annual premiers' conference is held here in mid-summer, likely in August.

All told, Victoria will be the scene of much political dealing and national soul-searching in the next few months.

It remains to be seen how much of the action will take places in public before the television cameras — the premiers will decide that.

But even if a large part of the drama takes place behind closed doors, it's certain the public will hear all about it later from hard-pressed politicians in a big year for image-making, not to mention nation-making.

Pierre Pilots Shaky Flight Over Russia

TASHKENT, U.S.S.R. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was his own pilot for a slice of the journey today from Kiev to Tashkent, where he arrived in late afternoon to continue his tour of the Soviet Union.

Pool reporters aboard the huge Ilyushin 62 jetliner which brought Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau here said there was a noticeable flutter in the plane's flight a few minutes after Trudeau took the controls.

However, the deviation was swiftly corrected and Trudeau went on to pilot the Aeroflot jet fairly smoothly for about 15 minutes.

At one point he executed a 90-degree bank to the right which caused a sharp descent of perhaps 200 feet.

FOUR-HOUR FLIGHT

Otherwise, the four-hour flight from Kiev in the Ukraine to this capital of the Uzbek Republic in Central Asia went off without incident.

A small crowd turned out at Tashkent's airport in 90-degree weather to greet the prime minister and his party. Many waved Canadian and Uzbek flags. Trudeau and his wife smilingly shook hands with some of them.

Later, Trudeau conferred for an hour with the Uzbek premier and after that he was slated to attend a ballet performance.

Sunday, the prime minister planned to make sightseeing tours of Samarkand, seat of the 14th-century empire ruled over by the conqueror Tamerlane, as well as Tashkent.

Two Injured In Auto Crash

Two young girls are in hospital — one in fair condition — following a one-car crash early today in the Cordova Bay Road area.

Saanich police said the girls were the occupants of a car driven by Mark Roseborough, 4938 Sea Ridge Drive.

Their names will not be released until relatives are notified. They are from out of town.

Police identified another occupant of the car as Ian Soper Harvey, no address was available.

Roseborough's car went out of control along Cordova Bay Road past Mount Douglas Park, police said, and piled into a rock bluff.

The girl in fair condition, whose age was given as 17, suffered head and chest injuries, while the other girl received facial and rib bruises.

Their companions were treated in hospital and released.

A BIT PECULIAR? PRIZE AWAITS IT

Is there an animal in the house that looks a bit peculiar?

If so, send him to the annual SPCA junior pet show, June 5 — he will likely win a prize.

One hundred and fifty first prizes will be awarded to dogs and cats including those with the longest hair, shortest hair, longest tail, shortest tail, longest ears and longest whiskers. There's even a prize for the best-looking dog or cat "that has not yet won a prize."

Birds, turtles, horses, rabbits, hamsters and guinea pigs will be judged on size and care. Even gerbils and mice have a chance at taking home a prize.

It's an open show, beginning at 9 a.m. at the Victoria Riding Academy, 2301 Cedar Hill Cross Road that costs only a quarter. Judging will start at 10:30 a.m.

Officials request that small pets be carried in baskets or cages when riding the buses between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.; no puppies or kittens under the age of six months be entered; all dogs be on leashes and smaller animals be in a cage or basket; and that only one animal per person be entered.

Before the Judge

Douglas Wayne Elliott, 20, of 983 Ambassador, was fined $350 in court by Judge William Ostler when he pleaded guilty to being in care and control of an auto while impaired.

Court was told that the accused was found in the driver's seat of a car with two other people on Prospect Lake Road about 11 p.m. May 20. The keys were in the ignition of the vehicle but the engine was not going.

Elliott's blood-alcohol content at the time was .19 per cent.

Ostler suspended the man's licence.

Andrew Joseph Ouellette, 32, of 805 Hutchinson, was fined $350 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for impaired driving.

He was prohibited from driving for four months except on business.

Esquimalt Residents Warned Against Active Cat Burglar

Esquimalt police have warned residents that a cat burglar is on the loose in the area and advise extra care in locking doors and windows.

Ten homes and apartments have been robbed in the last two weeks and police attribute the work to one man, working at night.

The thief has struck mainly at ground-floor or basement apartments and homes, removing window screens and entering through unlocked doors.

So far, he has taken only mopey — removing wallets from trousers while residents are in bed in the room.

Police say the thief, who they describe as a young man with dark clothing, has concentrated within three blocks of Esquimalt Road on streets like Fernhill, Lyall and Rockheights.

In two cases, residents awakened to find the burglar in their homes but both times he made a successful escape.

The burglar has taken over $300 so far, police say, and urge caution in dealing with the man.

They suggest that residents report any suspicious noises or persons and that all doors and windows be kept locked at night.

Defection No Knockout —Greene

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The Liberal party would be "deluding" itself if it thought the defection of Paul Hellyer and others from party ranks "wasn't something we have to recover from," Energy Minister J. J. Greene said Friday.

"I don't believe it's a knockout blow by any means," said Greene in an interview. "I don't think any of them (the defectors) . . . are strong enough to sink the ship, but they have certainly rocked the boat a little."

Greene, campaigning in the federal riding of Brant for the Liberal candidate in a federal byelection May 31, was commenting on Hellyer's announcement Friday he was quitting the Liberal caucus to form a new party.

He suggested that Hellyer, who lost out at the 1968 party leadership convention to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, had decided the only way to become a party leader "is to go out and form a party on your own."

Hellyer was the third Toronto MP to bolt the party. Perry Ryan now sits as a Progressive Conservative and Philip Givens announced earlier this week he will give up his seat to run in the next Ontario election as a Liberal.

Rest Home Man to Sue Gaglardi

Victoria rest home operator John Hanrahan said today he will sue Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi for a statement Friday alleging he isn't fit to run a business.

Hanrahan said local operators are "boiling mad" over Gaglardi's reaction to about 50 of them turning in their provincial licences in a feud over the amount of government grants to cover guests on welfare.

"He's pushed the operators to the point where there will be evictions (of welfare guests) now for sure, I'm afraid."

In a phone interview from Kamloops Friday Gaglardi pledged that rest home guests on welfare would continue to get proper care despite the earlier eviction threats by some of the operators.

"It's good to have these people come out from under the rocks and show the kind of people they really are," Gaglardi said.

NO ABUSE

"Welfare guests in rest homes will not be abused — they will be properly taken care of."

The rehabilitation minister, whose department handles welfare, said he would check and see why rest home operators who turn in their licences were licensed in the first place.

"Take Hanrahan for instance," he said. "He hasn't one social assistance case in his home (Beacon Hill Villa). The Hanrahans don't belong in this type of business at all."

Hanrahan is vice-president of the B.C. Rest Home Association. The Victoria branch has about 50 members from the 60 or so rest homes in the area.

"We've never spoken like this to Mr. Gaglardi and we didn't expect him to speak to us this way," Hanrahan said.

MOST IRRESPONSIBLE

"We feel he's the most irresponsible minister ever to handle a situation like this."

Hanrahan said he has had about 15 calls from local rest home operators who are furious with Gaglardi. Rest home licences for return to the government are still coming in "but I guess they'll come in a lot faster now."

"I now intend to sue him for saying I wasn't a fit person to run a business."

A majority of Victoria members of the rest home association had earlier proposed transporting their welfare guests to the nearest general hospital in a mass eviction because the government would not increase sufficiently the allowance it pays for care of rest home guests on welfare.

PLAN SCRAPPED

But this plan was scrapped at an emergency meeting in Victoria Thursday night and operators attending decided instead to turn in their provincial licences and switch to guest home status.

They argue this will mean their clients are in the same position as a hotel guest and those who can't pay the bill will have to leave and will become the responsibility of the municipality or the provincial government.

There are over 300 people on welfare in Greater Victoria rest homes. At the moment the province pays from $5 to about $5.50 a day for their care, depending on the amount of care they require. In rare cases where heavy care is required the allowance is increased.

The operators have argued for months that they can't provide the necessary service for welfare guests for the current allowance. Increase requests have ranged between $185 and $240.

Farmer Ed Helgesen Rinses Shelled Morsels

Sowing Oyster Seeds And Reaping Money

By HELEN MELNYK

Vancouver Island's farming industry is thriving — oyster farming, that is.

The 1970 B.C. harvest totalled over one million pounds of oyster meat worth $750,000.

Coopers Cove Oyster Farm, located on the shores of Sooke Bay, is one of the estimated 68 farms on the Island. The farm has abeen run by the Hegelsens for 19 years.

Ed Hegelsen, son of Hegelsen senior and operator of the farm, related the life history of an oyster prior to the time it is served up on a platter.

The so-called Pacific oyster originates from Japan. Oyster seeds or spats are imported from Japan, attached in clusters on empty shells.

As soon as they arrive, the seeds are planted offshore on tidal flats. The Hegelsens cultivate their oysters on 54 acres off Denman Island, near Courtenay, where warmer temperatures enable the oysters to mature much quicker than in Sooke waters.

Oysters filter-feed on plankton, microscopic sea life. Various mysterious digestive processes convert the plankton into vitamin and mineral filled oyster meat, a nutritious food for humans.

The maturation of an oyster is highly peculiar; it changes its sex part way through life. All little oysters are males for the first few seasons. As they increase in size in their third and fourth years, they begin to produce eggs and hence-forth function as females.

Pollution has not as yet created a serious problem at Courtenay, according to Ed Hegelsen. In other areas, however, sewage and pulp mill wastes have increased oyster mortality.

At the age of three years, an oyster crop is ripe for picking. The Hegelsens transport the mature oysters from Denman Island to their plant at Sooke. Some are prepared for immediate marketing, while other are placed in the cool Sooke Harbor waters for storage.

Four of the 11 staff at the farm plant were cleaning or shucking oysters with expert ease. After opening an oyster by inserting a specially shaped knife into the hinge of the shell, the meat is cut away.

The shucked oysters were washed in another room and placed in cartons, ready to be sold to local stores and restaurants, as well as to wholesalers in Vancouver.

Plump oysters, about four inches long, are prime in price and quality. Designated for table use, they wholesale for $7.85 a gallon. As the size of oysters increases, the price sharply drops to $4.65 a gallon and they are considered fit only for soup and stew.

The big oysters taste as good as the smaller ones, as far as Ed Hegelsen is concerned.

"But we can't convince other people of this. I guess if they open a package and see a lot of little oysters, rather than just one or two big ones, they figure they are getting more for their money."

There is some truth to the old saying that oysters should only be eaten during those months in which the letter R occurs. During the summer months, the spawning season, oysters are unpalatable and possess little food value.

Methods of preparing oysters are as manifold as they are appetizing. Oysters can be baked in sherry cream, barbecued with mushrooms or broiled in Vermouth wine.

Ed Hegelsen prefers his oysters raw with ketchup and beer.

PORT ANGELES DAY OVERWHELMS JAYCEES

The Jaycees were overwhelmed with the response from Port Angeles residents today as over 900 persons arrived for Port Angeles Day.

Several hundred were left waiting for the boat as the ferry pulled out of the Port Angeles harbor packed to capacity. They will arrive in Victoria on the next boat.

Two of the ferry passengers were later chosen as tourists of the week by Bob Garling, Port Angeles Jaycees vice-president and Victorian Jaycee Joe Richards. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Hansen will spend today and Sunday, as guests of various local businesses.

'Country Cousin' Role Irks Sidney

The "country cousin" treatment Sidney is receiving from the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau may result in it withdrawing from the organization.

Len Siver, president of Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce, made the threat of withdrawal from the bureau Friday, over a dispute concerning solicitation of operating funds.

In an effort to raise funds for the local visitors' information centre, the Chamber has been canvassing Victoria attractions whose brochures are displayed in the Sidney tourist office.

But the Chamber has now been told by the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau of which it is a member that inter-municipal soliciting of funds is not allowed.

Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce contributes $330 annually toward the VIPB (combining funds for the chamber and both municipalities). In return the Chamber receives $300 toward operation of the local tourist centre.

Silver said that it is hardly worthwhile for the Chamber to continue as a member of the VIPB.

In addition, a check made in the Victoria bureau reveals that the only publicity given the local area is the fact that fresh fish can be bought in Sidney.

St. Croix Sailors Bitter Over Weekend Regimen

Tied up in the Inner Harbor this weekend to help make British Columbia's centennial a happy event is the cleanest — and, by some reports, the most miserable — destroyer-escort in the Pacific fleet.

News of the unhappy St. Croix reached the Times newsroom Friday afternoon after members of the crew came ashore.

RUM BOYCOTT

To the charge that they had refused to draw their rum ration Friday morning as a sign of protest against what they considered intolerable working conditions, the ship's captain, Cmdr. Jim Cumming said he wasn't aware of the boycott. He had assumed the men hadn't drawn their tots because shore-leave was piped at the time and they were anxious to get home.

Cmdr. Cumming said crew members not on leave drew their rum tots as usual at 11:30 a.m. today, with no further indication of the discontent mentioned by some men Friday.

The grievance most frequently aired by the protesters was that St. Croix was on "foreign-port routine" instead of home-port routine while in the Inner Harbor.

This means that instead of having weekend leave, each officer and man aboard must report for duty at 8 a.m. daily.

ROYAL CLEANUP

Cumming noted that Esquimalt is the ship's home port, not Victoria. It was necessary, he added, to have a full ship's complement aboard to keep the ship spotless during the hours she will be open to the public this weekend.

Other complaints hinged on the fact that her crew had been kept painting and scrubbing three weeks before the Royal visit.

A crew member, who described himself as "a senior hand with 10 years' service" said "we're damned tired of being told everything is wrong."

He said he was contacting the Times "because we're all pretty unhappy. Not being unionized, we're wondering what we can do. We can't go past the captain."

Asked if the men had complained to their divisional officers, he said they had, but with no effect.

Cumming said he had heard of no complaints from his officers, part of whose training was to handle such problems.

SAME VIEW

Another senior hand said the captain's assertion that discontent was only evident in the junior rates was incorrect; that warrant officers and sergeants shared the same viewpoint.

As an example of the tension aboard, he said warrant officers had "scrapped over the bar" while the ship was at Powell River on a centennial visit.

Cumming said no reports had come to him to bear evidence of this.

One of the complaints was that the men had been told Friday morning that if the ship was not sufficiently clean by noon there would be a stoppage of leave that day. They were also told that overnight leave Sunday and Monday would depend on the cleanliness of the ship and weather conditions.

OPENING SHIP

"We are opening up below decks to the public and it is important that the whole ship be clean," Cimming said.

Of another complaint that St. Croix was being referred to as the "ship of fools" by other men serving in the fleet, Cumming claimed:

"I have never heard this. The ship has always had a tremendous reputation as the cleanest and most efficient.

"The most important thing is the fact that the ship is in the Inner Harbor to celebrate the centennial. I don't want to play the other matter up. It is vastly overrated."

Ask The Times

Q. What was the exact day in which British Columbia joined the other provinces to become part of Canada? Also, when did Victoria become the capital of B.C.?—S.D.B.

A. British Columbia entered Confederation July 20, 1871, according to the Canadian Parliamentary Guide. When the colonies of Vancouver Island and mainland B.C. were united in 1866, New Westminster was designated the capital but this was transferred to Victoria two years later.

Island Hike Ends For Tired Tramper

Hiker Bill Hembroff of Courtenay has completed his epic trek the length of Vancouver Island — tramping the 400 miles in 25 days.

He was scheduled to spend his final night Friday at a lonely farm between the radar station at Holberg and the remote cape at the northwest tip of the Island.

All going well he will have completed the final dozen miles along a rugged trail by later today.

Hembroff, 48, stayed at the radar station Thursday night and left there shortly after noon Friday. Tired but happy, he joked with station officers and told them he was in good shape.

He undertook the marathon hike in an effort to raise $10,000 for a centennial museum at Courtenay. With a friendly pat from Premier Bennett he started from the Legislative Buildings in Victoria April 28.

Hembroff said two parts of the hike were particularly arduous. Worst was the road north from Gold River which he found lonely and tiring. The walk from Port Hardy was also trying.

Outdoorsmen Probe Wilderness Lakes

A large party of Victoria and Vancouver outdoorsmen are on their way today to inspect three west coast lakes they want included in the Pacific Rim National Park.

It is the largest organized group to visit the wilderness lakes of Tsusiat, Squalicum and Hobiton, in the Nitinat district between Port Renfrew and Bamfield.

Included are members of the Victoria Outdoor Club, the Alpine Club of Canada, the Vancouver Island Ramblers, the Sierra Club of British Columbia, the Victoria Natural History Society, the Victoria Canoe Club, the Dogwood Canoe Club of Vancouver, and the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association.

They are all equipped with canoes. Some members plan to explore and study the area for a week, but the majority will return late Monday.

The three lakes have been the subject of dispute between the forest industry and outdoorsmen for the past year.

They are the last major wilderness lakes on the southern half of Vancouver Island and conservationists want to preserve them.

The forest industry wants to log the watershed, claiming loss of the timber would curb their sawmill operations.

The federal government has proposed that the lakes be included in the national park which now encompasses the West Coast trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew, the Effingham Islands in Barkley Sound and Long Beach to the north.

Holiday Bus Trips

Special bus trips to the city centre for the Victoria Day parade Monday will be provided by B.C. Hydro.

Additional early morning trips will be in operation on all routes, but in the afternoon regular holiday service will go into effect.

YM-YWCA Director Resigning

After 11 years at the Victoria YM-YWCA, Art Burgess is retiring as physical director.

Burgess will be leaving the Y at the end of August to enter the faculty of graduate studies at the University of Alberta.

He will work as a teaching assistant while taking his masters degree and writing a thesis on the sociology of sport. He plans to investigate the effects on small children of highly competitive sports.

Burgess came to Victoria from the Vancouver Y in 1960 to replace Archie McKinnon as physical director.

He says he hopes to return to Victoria when his studies are finished and will return to the Y "if there is a position open."

THE BEAK UPON THE bench is only human, and I can understand the irritation felt by a provincial court judge over the disruptive antics of some Women's Lib shook troopers. But, really . . . bullwhips on bare backsides?

We move forward or we drop back. And the Vancouver judge's suggestion, if followed, would be a backward move for a struggling, imperfect society.

It isn't all that long since the female offender could be tethered to the tail of a cart and flogged through English streets. The scold, the shrew or the woman suspected of witchcraft might be ironed into a ducking stool and dunked so mercilessly that some victims drowned.

In fairness, some of the barbarisms practiced today would have left the floggers and duckers aghast. Grandpa, aged, infirm and penniless, could then at least count on a nook in the poorhouse if he lacked a home chimney-corner: he wasn't the pawn of a duty-shirking government that might more kindly slip him a lethal Mickey Finn.

But that's no excuse for sacrificing hard-won gains in other directions, and I'm glad to note that in spite of the bullwhip and bare backside jazz Hizzoner delivered humane judgment.

The toughest dong administered to any of these latter-day Pankhurstites was a $75 fine . . . and if this male chauvinist pig may be permitted the observation, they damn well deserved it!

I'm enchanted by reports that two kangaroos have been glimpsed in East Sooke Park, and would like to believe that a pair of big-eared, long-shanked marsupials are indeed hopping about among the thickets.

But conviction must wait on proof, because I still haven't forgotten the day when a saucer-eyed newspaper carrier intrigued Ten Mile Point residents with a similar account.

The newsboy, a nice kid even though he didnt deliver our product, was pedalling along in the eerie half-light of a newborn day when he saw something that all but toppled him from his bike.

Large, twitching ears. Mild eyes. An indistict form that bounded off light as a feather into the road-bordering woods.

Kangaroo!

Only it wasn't, as investigation made reasonably plain. What he'd seen in the shadows was a blacktail deer — one of a few that may still haunt the Ten Mile boondocks for all I know.

Mind, I won't go so far as to claim that East Sooke Park is kangarooless. But, lacking proof to the contrary, I remain skeptical. More likely, a couple of bouncing blacktails.

Among life's minor annoyances is the cardboard insert that some magazine publishers insist on smuggling between the pages of their books.

This noxious attempt to foist piggy-back advertising upon the reader creates a nuisance. Only by firm pressure can the magazine be persuaded to stay open where you're reading. Page-turning is made awkward.

My own way of dealing with these inserts is to rip 'em all out and drop them in the nearest wastebasket with hostile thoughts for the advertisers whose messages appear on them.

There are enough impediments to easy reading without adding more . . . a fact that publishers in what may well be the twilight era of the magazines should consider. Why hasten the day when television, the new opiate of us masses, will gobble them entirely?

Question here from a reader who is going to be out of town on vacation when the 1971 census is taken on Tuesday, June 1. What to do about it?

I turned this one over to my girl Friday — and every other day — who did a nine-call secretarial on it.

Here are her gleanings.

If you're going to be out of the city when the census taker cometh, leave the necessary information with one of your neighbors.

Needed are the names and initials of all in your family, and their relationship to the head of the household.

Other questions to be answered:

Do your own your home, is it a single dwelling, and is there an apartment or room rented out in that home?

If you happen to be out of the country, the details listed above may prove sufficient, or the enumerator may leave a form to be filled on your return.

All of which sets me wondering what Canada's population now numbers. The 1966 census put us at 20,014,880. The 1969 estimate was 21,061,000, of whom 182,000 lived in Greater Victoria.

Pretty soon we won't be able to turn around without bumping into each other!

OFF HORNBY ISLAND IN STRAIT

66 Rescued From Blazing Ship

SMOKE streams from crippled cruise ship Meteor as she lies a mile southeast of Hornby Island this morning with a list of about 25 degrees. All 66 passengers were evacuated by lifeboat after fire broke out about 3 a.m. but there is possibility some crewmen are dead. Photo was taken exclusively for the Times by local pilot Roy Parrett.

13 Crewmen Feared Killed

All 66 passengers were reported removed safely from the Norwegian cruise ship Meteor today while the crew fought a stubborn fire which broke out aboard the 300-foot vessel in the Strait of Georgia 100 miles north of Victoria.

Search and rescue officials said the Alaska state ferry Malaspina had picked up 66 passengers and all were accounted for. Officials said the 2,856 ton vessel has a crew of 91.

An injured crewman said that while all passengers apparently are safe there may have been as many as 13 of his fellow crewmen killed by two explosions which preceded the fire.

There was no confirmation of his statement.

The Meteor radioed for help after the fire broke out about 3 a.m. — seven hours before it was due to arrive at Vancouver on a cruise run from Alaska.

Bob Van Rassell, spokesman for Star Bulk Shipping Co. Canada Ltd., the Meteor's agent, said the passengers were booked through Northland Tours of Seattle and most of them were American citizens.

He said the ship was on the first of about 16 summer cruises to Alaska this year. Its last stop before the fire was Petersburg, Alaska.

Passengers were put into lifeboats and the Malaspina, one of several ships answering the distress call, picked them up and took them to Vancouver.

The rescue operation was carried out in calm seas with only a slight breeze.

Most of the Meteor's crew were battling the fire and helicopters from 442 Squadron, Canadian Forces Base Comox, on Vancouver Island, shuttled firefighting equipment to the ship.

The burning vessel was listing about 10 degrees to starboard. It was located off Gillies Bay on Texada Island, on the mainland side of Georgia Strait.

In addition to the Malaspina, the tug Island Prince, the tanker B.C. Standard and two Canadian Coast Guard cutters all responded to the call for help.

"We were about five miles away when we received her distress call and arrived there about half an hour later," said an officer on the Malaspina, which was northbound to Alaska from Seattle.

"We had the passengers and four crew aboard within two hours. They lowered the passengers in their lifeboats, and we lowered ours, and they came aboard that way."

Search and rescue officials said the fire appeared to be confined to forecastle of the Meteor. The ship lost power and steering.

PREMIERS' CONFERENCE

Name of Game Image-Boosting

By BRUCE YEMEN

The extra sense of urgency expected at the constitutional conference here next month won't necessarily reflect a growing fear for the future of Canada.

It may reflect a growing fear on the part of several provincial premiers for their own political fortunes in the months ahead.

Use Public Stage

More than ever before, the premiers will be tempted to use the public stage provided by this constitutional conference to engage in national image-boosting to help them at home.

At least four provinces — Ontario, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Newfoundland — are expecting elections this year.

The pressure to be "political" rather than "statesmanlike" will weigh heavily on premiers Davis, Strom, Thatcher and Smallwood.

But the temptation, which has cast shadows on the bright hopes for the conference, is also being felt by other premiers.

Premier Bourassa of Quebec has already indicated he will try to use the June 14 to 16 conference to show that he is his own man, not a subsidiary of the Trudeau Liberals.

Premier Schreyer of Manitoba has made it clear that his province faces a sharp tax increase next year unless a better financial deal can be made with Ottawa.

B.C.-First Policy

Premier Bennett of British Columbia says he will put forward a B.C.-first policy at the conference, which won't surprise anybody.

The prospect for unusually tough talking all around the conference table is heightened by the continuing economic difficulties in Canada.

The opportunity for provincial premiers to belabor Ottawa for its anti-inflation policies will be too golden to be missed.

A further complication will be provided by the federal budget, expected some time in June, charting the course of tax reform.

If it comes out before the conference, it could create a major diversion from the tasks at hand. But if it doesn't come out before the conference, many premiers will feel hamstrung in discussing basic fiscal matters.

The prospect that politicking could scuttle a tentative agreement on a contitution amending formula has caused gloom in Ottawa.

The formula, requiring six provinces of the 10 to agree on constitutional changes, gives both Quebec and Ontario a veto by virtue of each having more than 25

BOAT SINKS

A United States coast guard helicopter took two survivors to hospital and located the body of a third person following a reported swamping incident in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, the Canadian Forces rescue co-ordination centre said today.

The centre said the Canadian destroyer HMCS Columbia came upon the two survivors on a raft off Sheringham Point, near Sooke, after a gillnetter sank.

The helicopter also took the two survivors to hospital in Port Angeles, Wash.

Next Battle on Home Front In Britain's ECM Hopes

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

PARIS (AP) — The leaders of France and Britain face some fierce opposition at home to their hard-won agreement paving the way for British entry into the European Common Market.

But after demonstrating solid friendship in their two-day summit parley, President Georges Pompidou and Prime Minister Edward Heath were reported confident today they would override domestic criticism of their pledge to work together for a united Western Europe.

Britain's parliament seemed the most likely place for a battle over the understanding reached between the two leaders that included removal of the long-standing French veto against British entry into the Market.

Among Britain's governing Conservative and opposition Labor parties, there are scores of legislators sworn to block their country's entry into the European economic community.

They reason joining the Market would cost Britain much more than it would earn. And if the findings of pollsters are significant, the weight of popular opinion also seems to be against membership.

Opponents also may question Heath's promise to discuss "in a European spirit" Pompidou's demand that the British pound sterling system be adapted to Market aims. This would mean ending the pound's role as an international currency.

Commonwealth and other countries that keep millions of pounds in London banks probably would demand ironclad safeguards against loss through any such changes.

In France, Pompidou may be assailed by followers who remain faithful to the beliefs of the late president Charles de Gaulle. They would argue that there is no new evidence to show Britain has suddenly assumed the European point of view de Gaulle said it lacked.

Quebec Immigration Function Draws Blast From Bennett

Premier Bennett was sharply critical Friday of an agreement allowing the province of Quebec to assign its own officers to Canadian diplomatic posts overseas for immigration purposes.

Expressing "alarm and grave concern" at the recently announced agreement between Ottawa and Quebec, Bennett said in a written statement:

"Immigration is the constitutional responsibility of the Government of Canada. One of the privileges which a resident of Canada has is to move freely throughout the country and to take up residence anywhere he wishes within the country.

SPECIAL STATUS

"That being the case, why should one province — Quebec — have the right to be involved in immigration?" the Premier asked.

"It is special status of the worst kind and I understand the document has all the trappings of a formal treaty between two sovereign states.

"It is an unprecedented action and undermines our federal system which is designed to treat all provinces and the federal government as equal partners."

The agreement gives Quebec the right to set up two-room, two-person offices within federal immigration offices abroad so that the province's advantages can be presented to prospective immigrants by a Quebec orientation officer.

The 10-page entente at one point says:

"The furnishing and equipping of the space allocated to the Quebec party shall be its responsibility, but shall be neither inferior nor superior in quality to the standards established by the government of Canada, taking into account the rank of the occupant."

In the agreement, Ottawa is known as the Federal party and the province as the Quebec party. The protocol is as replete with hereinbefores and hereinafters as international pacts.

Some other points in the agreement:

IT JUST COULDN'T —BUT IT MIGHT!

While the holiday weekend weather in Greater Victoria got away to a glorious start, there are clouds on the horizon.

It will be cloudy with a few sunny periods Sunday with west winds to 20 miles an hour rising in the afternoon.

IRISH TERRORISTS ACTIVE WITH AMBUSH, BOMB, GUNS

BELFAST (AP) — Gunmen ambushed a British army jeep today and shot and seriously wounded the driver on a main highway leading to this Northern Irish capital.

The attack came only hours after another British soldier was slain in the heart of Belfast by terrorists who escaped in the maze of narrow streets in a Roman Catholic district, and in another incident, terrorists bombed a village dance hall, wounding 20 revellers.

The army jeep was fired on by gunmen in a speeding car. Their car was later found blown up six miles away from the attack in Lisburn.
